FDA chose to save face on tainted turkeys

By JOHN STOWELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the U.S. Department of Agriculture found illegal residues of a suspected cancer-causing drug in turkeys last summer, it mistakenly impounded thousands of clean birds while the contaminated meat was processed into turkey rolls and sold to consumers.

But the Food and Drug Administration, rejecting the recommendation of one of its inspectors, decided not to recall the meat or prosecute the turkey grower because those actions might embarrass USDA.

The chain of events was outlined in an internal government memo that surfaced Friday afternoon in a hearing before the Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. The story was flushed out through interviews with officials from FDA and USDA who were knowledgeable about the incident.

The memo, dated July 22, 1975, and signed by Dr. C. D. Van Houweling, director of the FDA's Bureau of Veterinary Medicine, was written after a meeting between the two agencies.

It disclosed that USDA scientists, during routine sampling of turkey flocks, found up to 48 parts of the drug Ipronidazole for each billion parts of turkey tissue in certain birds. Marilyn Perez, special assistant to the director of the FDA's Bureau of Foods, said the disease-fighting drug is presumed to be a carcinogen, or cancer-causing compound, although no long-term studies on that potential danger have ever been conducted.

Scientists can detect illegal residues of the drug in edible tissue down to 2 parts per billion, she said, and levels higher than that would indicate that a turkey grower had violated the law by ignoring the label directions on how long birds should be withdrawn from the medication before they are slaughtered.

Federal law prohibits the use of any cancer-causing drug in animals if detectable levels are found in meat.

The Van Houweling memo said that subsequent discussions with officials of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service "disclosed that initially they had inadvertently obtained the wrong grower name and that the lot of turkeys which they were holding

Jury finds Patty Hearst guilty

Sentencing set for heiress on April 19

By LINDA DEUTSCH

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Patricia Hearst, a kidnaping victim who swore tearfully that she committed crimes only to avoid death, was found guilty of armed bank robbery Saturday by jurors who did not believe her story.

Now a convicted bank robber, the 22-year-old heiress to a vast publishing fortune could be sentenced to a maximum of 35 years in prison.

The minimum sentence could be as little as simple probation. She was impassive as the verdict was read in a hushed courtroom.

"Oh, my God!" gasped Catherine Hearst, who had begged so often for her daughter's return from the terrorist underground and took the witness stand to defend her as a "warm and loving girl."

Miss Hearst's sisters wept openly, but the auburn-haired, pale Miss Hearst remained dry-eyed.

U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter, the white-haired jurist who said at the outset it would be the most widely covered trial in the country, set sentencing for April 19, and pronounced the verdict "well within the evidence."

The jury, rated by both sides as among the most attentive ever seen in a courtroom, had accepted the calm, methodical presentation of U.S. Atty. James L. Browning Jr., who insisted from the start that this was a simple bank robbery trial.

"I think any bank robber is a danger to society ..." he said after the verdict.

Of the Hearst family, Browning said: "I have nothing but sympathy for them. I have children of my own. I think Patricia Hearst can still straighten her life out. I hope she does so."

For the slim, young Miss Hearst the verdict brought the end of one trial but was only the beginning of more legal entanglements as she faces other charges in Los Angeles. She is charged there with kidnaping, assault and robbery, a combination that could bring her a life sentence if she were found guilty.

Miss Hearst was to spend Saturday night at San Mateo County Jail, where she has been kept since her arrest in a San Francisco hideout apartment six months ago. It was not immediately known how soon she would be taken to Los Angeles for arraignment.

Bailey had said earlier that with acquittal here, it would be easy to win a reduction of the $500,000 bail on the state charges. But her conviction raised doubts whether the bail would be lowered.

Browning said Miss Hearst would not be turned over to the authorities in Los Angeles until after her sentencing, and perhaps not even then. The state charges stem from a shooting incident one month after the bank robbery while Miss Hearst was in the company of Symbionese Liberation Army soldiers William and Emily Harris.

The jury's verdict was read at 1:30 p.m. in a locked courtroom. The case went to the panel Friday, eight weeks after the trial began, and the decision was arrived at with stunning swiftness.

With their verdict, the jurors accepted the theory posed by many government witnesses that Miss Hearst was a willing and eager bank robber, "a rebel in search of a cause", who identified fully with

TRIAL ENDS WITH BANG

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An explosion set off by bomb squad investigators to blast open a suspicious briefcase Saturday rocked a hallway near the courtroom where Patricia Hearst was found guilty of bank robbery only 90 minutes earlier.

No explosives were found in the briefcase, which a Federal Protective Service guard said contained some news reels and papers. There were no injuries reported.

The small explosion on the 19th floor of the city's federal building took place about 25 feet from the courtroom where Miss Hearst's trial came to an end with a guilty verdict.

SORRY FOR HER KIN—BROWNING

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The guilty verdict returned against Patricia Hearst was "entirely proper, and I'm very pleased with it," her prosecutor said Saturday.

U.S. Atty. James L. Browning Jr. said the verdict shows "that our criminal justice system works well."

Browning praised his courtroom opponent, F. Lee Bailey, for providing a "fine defense," and he thanked his own staff.

Browning said he was not surprised that the jury handed down its decision in only 12 hours. "I believed the jury would return a guilty verdict, but it could have gone either way," he said.

Browning said at a news conference he did not believe the trial had been a political one. "I see it as a bank robbery trial," he said.

BAILEY: PATTY DISAPPOINTED

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst's defense attorney said Saturday the newspaper heiress had "wondered if she ever had a chance" at acquittal.

F. Lee Bailey sat puffing on a cigarette as he faced reporters with fellow defense lawyer Albert Johnson following Miss Hearst's conviction on a federal bank robbery charge.

"She was quite disappointed," Bailey said. "She wondered if she ever had a chance ... I'm surprised at the combination of a quick verdict and a guilty verdict."

Asked if there was anything he would have done differently, Bailey said, "I can't think of anything offhand. Both (U.S. Atty. James L.) Browning and I went all out."

He said Miss Hearst was hurt most by some of the judge's rulings to allow admission of certain documents and testimony about her "missing year," especially the time spent in Sacramento during the last year of her 19 months underground.

Chel bill for doctors best hope

Other liability plans hung up

By MOLLY BURRELL
Staff Writer

Assemblyman Fred Chel, D-Long Beach, is girding for a fight in Sacramento starting Thursday over a bill whose thrust is cooperative effort to answer the medical malpractice insurance dilemma.

And if there is to be any legislative answer this year, observers feel, his is the only one that has a fighting chance. It contains an urgency clause: If passed, it would go into effect as soon as the governor signs it.

Two other medical malpractice bills appear to be stalled in committee and—unless drastically amended—without hope of passage this session.

Chel's AB 2780 would create the authority for doctors to form cooperatives and raise a defense fund to hire legal counsel to defend them, fight nuisance suits, settle well-founded claims, pay court judgments. It also provides for careful selection, screening and discipline of members.

It is a new approach to the malpractice problem, but it is an old principle: agricultural cooperatives have existed in this state and throughout the nation for a century and the co-op movement had thriving colonies in Eastern United States before the turn of the century. Consumer cooperatives are active in many cities today and the national cooperative movement headquarters is in Chicago.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.'s malpractice crisis solution, the Berman bill (calling for mandatory service to the needy and reduced but escalating insurance premiums) is stalled in committee hearings. The doctors' preference, the Song bill (no mandatory service, reduced premiums, and a state fund to pay judgments when the insurance fund runs out) is stalled, period.

By contrast, Chel's bill sailed through committee 11-3 Wednesday.

"But not without a heck of a fight," he admits.

And the struggle to get it through the Assembly, through Senate committee and onto the Senate floor will be another heavy one, Chel says.

Chel has the 41 votes necessary for a majority vote. The measure also has the support of the California and Los Angeles County Medical Associations, the president of the Long Beach Medical Association, and the Cooperative American

Ford says Reagan could divide GOP

By HOWARD BENEDICT

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — President Ford said Saturday he does not care whether Ronald Reagan withdraws from the Republican presidential race because he foresees no forces that can stop him from winning the GOP nomination.

But, he added again that Reagan's continued candidacy could have a divisive effect on the party.

The President also denied that he had personally suggested or authorized anyone on his staff to "suggest to my opponent that he ought to get out of the race."

Ford predicted yet another primary victory over Reagan in Tuesday's North Carolina contest, a win he said will catapult him on to the nomination at the Republican convention in August.

Backers of Ford hope that a victory in North Carolina will deliver a knockout blow to the aspirations of the former California governor.

"I think we have the momentum on our own to win the nomination and I have no apprehension that it will be stopped by any forces that I see at all," said Ford.

Later, Ford received an enthusiastic reception from an overflow crowd of 13,500 at an Asheville shopping mall when he attacked the spending habits of the Democratic-controlled Congress.

"With your help and support I'll stay in the saddle four more years and while there I'll be riding herd on that Congress to do things right for a change."

As Ford tried to leave Asheville for Spruce Pine, his helicopter was turned back by heavy rain and fog

Canal Zone employes end 'sickout'

BALBOA, Canal Zone (AP)—Panama Canal employes agreed to end a 'sickout' Saturday afternoon after the Canal Zone governor agreed to modify wage freezes and work toward some form of collective bargaining.

Gov. Harold R. Parfitt said pilots and tugboat operators who had been calling in sick would return to work immediately to begin moving a backlog of more than 175 ships through the 50-mile canal.

The illegal job action began Monday and all but paralyzed the canal, reducing traffic from an average of [illegible] ships a day to no more than five or six.

Ships were reported waiting at anchor as much as 10 miles from the Atlantic and Pacific ends of the canal and another 37 vessels were expected to arrive within 24 hours, officials said.

"I think we will be back in full operation by nightfall," Parfitt said. [illegible] "We plan to put 37 ships in the canal Sunday and have the backlog cleared up and be back in normal operation within three to four weeks."

Parfitt said he had agreed to modify wage freezes scheduled as part of a plan to reduce a $14-million operating deficit and to study a way to establish mutually acceptable forms of collective bargaining with all employes of the government-owned Panama Canal Co. and the Canal Zone government.

Patty's stunned family goes into seclusion

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The guilty verdict against Patricia Hearst Saturday hit her family and sympathizers with numbing grief, while others whose lives she had touched took grim satisfaction at the outcome of her bank-robbery trial.

Elsewhere, authorities speculated on future legal action in the wide-ranging case, including additional charges against Miss Hearst and others linked with her as a kidnap victim turned criminal.

As the verdict was read in the federal courtroom, Miss Hearst's youngest sister, Ann, seated next to her parents in the front row of spectators seats, clasped a hand to her forehead and wept.

Randolph Hearst, the defendant's father, appeared frozen with shock. He furrowed his brow and [illegible].

Her brother-in-law, Jay Bosworth, put a comforting arm around her and placed his other arm on the shoulder of his wife, Gina, Miss Hearst's eldest sister, who sat in stunned silence.

The Hearst family later went into seclusion and had no immediate comment on the verdict.

F. Lee Bailey, Miss Hearst's defense attorney, said the newspaper heiress had all along "wondered if she ever had a chance" at acquittal. He also said the verdict would be appealed.

Puffing a cigarette as he faced reporters after the conviction, Bailey also said he was "surprised at the combination of a quick verdict and a guilty verdict."

Jailers donate to bury town drunk

Combined News Servics

For the last 20 years, Homer Hill's mailing address was the Fort Lauderdale, Fla., jail, where he was taken after more than 400 arrests for public intoxication.

The 81-year-old man died last week, and the only friends he had — his jailers — decided they couldn't let him have a pauper's funeral.

"Homer has carved his own corner in the jail, and we just feel he deserves a decent burial," said Sgt. John Deaton, who organized a collection that has netted more than $500. "He was the first drunk I ever arrested when I came onto the department 13 years ago. He had been around here so long, he had interwoven himself into the hearts of all the policemen and we wanted to do something for him."

Deaton said that when a new city jail was built about 18 years ago, "They turned him out of the old jail and told him to walk down to the new one and pick out any cell he liked." He said police and other officials exhausted every possibility in an attempt at finding any of Hill's relatives.

Novelist Cloete dies

Stuart Cloete, whose novels dealing with interracial love were banned in South Africa, has died in a Cape Town, South Africa, hospital. He was 78 and had written more than 20 novels and many short stories.

Cloete, who died Friday night, had been in a hospital for nearly a week. The caue of his death was not given.

Cloete was a member of the British Coldstream Guards and farmed in South Africa before turning to writing. At 40, Cloete produced his first novel, "Turning Wheels," a Book-of-the-Month club choice in the U.S. and Britain.

The book sold more than two million copies, was translated into 14 languages and launched his career as a writer. Like four of his subsequent books, it included themes of interracial love affairs and his own religious disillusionment.

The separation of Margaret and Lord Snowdon was announced in a terse statement Friday from the princess' home, Kensington Palace. The statement said there were no plans for a divorce.

Concert canceled

French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing on Saturday was forced to cancel a gala opera performance to which he had invited 1,500 people because stage hands at the Paris Opera House went on strike.

Giscard d'Estaing had said he wanted to change the tradition of glittering society opera galas. He invited 1,500 people from around the nation who "particularly distinguished themselves in various spheres of activity" to see Mozart's "Il Seraglio."

Announcing cancellation of the event, a presidential spokesman said Giscard d'Estaing "refused to bow to such pressure" from the strikers "or to offer a show unworthy of the leading theater of France" and "offered his excuses to his guests who have been informed individually."

Fraud suggested in minister's request for U.S. campaign aid

By DICK BARNES

WASHINGTON (AP) — A minister seeking $100,000 in federal funds for his presidential campaign submitted records listing contributors who never heard of him, bills from an apparently nonexistent printing firm and other suspect data.

The Rev. Donald L. Jackson of Buffalo, N.Y., filed the material with the Federal Election Commission this month. The FEC has certified more than $11 million this year to 11 presidential primary candidates.

Commission staff members are making preliminary checks before starting the detailed audit which is routine before a candidate can be certified for matching funds.

To qualify for the money, a candidate must raise $5,000 in individual contributions of $250 or less in each of 20 states — a total of $100,000.

The only nonpolitician to qualify so far is Ellen McCormack, an antiabortion candidate who has run in several primaries and so far gained one delegate to the Democratic National Convention.

Jackson's filing first aroused suspicion among persons who examined it because virtually all of the contributions were for exactly $250, because totals listed for a number of the states were exactly $5,300, and because contributions from any one state were generally all received the same day.

REV. JACKSON
Under Suspicion

The Associated Press checked a series of listed contributors in New Jersey.

Edward P. Olszewski of 117 Talmadge Ave., Bound Brook, was listed for a $250 donation Feb. 24. Mrs. Albert F. Olszewski of 115 Talmadge Ave. said there was no Edward in her family, that no one in the house had donated to Jackson, and that the house at 117 Talmadge had burned down last year.

Paul Chester of 254 Penn Ave., Nixon, N.J., was also listed for $250 on Feb. 24. Mrs. Paul Chester of 250 Penn Ave. said "we haven't contributed and I don't know of any other Chesters." She said there was no 254 Penn Ave.

Audry Kiamme of 108 Retford Ave., Cranford, N.J., was listed for another $250 on Feb. 24. David Kiamie of 208 Retford Ave. said there was no other family by that name in the vicinity and "no money like that for contributions in this house."

Responses were similar from others as the pattern of slightly varied names and addresses continued.

Virtually every donor's occupation was listed simply as "worker." One man contacted on a basis of the list told a reporter no one in his household had been able to find work for a year.

Federal law requires specific occupations and business address of contributors to be listed.

In a letter to the FEC, Jackson said "many of these donations from members of the John Birch Society, who do not like people to know their name."

Jackson's report claimed he raised $110,931 during February and spent $111,640.

His asserted expenditures included $65,000 for mailing 500,000 letters. A postal official in Buffalo said it could not be determined whether or not such a first-class mailing had taken place.

Jackson also listed $32,642 in printing bills from "J" Publishing Co., 494 Masten Ave., Buffalo.

That address is a long-vacant house in a deteriorating neighborhood, according to a city directory and the Buffalo police.

No such business registered its name as required either with the Erie County court clerk or the sales tax collection office of the State of New York.

Attempts to reach Jackson at a telephone number listed on his campaign literature failed.

The new federal election law makes it unlawful to furnish any false, fictitious or fraudulent evidence, books or information to the Federal Election Commission in connection with matching fund payments. The maximum penalty is a $10,000 fine and five years in prison.

Violations of other reporting requirements are punishable by a fine of up to $1,000 or up to one year imprisonment.

Jackson had earlier appeared in Washington to announce his candidacy.

In his literature he describes himself as 49, a registered Democrat and "a poor Black American, who will have much to say for the poor and the unemployed."

He claims a correspondence school law degree but in his platform says "there are too many lawyers in government."

Listing his experience, he said he "was president of Jackson Educational Foundation, president of two real estate corp. Operated a radio station briefly. Can type 60 words per minute."

Kissinger depicted as irritable, contentious

Book bares secret Israel talks

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — An Israeli journalist in a revised manuscript after his first draft was banned by Israeli censors, has published an attack on Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's Middle East diplomacy that he says is based largely on secret Israeli government records of the negotiations.

The book, "The Secret Conversations of Henry Kissinger" by Matti Golan, contains no major substantive surprises. But it does provide what appears to be revelations about some of Kissinger's more candid, often contentious sessions with Israeli leaders. Golan does not reveal the source of the "leaks."

Kissinger is often cited making frank, sometimes uncomplimentary comments about other world figures.

In this book the snatches of published conversations seem designed to show Kissinger in a light that would not find favor with Israelis or Israeli sympathizers: He is seen as pressuring the Israelis constantly, taking the Arab position more often than not, and repeatedly losing his temper at the Israelis.

Kissinger, according to other Israeli sources, had protested on several occassions about the apparent "leak" to Golan of sections from the Israeli stenographic transcripts of his meetings.

When asked for comment on the book, published by Quadrangle, The New York Times Book Co., a State Department spokesman said that "Mr. Kissinger has not read the entire book; he does not intend to read it."

"He has seen excerpts here and there," the spokesman said. "From what he has seen, it is by and large a collection of lies, distortions and material so taken out of context as to amount to lies."

The spokesman declined to be specific.

Originally, Golan, a diplomatic correspondent for Haaretz, an Israeli morning paper, included sections of verbatim transcripts from Kissinger's conversations in the book.

The manuscript was banned by Israeli censors in May 1975. Golan says, becuse it was based on secret and top secret information. It caused Premier Yitzhak Rabin to call a cabinet meeting to investigate the source of the leaks.

In that meeting, according to Golan, Rabin said that if the book was published, Kissinger would have to resign and Israeli relations with the U.S. would be severely damaged.

Golan said he had rewritten the book, apparently deleting some of the verbatim text and paraphrasing other sections. It was approved by the censors last July.

Kissinger has reportedly expressed his irritation to Israeli officials over permission for the book to be published since its intent, he contended, was to discredit him.

Prankster ruins fund drive to pay for baby's surgery

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Latin Americans in New Orleans are again trying to raise money to pay for open heart surgery for a 21-month-old El Salvador blue baby. A prankster destroyed their first drive.

Mario Osorio, consul general of El Salvador, and radio station KGLA of suburban Marrero, a Spanish language broadcaster, were on their way to collecting the more than $5,000 they need for Ericka's hospitalization. Spanish speaking New Orleanians were sending in checks, some as large as $40.

Then, on Friday, March 12, the day Ericka underwent a four-hour open-heart operation, the telephone rang in the midst of a fund-raising broadcast. The man identified himself as the head of the international department of a downtown bank.

"Don't worry about donations for the little baby," the caller said. "The bank has decided to take care of everything."

So, the station and Osorio called off the broadcasts, advised listeners not to send money and returned some checks they had gotten.

It was too late to telephone the bank, which was closed over the weekend. Osorio had to fly to San Salvador on Saturday because of illness in his family. He returned Tuesday night and telephoned the bank Wednesday morning to express his gratitude. The bank had never heard of Ericka or the fund drive.

"I just don't see how anyone could do that," said Osorio. "It's terrible."

Ericka's parents, Jose Rolando Cuadra, 2?, and Juana Francisca, 2?, had despaired at the $7,000 price tag of the open heart surgery. The father is an auto mechanic and the mother a nurse's aid. [illegible] $200 a month.

A team of three surgeons closed a hole in the lower chamber of Ericka's heart and provided a means for blood to get from the heart to the lungs. The surgery has been judged successful, and Ericka may fly home next Monday or Tuesday.

But, at the weekend, her hospital bill was $4,800 and going up.

"We are beginning again," said Osorio.

Top brass to handle trial in ship collision

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The Navy's top legal brass is being brought to Norfolk for the courts-martial of the skipper and deck officer of the cruiser Belknap, which collided last year with a carrier off the coast of Sicily.

The collision involving the Belknap and the carrier John F. Kennedy left eight sailors dead and 47 injured. Capt. Walter R. Shafer, a veteran of four seagoing commands including the Belknap, already has received a letter of reprimand.

In addition, the 47-year-old Virginia Beach father of four is charged with dereliction of duty, causing the loss of military property through neglect, violating Navy regulations and placing a vessel in a hazardous situation.

Charged with Shafer in the collisions is Lt. (j.g.) Kenneth M. Knull, 26, of New London, Conn. Knull, as the Belknap's deck officer, was in virtual control of the ship when the collision occurred.

He will be tried separately on charges of violating the orders of Shafer, violating Navy regulations and permitting the collision through neglect. The Navy dropped a more serious charge of involuntary manslaughter.

The two Norfolk-based warships collided last Nov. 22 while the Belknap was trying to maneuver into a position behind the carrier.

Grand Jury to report on aliens getting welfare

By ROBERT GORE
Staff Writer

The number of aliens—legal and illegal—on welfare rolls has become the target of a County Grand Jury probe due for release this week, the Independent, Press-Telegram has learned.

Interviews with high-ranking officials of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) and County Department of Public Social Services (DPSS) disclosed that crackdown efforts, a likely area of concern to the jury, have been plagued by a series of communication problems and weak links in the operations remain.

The grand juror in charge of the report, Mrs. Edith Bogen, declined to elaborate on the contents of the document other than to say that her committee felt it to be "very important."

She expects the report, which will contain testimony from county, state and federal officials, to be released this week in spite of the fact that Grand Jury reports are traditionally held until near the end of the jury's term in June.

RECOMMENDATIONS will focus "on the whole picture of aliens, but primarily on illegal aliens" who are involved with the welfare system, she said.

DPSS spokesmen admitted that they have no exact count of either legal or illegal aliens on welfare because legal aliens are eligible the same as citizens, and no separate figures are kept.

The number of illegal aliens was set at less than one-half of one per cent of the 952,000 on the welfare roles (as of December) by the DPSS, but no specific study was cited to support the figure.

"It adds insult to injury," said one INS official, who asked to remain anonymous, "when you consider they (aliens) are here illegally and they're getting food stamps, free medical care at county hospitals and cash awards."

"The alien situation is out of control," he added.

"We have got to cut out the profit motive and force them (Mexican nationals) to go back home," he said. "They're a drain on the taxpayer."

ALTHOUGH DPSS and INS officials minimized the problem of aliens on welfare, both agencies said that, as recently as November, there was a crisis in processing applications of aliens applying for public assistance.

An alien seeking aid first applies to the DPSS. If the person presents a valid green (alien registration) card, the application is approved. If there is no identification, INS is asked to verify that the alien is in the U.S. legally.

Here is where there have been major problems, both federal and county officers acknowledge. Until November, the INS lagged in excess of 30,000 applications behind the DPSS, and aliens—legal or illegal—receive benefits while they are waiting to be cleared by the INS.

An additional problem is posed by the state Welfare and Institutions Code restrictions, which prohibit the DPSS from telling the INS of aliens who begin to fill out aid forms and then leave when they are told they will be investigated, according to Fox.

FOX said approximately 100 aliens a month leave DPSS offices when they are asked for identification.

A green card, which has actually been blue since 1965, is also known as Immigration Form I-151. About 1.1 million legal resident aliens have the cards and live and work in Southern California, according to INS statistics.

About 12,000 illegals are deported annually from the county, but over 1.3 million are estimated to be in the area illegally, the INS says.

The total aid bill for the 952,000 welfare recipients is $60.2 million per month from federal, state and county taxpayers' funds, the DPSS said.

The average person on general relief collects $146 per month and an average family group of a mother and three children receives $88 each per month, the DPSS noted.

INS District Director Joseph Sureck explained that his office formerly had to check the eligibility of all aliens who applied rather than just those who do not present valid identification, as is now the case.

DPSS also has supplied two workers to help in clearing applications, he said.

Where the INS used to get 3,000 aid applications to check per month from the DPSS, the amount has dropped to 500 monthly at the most, he said.

The large initial backlog was eliminated by simply sending all of the 30,000 applications where identification was presented back to the DPSS, Sureck said.

"We are still experiencing a backlog of applications," said DPSS Research Director David Fox, "but the situation has significantly improved."

The INS now calls the alien who has failed to present a valid green card in for an interview. If the person does not show, is uncooperative or is definitely found to have entered the U.S. illegally, the INS notifies the DPSS.

"AND I assume they (the DPSS) cut off the benefits," said Sureck. This was verified by the DPSS.

Although welfare case workers "are not specifically trained to recognize forged documents," Fox said that of 18,000 applications he helped to clear in the first half of 1975, no forged green cards were found.

Several case workers contacted by the Independent, Press-Telegram doubted their expertise in spotting the cards.

One pointed out that the DPSS could supply cheap black lights which would provide quick checks of green cards. Under the special light, an eagle that is printed on the back would show up, he said.

Sureck said that the INS is willing to supply the DPSS with special booklets on recognizing forged green cards.

A DPSS spokesman said that "past experience has shown that over 90 per cent of all green cards are valid. The case worker uses his very best judgment, but maybe people are forging green cards—we haven't heard anything, though."

"We do not see it (illegal aliens on welfare) as a major problem, but it is an issue we have to confront and deal with," Fox said.

Co-op plan best hope for malpractice cure

FRED CHEL
Sees Tough Battle

Physicians (400 members based in Los Angeles.) But he expects to have quite a hustle rounding up the 13 additional votes needed for the required two-thirds majority of 54 votes to pass the Assembly as a urgency measure.

Why?

Mainly because the state insurance commissioner objects to a concept that is not insurance and would not come within his province, Chel explained. He voiced these objections at committee hearings and is expected to do the same when the bill comes to the assembly floor.

"Wesley Kinder, (the commissioner) came from the insurance industry and has a certain blindness," Chel says. "The insurance industry is uneasy about medical malpractice; it was dragged in by the heels and whatever happens might set precedent for other fields."

Also, there has been some opposition from the state corporations commissioner who wants control over disclosure and "investment" aspects. This despite the fact that the defense fund could not be classed as an investment and AB 2780 has already been amended to make detailed disclosures mandatory on the first page of the incorporation agreement, Chel says.

"I'm trying to avoid bureaucratic oversee if at all possible and to place control in the hands of the licensed physicians whose cooperative it is."

He thinks his bill will work and be a viable partial solution for the whole malpractice crisis until there are other measures, including tort reform.

He thinks it will work because it embodies answers to a number of the important issues: doctors policing their own profession, no allotment of state funds, fighting the nuisance claims rather than settling in order to avoid court costs.

The bill incorporates these factors:

—Careful screening of co-op fund members, which malpractice insurance carriers don't do.

—Quick and intensive peer review and the right to discipline members by several methods: prohibiting them from performing any of the procedures that have led to the claim against them, prohibiting them doing the procedure unless a fellow co-op member assists, and ejection from membership.

—Review of all claims by a peer committee of three to five members which decides if they are well founded and may then offer a reasonable settlement.

—No settlement unless the peer committee agrees to it; otherwise the claim will be fought in court. Insurance companies can and do agree to settle without consulting the insured, thus leading to quick settlement of the so-called "nuisance claims" which comprise perhaps 75 per cent of all those filed, Chel says.)

The bill's premise is an all-for-one, one-for-all operation: when a member is sued and a judgment rendered, the cost of the judgment is born equally by all members. Thus there is the impetus to enforce screening and peer review to weed out members who are liable, Chel explains.

With the refusal to settle any claims except those approved by the peer review committee, Chel says, it will be quite clear that no co-op member is a sitting duck for a quick settlement. And by settling the well founded claims, the co-op will be saving costs of defense in court actions.

The bill amends sections of the corporations and insurance codes to allow groups of doctors not in partnership to form their own malpractice defense fund cooperative. (Existing law permits a physician or a group within a corporation or partnership to self-insure.) Other provisions of the bill: a minimum initial contribution of $5,000 per member and provision of $100,000 minimum umbrella coverage; no investment of funds without authorization of the coop board.

The more doctors in the coop, the bigger the fund. But regardless of the amount of up front money, the members are responsible for pro rata shares of settlements.

AB 2780 had its genesis last September when a group of orthopedic physicians, concerned about the developing crisis, came to Chel and asked about setting up their own collective trust account to insure themselves or establish a defense fund. He asked the legislative counsel's opinion, made his own studies and then started drafting his bill.

Saturday, Dr. William Hyman, president of the Long Beach Medical Association, publicly wished him luck. "It's an excellent bill. I hope it passes," he said. "Although I might not join such a co-op, the United Physicians of California think its fine and most doctors I know would be in favor of this option," he said.

More endorsement came from Dr. George Evashwick, Long Beach member of the Cooperative American Physicians and one of the original exponents of defense funds. Said he: "This is the only bill that doesn't ask anything from the state or anyone else.

"CAP has over [illegible] members now and a list of [illegible] as soon as this bill is law. It's the best answer we have," he added.

Wreckers still at work on Hubbard Bldg.

The 11-story building at 310 W. Broadway is the only structure left to be demolished in the city's new City Hall Main Library-Art Museum superblock.

Environmentalist Peter Devereaux has filed a suit against the city seeking to halt demolition of the Hubbard Building on grounds that it could provide housing near the ocean for low and middle income people.

He earlier won a temporary restraining order against the city, preventing municipal officials from demolishing the building. However, when the order was issued, the structure already had been handed over to the contractor for demolition.

Devereaux's effort to obtain a restraining order against the contractor, Roger Roy Land Clearing Co. Inc. of Chatsworth, was denied Friday by Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Norman Dowds.

Officials of the contracting firm could not be reached for comment but workers could conceivably continue demolition of the building with a wrecking ball since the company has not been ordered by the court to stop.

Ford fears divisiveness by Reagan

At Spruce Pine only 1,000 persons were waiting although there had been 8,000 a few hours earlier before the rain drove most of the crowd to seek shelter.

The President watched a performance of the Avery High Mountain Cloggers, a folk dance group. Then he was taken on a two-hour drive to Hickory, where 4,500 persons had waited three hours in the Lenoir Rhyne College gymnasium for his arrival. It was his last stop before returning to Washington.

Campaign '76

As the first president to visit Hickory since Calvin Coolidge passed through in an automobile in the 1920s, Ford received a rousing reception.

In a question-and-answer session, Ford made these points:

—The U.S. is doing everything it can to learn the status of Americans missing in action in Indochina, but "the problem is a difficult one because we're quite frankly dealing with international pirates."

—He certainly will consider a woman when he makes his choice for a vice presidential running mate if he wins the Republican nomination.

—The Soviet Union and Cuba would not be in Angola today if Congress had approved his administration's request for $28 million in aid for two Western-backed factions in that African country.

Democrats were meeting Saturday in congressional district conventions in Oklahoma, meanwhile, to choose 28 of the state's 37 delegates to the national convention. The other nine delegates are to be chosen at the state conveition April 4.

In Florida, state Democratic officials parceled out the state's 81 national convention delegates Saturday, but supporters of Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington protested the division.

Applying the party's complex delegate selection formula to the certified returns from the March 9 primary, the party's rules committee gave former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter 34 delegates, Alabama Gov. George Wallace 26 and Jackson 21.

The protest came in the 6th Congressional District, where Jackson supporters claimed Carter received one more delegate than be should have. The dispute centered over the rounding off of figures made necesary by a new national party prohibition against fractional delegates.

Ford made his statements at a Charlotte airport news conference as he began a one-day campaign swing through the state.

Asked about efforts by various Republican mayors, governors and other officials to encourage Reagan to quit the race in the interest of party harmony, Ford replied: "I really don't care if he gets out. Our campaign is predicated on going to the convention in Kansas City and getting the nomination, and that is a forerunner of victory in November."

He said Reagan's candidacy potentially could have a divisive effect on the party, repeating a statement he initially made in an interview Friday.

North Carolina Gov. James E. Holshouser Jr., Ford's regional campaign coordinator and one of those who urged Reagan to quit, was more emphatic as he waited for the President to arrive in Charlotte.

He said Reagan's refusal to step down has put the Republican Party "right on the edge of divisiveness."

Holshouser said he hopes "that after Mr. Ford wins on Tuesday, Reagan will give it a good look."

Reagan, also campaigning in North Carolina on Saturday, said Friday he will not abandon the campaign and accused the White House of engineering the efforts to have him quit.

In a speech before a GOP breakfast at Charlotte, the President said his policies have put the nation on the road to recovery from its worst recession in 40 years. "Things are really looking up for the United States of America and we should be proud of that," he said.

He noted the consumer price index rose only one-tenth of 1 per cent in February, the lowest monthly rise in four years, and added: "This new announcement is powerful evidence that we're getting inflation under control."

Wallace, Reagan awaiting crucial N.C. primary vote

By ROBERT B. CULLEN

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP) — Tuesday's North Carolina primary could be the last chance for George Wallace and Ronald Reagan to prove they can be winning presidential candidates.

North Carolina is a state both once said they expected to win. It is a state with more favorable factors for them than any they will encounter in the next month of primaries.

Wallace has a long history of popular support here. He easily carried North Carolina in 1972. He put heavy emphasis on the busing issue to defeat favorite son Terry Sanford and Rep. Shirley Chisholm, the black congresswoman from New York. Wallace got 50.2 per cent of the vote.

THIS YEAR, Wallace says he realizes that the busing issue has cooled off in North Carolina since 1972. "People have gotten ued to it," he said last week.

Nonetheless, Wallace must win in the South to prove that he, and not former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, represents the popular will of the Democratic party's Southern wing.

A number of breaks, combined with the triumphs he fashioned in New Hampshire, Florida and Illinois, have pushed Carter into the favorite's role here.

The first break came when Sanford withdrew in January.

CARTERWashington Sen. Henry Jackson, Arizona Rep. Morris Udall and former Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma all entered the primary. But Udall and Harris decided not to campaign. Jackson got an organization started and made two appearances. Then he quit the state.

His campaign manager said Jackson was going to finish third no matter how hard he tried and he might as well spend his time and money in Pennsylvania and New York.

Wallace tacitly acknowledged the importance of the state to him by making some major changes in his campaign tactics upon arriving here from Illinois.

HE ATTACKED Carter personally as a "warmed-over McGovern," referring to the 1972 Democratic presidential nominee, Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota.

Wallace tried to confront the doubts about his physical ability by telling his audiences that his health was good. He also budgeted $135,000 for advertising, enough to saturate the state in the final week of the campaign.

Carter's state organization has swollen with each primary victory. He confidently predicted he will win the primary, and some of his aides have speculated that a decisive win might effectively end Wallace's candidacy.

WALLACE has vowed to go on regardless of how well he does. "Nothing is do or die. I have no intention of getting out of the primaries," he said last week.

Reagan has had to answer similar questions following his five straight primary losses to President Ford.

The Ford-Reagan race has accentuated the split in the state's Republican organization. One group, led by Gov. James E. Holshouser, supports Ford. The other, led by Sen. Jesse Helms, R.-N. C., backs Reagan.

The even division of strength between the two factions was last shown in the 1972 gubernatorial primary when Holshouser defeated James Gardner by less than 2,000 votes in a race widely viewed as a precursor of this primary.

SEVERAL months ago, Reagan was confidently pictured as ahead by Helms and state campaign manager Tom Ellis. But since his losses elsewhere, they have said only that "he could win."

They have also tossed aside Reagan's "11th commandment" of not attacking a fellow Republican. During the past 10 days Ellis has called almost daily news conferences to hurl one charge after another at Holshouser and the rest of the Ford organization.

Ellis has also begun to draw the racial issue into the campaign. He circulated a radio tape which erroneously stated that Ford "told an NAACP group in Massachusetts that Sen. (Edward) Brooke (R-Mass.) would be his running mate."

Ellis also has printed flyers reproducing newspaper articles about Holshouser's support of Soul City, a black new-town project which Helms has criticized for misuse of federal funds.

The town's principal developer, Floyd McKissick, is a former director of the Congress of Racial Equality and a registered Republican.

Ford has confined his efforts to a pair of weekend trips into the state. On one, he arrived a few hours after the Department of the Interior announced a decision to include a portion of the state's New River in the national Wild and Scenic River system, saving it from impoundment by a proposed hydroelectric project in Virginia.

Last month Barbara Simpson, a member of the state Utilities Commission, was appointed by Ford to the Federal Power Commission.

The President was to make his second campaign appearance Saturday with stops in Charlotte, Asheville, Spruce Pine and Hickory.

O'Neill declares Ford blocking vote reform

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The House majority leader accused President Ford Saturday of blocking campaign reform legislation now that he seems assured of the Republican nomination for President and his need for federal primary subsidies "no longer exists."

Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., warned the President that if he vetoed the election bill in the form that is expected to reach the House floor next week, "the strong likelihood exists that there will be no further legislation and therefore no public financing for the rest of the campaign."

ONLY Friday, Ford accused Congress of "retreating from its commitment to clean and fair elections" and repeated his threat to veto any campaign bill that went beyond a simple extension of the major powers of the Federal Election Commission, now scheduled to lapse on Monday.

Chief among the functions the commission will lose, under a January Supreme Court ruling, is the authority to make subsidy payments to national parties for their conventions and to presidential candidates of both parties to help finance their primary campaigns.

IF DEMOCRATIC congressional leaders should carry out O'Neill's counterthreat to let the commission lapse permanently, neither of the major party candidates for president would be able to collect the $20.2 million in federal funds to which each would be entitled for the general election campaign.

In that event, both parties would be dependent on private contributions as they have in the past. This would almost certainly give President Ford a substantial financial advantage over the Democratic nominee, precisely the ind of advantage the new campaign law was designed to eliminate.

O'Neill said in his statement that Ford "now that he seems to have effectively eliminated the challenge to his Party's nomination is assured of the same kind of outpouring of money from the business and corporate community that fattened the coffers of his predecessor."

The Democratic campaign bill, scheduled for final Senate action early this week and House debate beginning Wednesday, includes two provisions that O'Neill and other Democrats regard as essential to prevent "big business" from getting "a virtual blank check" to support Ford and other Republicans.

ONE provision involved limiting a corporation, conglomerate or international labor union to a single political action committee, rather than one for each subsidiary or state or local component. These committees collect voluntary contributions from stockholders and members and divide the proceeds among political candidates favored by the committee.

The second major goal of the Democratic bill is to reverse a 1975 commission decision that permitted corporate political action committees to solicit contributions from all their employes, rather than from stockholders and executives only.

HHH sees Demo win

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., predicted on Saturday that Democrats would capture the White House next November because most Americans want a strong central government.

"Victory will only be ours if we offer sensible alternatives to a morally bankrupt Republican administration," he said in a speech prepared for the Young Democrats of Virginia.

"We will not win because we are against the government we want to run, but because we are for government which cares about people. We will win because we dare to pioneer."

Humphrey said that despite a decline in public confidence in government institutions, "the American people will not tolerate timid national leadership."

Copter crash fatally injures Marine pilot

PHILADELPHIA (AP)— A Marine pilot and Vietnam War veteran, Capt. James Motisi, 31, died Saturday, 17 hours after his helicopter crash-landed in a wooded area near Willow Grove Air Station north of here.

Motisi, 31, of Franklin Hill Lakes, N.J., was an 11-year veteran of the Marine Corps Reserve. He served in Vietnam from August 1969 to July 1970, an air base spokesman said.

Two other Marine reservists were injured in the incident.

Motisi was co-pilot of the aircraft, which was on a routine training mission when it crashed Friday night.

Deli looted after child opens door

Associated Press

Approximately 30 persons looted a dairy and delicatessen early Saturday after two adults slipped a small child into the store to open the front door, police said.

Officers took all of them into custody and 10 were expected to be booked.

Police said two adults pried a side door of the delicatessen in the Rampart area of Los Angeles partly open, and sent in the child to open the front door.

The two took several items from the store, hailed a passing taxi and went to a house, where they called friends and told them the store was open, said Police Sgt. James Laker.

The store was looted of about $5,000 in merchandise, including 80 cases of beer and 60 gallons of milk, Laker said.

Officers located the two adults who broke into the store by tracing them through the taxi dispatcher.

Laker said about half the merchandise was recovered from other persons involved.

Teachers threaten president

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Sacramento State University teachers, in a power struggle with school President James Bond, are threatening "nonrecognition and noncooperation" with Bond's administration.

The teachers voted 426-177 last week to endorse a six-page list of complaints against Bond and a promise of future action if he does not change his policies. Seventy per cent of the faculty voted.

Teachers have complained that Bond does not consult with them on promotions or dismissals. They also want more control over the selection of department chairmen.

The faculty also called for reinstatement of Eugene Morris, executive director of a campus foundation, whose firing Bond helped engineer.

Bond contended Morris couldn't work with the administration. Morris accused Bond of trying to cover up spending irregularities.

Bond issued a statement saying university lawyers have found the teachers' demands "clearly illegal." He assailed the "irresponsibility of such empty referendums."

"The 'abuses' alleged have been nothing more than attempts to bring this campus into conformity with state law and with policies established by the trustees of the California State University and Colleges system," Bond said.

Toxic fumes from blaze overcome 42

Associated Press

Authorities said 40 firemen and two reporters were examined at a hospital Saturday after inhaling toxic fumes at the site of a commercial garage blaze in Hollywood.

Investigators said the men had inhaled fumes from a powdered chemical substance called acrylamide used to clean auto parts.

Firemen said they controlled the afternoon fire in about 20 minutes. After the flames were knocked down, the victims complained of skin irritation, upset stomachs and dizziness.

2 STATE AIDES 'THREATENED'

Associated Press

California's Justice Department is investigating an alleged assassination plot against Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger and Republican State Sen. H.L. Richardson of Arcadia, it was reported Saturday.

The report named the two officials as the latest public figures to be identified as possible targets of self-styled revolutionary groups known as the Emiliano Zapata Unit and the New Dawn Collective.

IT HAD been disclosed earlier that the FBI and the Justice Department had learned of an alleged plot by the group against President Ford and Former Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Investigators in Los Angeles said their information on the plots was based on statements made by an informant in the aftermath of a police raid Feb. 21 in Richmond at a supposed Zapata Unit hideout.

Six persons were arrested and authorities confiscated explosives and timing devices.

Charles E. Casey, assistant director of the State Justice Department, said of Richardson and Younger:

"We have taken security precautions concerning both these individuals and I'm really not at liberty to say more than that."

HE ADDED, however, that persons who allegedly planned the assassinations, "did have an organization, did have weapons, did have explosives and did have a plan."

He said those involved in the plans kept Younger and Richardson under surveillance for an undisclosed time.

Investigators also said the credibility of their informant may be in question.

Saturday's disclosures were made in the Los Angeles Times.

Body in barrel found in river

ISLETON (AP) — Sheriff's deputies Saturday sought the identity of a man whose body was found stuffed in a barrel floating in the Sacramento River.

The man, in his late 20s or early 30s, had dark hair and a short beard, and both his arms were tattooed.

Colorado girl to be first Claremont coed

CLAREMONT (AP) — A 17-year-old Colorado student set on becoming a mining engineer is the first woman to be admitted to Claremont Men's College in its 30-year history, officials announced Saturday.

Kathleen Evans of Lakewood, Colo., an honor student at Wheat Ridge High School, is the first of about 50 women who will enroll in September.

Trustees decided a year ago to accept women at the school, which emphasizes public affairs training.

"With so many women going into business and government now it was thought prudent to offer this training to women students," said college spokesman Tom Hall.

Miss Evans, daughter of a mining engineer, will enter a five-year management-engineering program.

U.S. ready to battle newest flu

By HARALD SCHMECK JR.
New York Times Service

EXCLUSIVE

WASHINGTON—It was as though they heard a single scream in the night and then silence.

It was a single aberrant outbreak of flu at Ft. Dix, N.J., first detected last month. It startled public health experts because it was a new virus—possibly a harbinger of a new worldwide strain, a warning of serious danger next winter.

The outbreak may have affected 500 or more men. There was one death. For public health specialists it has been a dilemma because they have searched the nation and found no other outbreak with the same virus. Yet a decision must be made, probably within days, on whether the Ft. Dix episode means that an entirely new influenza vaccine must be developed for next winter's flu season.

In recent days, top federal health experts here have been discussing possible unprecedented action against flu. Apparently no recommendation has yet been sent to F. David Mathews, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, but a decision is expected next week.

Some public health leaders, both within and outside the federal ranks, expect the decision will be to request from Congress enough money to provide flu vaccine for all Americans next winter. The probable cost has been estimated, by one expert, at $180 million to $200 million.

At a meeting in Atlanta about a week ago, a group of leading advisers on vaccine policy to the federal government spent an entire day discussing the issue. At the end of the meeting they seemed to be coming close to a decision in favor of a new vaccine.

"We are close to the point of thinking we will have to bite the bullet," said Dr. David J. Sencer, director of the Center for Disease Control, at the close of the meeting there.

BITING THE BULLET means recommending manufacture of about 200 million doses of vaccine by next winter, if possible, and a nationwide, government-supported campaign to vaccinate everyone who would accept it. No comparable effort against flu has ever been made before.

A decision to try it this year would be based on two key factors:

First, and probably most important, the Ft. Dix outbreak may have given six months advance warning that a new strain of flu is being seeded in the American population and may become the next widespread strain.

Second, there is evidence suggesting that the virus found at Ft. Dix may be of the same type that caused the greatest worldwide flu outbreak in modern history—the great pandemic of 1918-19.

There is no certainty about either of these points, nor is there any way of getting proof before making the decision. Whatever choice is made will be a gamble.

"It's a choice between gambling with money or gambling with lives," said Dr. Harry M. Meyer Jr., director of the Food and Drug Administration's Bureau of Biologics.

In recent years, industry has produced about 20 million doses of flu vaccine annually, almost all of it distributed through normal commercial channels of prescription drug sales. The manufacturers are already far along in their normal vaccine production process, according to Dr. Meyer.

BUT CURRENT EFFORTS are aimed at producing vaccine against Influenza B, which changes little from year to year, and the type of influenza that has been widespread in the United States this past winter. It is called A-Victoria for the Australian state where it was first discovered early last year. This would be of virtually no use against the new strain of virus discovered at Ft. Dix.

'We're close to point of biting the bullet'

Millions of fertilized chicken eggs would be needed for another vaccine production effort, and they would have to be ordered quickly. Many more vaccine guns would also be needed for administering the "shots." These too would have to be ordered almost at once.

An effort to mount a nationwide program that would begin next fall or winter would be a tight race against time. Scientists and vaccine experts from industry and government are to meet Thursday to discuss the logistics problems. At an earlier meeting late last month, industry technical experts said the "go" or "no-go" decision would have to be made well before April 1.

For scientists and administrators the dilemma is that the decision for or against action on this grand scale will have to be made almost exclusively on the evidence from Ft. Dix—which might turn out to have been a fluke.

The climactic event in that outbreak began on Feb. 3 when a 19-year-old combat trainee turned up at sick call complaining of a sore throat and other symptoms of a bad cold. He had a moderate temperature—100.4—and was told to stay in quarters for 48 hours, a public health official said. The next night, however, the recruit went out on a training march, collapsed and was rushed to the base hospital where he was found dead on arrival.

AN AUTOPSY SHOWED the typical condition of lungs beset by influenza-caused pneumonia.

Virus experts took a swab of the recruit's trachea to discover specifically what caused the pneumonia. It proved to be none of the strains that have caused epidemics this past winter or in recent years. Instead the virus appeared to be that of swine influenza. The same unexpected virus was grown from specimens collected from four non-fatal flu cases at Ft. Dix.

Didn't pull any strings, Callaway says

By NICHOLAS M. HORROCK
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON—Howard H. "Bo" Callaway, former Army secretary who has voluntarily stepped aside as President Ford's campaign manager, said Saturday he never used his government position to benefit a Colorado ski resort in which he is the principal stockholder.

Callaway said in an interview that he used "minuscule" amounts of time in his 27 months as secretary to attend to personal business affairs and that this had included several contacts with Agriculture Department officials in behalf of the resort.

He said that Defense Department regulations permitted him, as a political appointee, to "look after my financial interests." Callaway denied that he had had any part in transfers of National Forest Service personnel who had helped evaluate proposals of the Crested Butte Development Co.

Callaway denounced press reports that made him appear to be a "wheeler-dealer." but he acknowledged contacts with friends that might have given rise to suspicion.

HOWARD H. CALLAWAY
No "Wheeler-Dealer"

Callaway has been accused of pressuring Forest Service and Agriculture Department officials to get them to allow the resort at Crested Butte, Colo., to expand. The expansion plan involved land owned by the Forest Service, which is a part of the Agriculture Department.

Callaway voluntarily withdrew from the campaign one week ago in the aftermath of the allegations.

Callaway also said he interceded with White House officials as a private citizen in the early 1970s to urge the government not to ban cyclamates as an artificial sweetener. Earlier, Callaway was former President Nixon's southern campaign manager in the 1968 presidential election.

He said he had called Peter Flannigan, a senior aide to Nixon, in behalf of the Royal Crown Cola Co., a Georgia soft-drink manufacturer, which used the sweetener in its drinks. Callaway's brother is a member of the company's board of directors.

IN OCTOBER 1969, then-HEW Secretary Robert Finch announced that the banning of cyclamates and the withdrawal of the artificial sweetener was done in stages beginning in early 1970.

Callaway said he had entertained several government officials at the ski resort, including William P. Clements, Jr., deputy secretary of defense; John W. Warner, then Navy secretary and John L. McLucas, Air Force secretary in February 1974.

He said he invited Flannigan to ski at his resort shortly after the cyclamate matter, but Flannigan had not made the trip.

Callaway said he never entertained Ford at the resort either before or after Ford became President.

In a series of news reports beginning March 12, it was reported that Callaway met on July 3, 1975, with J. Phil Campbell, undersecretary of Agriculture; Richard A. Ashworth, assistant to the undersecretary of Agriculture, and Rexford A. Resler, associate chief of the Forest Service, to discuss a proposal to expand the resort. Expansion plans required Forest Service approval since the ski-lift areas are on leased land in the Gunnison National Forest.

After this meeting Neil Edstrom, a district forest ranger, and John T. Minow, his supervisor, were transferred. Edstrom had written, and Minow had approved, a recommendation that Crested Butte's expansion proposal be denied. The proposal later was approved by new personnel assigned to the area.

CALLAWAY said he exerted no pressure to have the two men moved. "Categorically no, I didn't know them, I didn't know who they were, I had nothing to do with it," he said. Both officials were well known to other Crested Butte officials, however.

Yet in August 1973, Callway had attended a meeting with Forest Service officials on the Crested Butte matter in Colorado where both men who were later transferred were in attendance.

Callaway said that in October 1973, some six months after he became Army secretary, he called Ashworth and arranged an appointment for his brother-in-law, Ralph Walton, who operates Crested Butte, to discuss delays by the Forest Service in handling the expansion proposal.

He said that he and Ashworth and Campbell were long time friends. "I would have had as much influence with them as Bo Callaway, friend, then as Bo Callaway, secretary of the Army," he said.

He said that during his tenure as Army secretary he called Ashworth on eight occasions. Only two contacts, he said, involved Crested Butte.

On July 3, 1975, Callaway said, the day he resigned as Army secretary to take over Ford's campaign, Ashworth called him and asked to come over with Campbell to say goodbye and give him a status report on Crested Butte.

Mafia, 'closed' since '57, will initiate new members

By NICHOLAS GAGE
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — For the first time since 1957, New York's five Mafia "families" have been authorized by the national Mafia commission to initiate new members, according to law-enforcement officials.

The officials said that each family had been given permission to initiate 10 new members, but had been told to select them from men who were already moneymakers in the rackets, had no legal problems facing them and were of proven loyalty.

The membership books were closed in 1957 to prevent gangsters who were informers for law enforcement agencies from gaining entry into Mafia families. One Mafia informer, Joseph Valachi, testified in 1962 that the move followed a series of arrests of high-level leaders, including Vito Genovese, then the most powerful Mafia boss in the country.

But about six weeks ago the commission met in the Greater New York area and approved the opening of the books on a limited scale, the officials said.

The change has been confirmed both by the police and federal officials through informants and court-authorized electronic surveillance.

"There's no doubt they've opened the books again on a tightly controlled basis," said a Justice Department official. "They've been holding initiation ceremonies in New York for the past month."

He said the ceremonies had been held in the homes of under-bosses and selected family captains, not in the homes of Mafia bosses, which are under close surveillance.

"Apparently," he said, "the initiation ceremony they're using is still close to what Valachi described — guns, knives, oaths of silence, the whole thing."

Among those recently initiated, he said, were John Russo, the driver and bodyguard for Frank Tieri, who is the reputed boss of the Vito Genovese family, Benaro Mangano, known as Benny Eggs, a successful bookmaker and loan shark, and Salvatore Franzese, who reportedly heads the lucrative gambling operations of his uncle, Sonny Franzese, a captain in the Joseph Colombo family who is now serving a 50-year prison term.

The decision to reopen the books indicates a decline in the influence of Carlo Gambino, boss of the biggest Mafia family in the city, who opposed the move.

IT ALSO signifies the emergence of Carmine Galente, the new boss of the Mafia family of Joseph Bonanno, as a major power. Galente, who finished a 15-year term for narcotics last year, led the fight to persuade the commission to open the books.

According to the officials, Galente argued that all Mafia families were declining rapidly, because new members were not being brought in to replace those who had died and major moneymakers in the rackets were not being brought into the families.

Being initiated, or "made," carries great honor and prestige in organized crime. A made member is called a "good fellow" and has the right to participate in "sit-down" — conferences to solve grievances.

A nonmember must be represented by someone who is made and does not have as good a chance to get a decision in his favor. Moreover, made members do not help or trust gangsters who are not members the way they do each other.

OLDER Mafia bosses such as Gambino reportedly have felt that this special relationship among members would make whole Mafia families vulnerable if someone who is an informant was initiated.

They went along with a few initiations during the 19 years the books were closed, but only when it was absolutely necessary. One such instance took place three years ago, when most of the leaders of the Colombo family were injured, imprisoned or in hiding and Alphonse Persico was "made" in order to lead the Colombo family in the war against its rebel faction, the Gallo gang.

Gambino, however, found himself in the minority at the recent meeting of the nine-member national commission, the officials said. His strongest supporter in the past, Stefano Magaddino of Buffalo, has died and his other staunch ally, Joseph Zerilli, the boss in Detroit, could not attend because of illness.

The other bosses, who felt that opening the books now was essential to the survival of the Mafia, carried the day. But in deference to Gambino they agreed to limit new members to 10 per family.

No progress in talks to end Vegas strike

LAS VEGAS (AP) — A Howard Hughes-owned casino, one of 12 gambling spas shut down by a Las Vegas Strip strike, reopened Saturday.

But opposing sides appeared no nearer to settling the 10-day labor dispute which is said to be costing the facilities $1.4 million a day exclusive of gambling revenues.

The Silver Slipper Casino reopened its doors at noon with nonunion employes and management manning gaming tables and a bar.

Clark Ecton, manager of the Silver Slipper, said about a quarter of all employes remained on their jobs and provided more than enough manpower to service the 19 gaming tables.

The six establishments owned by Hughes' Summa Corp. were the first to shut down when the walkout of service employes and musicians hit 15 strip hotels March 11. Summa first laid off, then put back on the payroll, its dealers and other nonunion employes.

Perry Lieber, spokesman for Summa, branded as "a lie" rumors that the Hughes organization would bring in outside workers to staff the hotels. Lieber said no other Hughes hotel would be opened until after the strike was settled. The Silver Slipper was reopened, he said, because "it was the easiest to open, it has no hotel."

For the second day in a row Saturday, negotiations between culinary workers and bartenders unions and the Nevada Resort Association yielded no progress.

U.S. concerned over spread of Cuban influence

By DAVID BINDER
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON—In the last two years Cuba has gained considerable influence among the small republics of the Caribbean and is now enjoying some regional support for its military ventures in Africa, in the assessment of top-ranking U.S. policymakers.

The principal friends in the region of the government of Premier Fidel Castro are Guayana and Jamaica, both of which endorsed Cuba's intervention on behalf of the Marxist-Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola, which won the civil war in Angola.

But administration officials believe that the younger generation of political leaders throughout the Caribbean view Cuba as the most successful model of social and economic development in their experience. "The young leaders are very radical," one official observed, adding that they are "sympathetic to Castro."

As a result, the Ford Administration recently began to examine the implications for United States security posed by expanding Cuban influence in what had largely been a United States sphere.

Two United States specialists on the Caribbean said that it would be "relatively cheap and easy" for the Soviet Union and Cuba to acquire an additional base or two in the region simply by offering to bail out one of the heavily indebted Caribbean republics.

Already Prime Minister Forbes Burnham of Guayana has promised Cuba that it could use Guayana air fields to transport troops and supplies for Cuban forces in Africa in any effort to liberate Rhodesia and South West Africa from white minority rule.

BURNHAM, THE UNCONTESTED political leader of Guayana even though his fellow-blacks are outnumbered by East Indians, has recently put his country on a path toward a Marxist society. He has stimulated high level contacts with Cuba to the point where administration officials believe that Castro has become his most important ally.

At the other end of the Caribbean, Prime Minister Michael N. Manley of Jamaica has also been cultivating closer relations with Castro, whom he first met in September 1973.

There are understood to be 83 Cubans in Jamaica helping build a dam, a school and a factory. "With 20 per cent unemployment in Jamaica, it makes you wonder why they need Cuban construction crews," a United States official remarked.

In the administration assessment, Manley is basically a democratic socialist who does not seek to impose a Communist system on the 1.9 million Jamaicans. But the United States officials worry that Jamaica's grave and deteriorating economic situation - with "only a week and a half's foreign exchange validity," as one put it - may drive Manley to assume authoritarian powers.

Firemen unaware they were in house

6 children die in fire

OXFORD, N.C. (AP) — Six children from three families died inside a blazing home Saturday as fire fighters battled the flames, unaware that the building was occupied, officials said.

The children, aged [illegible] years to 9 months, were found dead inside the five-room frame house after fire fighters spent an hour bringing the blaze under control, an Oxford Volunteer Fire Department spokesman said.

When fire fighters arrived on the scene, flames were beginning to break through the roof of the green and white house. The spokesman [illegible] a neighbor was asked [illegible] one was inside the [illegible] but the neighbor said he did not know.

After the blaze was brought under control, fire fighters went inside and found the bodies of the children huddled together [illegible] er bedroom, officials said.

TORNADO DIPS down in a rural area south of Champaign-Urbana, Ill., Saturday, marring the first day of spring. Several communities reported damage estimated at $1 million, and eight persons were hurt.

Twisters mar spring's start

Associated Press

Tornadoes ripped through towns and farm country in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Louisiana and Arkansas on the first day of spring Saturday, killing at least two persons and injuring an undetermined number of others, authorities said.

In Michigan, the Oakland County sheriff's office said a tornado hit a residential area in West Bloomfield township and struck a number of businesses. Authorities estimated that at least 100 persons were hurt in that area of Michigan.

The two persons killed were reported to have been in a car when the twister struck.

In Kilbourne, La., a tornado demolished the general store, jumped across the state line into Arkansas and injured nearly 20 persons, state police said.

At least five persons were injured when tornadoes struck a mobile home park in northwest Indiana and a rural area north of Lafayette.

In Illinois, twisters touched down at Vorhees and moved through Bement, Ivesdale, Sadorus, Philo and into Ogden.

FBI sat on bomb data 4 years

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Alabama Atty. Gen. Bill Baxley has revealed that the FBI withheld for almost four years information relating to the 1963 Birmingham church bombing which killed four black girls.

Baxley said he originally requested the information in March 1971, but didn't receive it until last December. He declined to speculate on the reason for the delay, which hampered the investigation of the unsolved incident. It occurred at a time when the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was leading civil rights demonstrations in Birmingham.

An FBI spokesman in Washington confirmed the dates given by Baxley for requesting and receiving the information.

The spokesman said that when the bureau first received the request it turned the matter over to the Civil Rights Division of the Justice Department. When that office informed the FBI it was all right to provide the information, the spokesman said, "we promptly did so."

A spokesman for the Justice Department commented that there was no effort to withhold the information, but Baxley's request "just slipped between the cracks some way or other."

Since the appointment of Edward H. Levi as U.S. attorney general, Baxley said, the Justice Department has been cooperating fully with Alabama officials in the investigation of the bombing, for which no suspects have ever been arrested.

Baxley has said that he knows who was responsible for the bombing and that "the ones still alive are going to be brought to justice."

Killed were 11-year-old Denise McNair, whose father, Chris McNair, is now a state representative, and Cynthia Wesley, Carol Robertson and Addie Mae Collins, all 14.

FBI opens Mellon inquiry

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — The FBI said Saturday it has launched an inquiry to learn whether federal law was violated in the reported kidnaping of two children Friday from their mother in Brooklyn by her divorced husband, Seward Prosser Mellon, Pittsburgh banker.

According to the account given by Lester Carew, a bodyguard for Constance Elizabeth, 5, and Catherine Leigh, 7, three men posing as FBI agents disarmed him and took the children from him. They had been living with their mother, Karen Boyd Mellon, for the last few months.

The father, an heir to the Mellon empire, said later Friday, "The children are safe with me." But he would not say where they were.

In disclosing the FBI investigation, a spokesman for the agency said, "If it proves that the children were kidnapped, the guilty ones would be subject to 10 years in jail, a $10,000 fine or both. For impersonating federal officers, the penalty is a $1,000 fine, three years in jail or both."

It was unclear on Saturday who was legally entitled to the custody of the children. They were reported to have been abducted originally by agents for the mother while they were visiting her in Durham, N.C., three months ago. Mellon had been granted custody of the youngsters by a Pennsylvania court, before that time.

But last month, a New York State Supreme Court Justice granted the mother custody of the children, a judgment Mellon refused to recognize as legal.

VISITORS to the Holy Shroud Chapel in Turin, Italy, gaze at the linen cloth which tradition holds was wrapped around Christ's body after the crucifixion. A study concludes that it is not just a fake relic.

Holy Shroud no fake, 7-year study indicates

By HILMI TOROS
Associated Press

VATICAN CITY — An exhaustive seven-year investigation of the Holy Shroud of Christ shows it cannot be dismissed as a fake relic, a leader of the study team said Saturday.

But he said the experts recommended more tests on what is traditionally held to be the actual linen cloth wrapped around Christ's body after the crucifixion.

"We have not found anything negative (to contradict the belief)," the Rt. Rev. Jose Cottino, vice president of the commission of experts, said in a telephone interview from the northern city of Turin, where the 14-by-three-foot relic is kept in a silver chest.

While the commission's report will not be definitive, he said, it will at least deny that the tradition of the shroud can be dismissed as a myth.

MSGR. Cottino, a native of New Bedford, Mass., said the final report of the commission, established with Vatican approval, will be made public this week.

He said the experts concluded the cloth "could have come from the area and time of our Lord."

Msgr. Cottino said the chief significance in the panel's findings was the failure of extensive photographic and other tests on the Holy Shroud to disprove its authenticity.

Msgr. Cottino said the commission found no definite trace of blood on the cloth. Some students of the Holy Shroud say possible blood stains on it could indicate Christ did not die on the Cross but was still bleeding and died later.

POPE PAUL VI suggested five years ago that special studies be conducted on the "Shroud of Turin."

A Vatican spokesman said the commission's report had not arrived at the Vatican but will be studied when it reaches the central administration of the Roman Catholic Church.

The spokesman said he did not know if the Vatican would take a stand on the final report. He said the investigation was left to the competence of the archdiocese of Turin.

The shroud is wrapped in red silk and kept in a silver chest on an altar, protected by a glass cover and iron grills. It contains an impressed face and the shape of the body believed to be Christ's.

The material is the property of Italy's former royal family, the House of Savoy. It is rarely made public and has been opened no more than 10 times in the last 100 years.

THREE years ago Italian television showed a documentary on the relic, filmed with the permission of Michele Cardinal Pellegrini of Turin.

A Swiss photography expert retained as consultant by the commission told the newspaper La Stampa he could "conclude definitely" from his examination that the Holy Shroud is "not a myth."

The consultant, Max Frei, said his own conclusion was that the cloth is of the same material used in Palestine at the time of the death of Christ.

It is presumed that the shroud was taken from Palestine to Constantinople, then to France and finally to Turin. However, authorities have traced the shroud only to the 11th century, and some historians say they have found little evidence of a shroud in the early Christian era.

THE VATICAN position is that "it is a tradition that the Holy See admits."

West German author Kurt Berna, whose "Holy Shroud Foundation" in Zurich claims to have spent over $150,000 on research, says blood stains on the material prove Christ was alive when taken from the cross.

Berna says his findings would free Jews of Christ's era of guilt for the crucifixion because "the execution was not carried through its completion."

Berna's statement contradicts Gospel accounts and the Vatican's belief that Christ died on the Cross.

The Holy Shroud has been the target of several acts of vandalism. In Oct. 23, 1972, the Holy Shroud Chapel was broken into, and religious objects near the relic were torn apart and set afire. The Holy Shroud was not damaged.

Viets mark anniversary of My Lai with memorial rite

TOKYO (AP) — About 12,000 persons attended a memorial service for the South Vietnamese villagers killed by U.S. soldiers in the 1968 My Lai massacre, according to a Japanese news dispatch from Saigon.

The Asahi newspaper said the service was held at a former American artillery position near the hamlet in central Vietnam on March 16, the seventh anniversary of the massacre.

A Hanoi broadcast quoted survivors as saying 504 villagers were slain by U.S. troops of the Americal Division.

It said that Tam Naa, a village elder, claimed that expectant mothers were raped before being shot, children were bayoneted and his entire family was wiped out.

"Honestly, even though I have told and retold this story many times, I still feel it is not enough," the broadcast quoted Tam as saying. "We have to tell it again and again to everybody."

The broadcast said My Lai is now a productive hamlet raising cattle and pigs and growing coconuts and fruit.

A U.S. Army investigation of the massacre reported that at least [illegible] unarmed civilians were killed.

William L. Calley Jr. of Columbus, Ga., who was a platoon leader at My Lai, [illegible] in the massacre.

Thai extend U.S. exit deadline

BANGKOK (AP)—Thailand granted permission Saturday for 270 American military advisers to remain in the country indefinitely and allowed four more months for withdrawal of another 3,000 U.S. servicemen.

Saturday was a deadline for the withdrawal of all U.S. military personnel from Thailand agreed to after Communist-backed regimes came to power in Indochina. But instead of enforcing it, Prime Minister Kukrit Pramoj announced the extension to July.

"It is right and fair that the United States should have time to remove its possessions," he said.

U.S. Ambassador Charles Whitehouse said after emerging from Government House, where Kukrit made the announcement: "We didn't want to stay where we are not wanted. We will be leaving within the time period specified by the Thai government."

The 270 advisers will remain under a 1950 military assistance agreement.

During the Indochina war, Thai-based planes bombed Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos and almost 50,000 U.S. servicemen were stationed in Thailand.

Some factions in Thailand had called for the retention of several thousand American advisers after Saturday at the electronics intelligence center at Ramusen, the sprawling U'tapao Air Base and a string of communications and radar sites.

Kukrit ordered a halt to intelligence gathering at Ramusen, 300 miles northeast of Bangkok, and other sites by midnight Saturday.

Kukrit is a caretaker prime minister, ruling until the general elections scheduled April 4. He said it "depends on the next government" whether the withdrawal matter will be reopened.

An embassy spokesman refused to give the schedule for the withdrawal from more than a dozen sites or to discuss background of U.S.-Thai discussions over the last few weeks.

The Thai capital was under full military alert for the third straight day and pro- and anti-American students demonstrated throughout the day. U.S. military personnel throughout the country were ordered to remain on their bases, according to a U.S. spokesman.

Two bombs exploded near where National Student Center demonstrators were cheering the announcement and shouting anti-American slogans. One person was injured.

Two blocks away, the rightist Vocational Students Center was holding a pro-American rally.

Italy told of risks in Red shift

ROME (AP)—Premier Aldo Moro warned his Christian Democratic Party Saturday against accepting a governing alliance with the Communists, declaring it posed risks both for Italy and world peace.

U.S. officials have told both Italy and France that their relations with Washington will be reassessed if the Communists, strengthened by recent gains in local elections in the two NATO countries, get a role in governing at the national level.

Addressing his party congress, Moro suggested a return to an alliance with the Socialist Party and said relations with the Communists should be on the basis of a "serious, rigorous and respectful confrontation."

THE governing Christian Democratic Party, faced by a serious economic crisis and a drive by the Communist Party for a share of power, is expected during the congress to determine the course of its relations with the Communists.

Moro acknowledged the strength of the Communists, who polled a third of the vote in nationwide regional elections least June, running just 2 percentage points behind the Christian Democrats.

He also asserted that Communist Secretary Enrico Berlinguer's assertions of the party's belief in multiparty politics, made during the recent 25th Soviet Party Congress in Moscow, "are rightly objects of attention."

West Bank chief quits

TEL AVIV (AP) — The Arab mayor of Biblical Hebron accused Israeli soldiers of brutality Saturday and resigned as skirmishes between soldiers and Arab youths were reported in Hebron and two other Israeli-occupied west bank towns.

Israli officials said anti-occupation demonstrations that have swept the zone for a month were tapering off despite rock-throwing incidents in Hebron, Nablus and Tulkarim.

Jaabari, a former Jordanian cabinet minister, is the sixth Arab mayor on the west bank to resign since the strife began.

Most west bank Arab leaders have endorsed the Arab summit decision saying the west bank should go to the Palestine Liberation Organization — PLO — to set up a Palestinian state.

The rioting broke out after a Jerusalem court ruled that Jews could pray on the city's Temple Mount, which is holy to Moslems and Jews.

The Israeli court ruling and west bank rioting will be debated at the U.N. Security Council this week at the request of the Arab bloc.

In an unusual move, Israel announced it would participate in the debate even though the PLO will be present.

Israel has boycotted previous U.N. debates and international gatherings where the PLO was represented, accusing the organization of being a terrorist group dedicated to Israel's destruction.

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. (AP) — Beef producers must continue to "take a blood bath" while meat eaters enjoy lower retail prices because of a glut of choice beef on the market, the president of the National Livestock Feeders Association said Friday.

Part of Peking economic recovery plan

The Chinese are coming—to U.S. toy shops

By CAUSEWELL VAUGHAN
Knight News Service

NEW YORK — The People's Republic of China is planning to invade the United States this year — with wooden soldiers. The toys will be among the thousands of items made in the People's Republic that will be offered to American consumers for the first time.

The importation of consumer goods from the People's Republic is part of the country's over-all plan for economic development, which has been getting a helping hand from the U.S. since President Nixon's 1973 visit.

Actually, trade with China started in 1971. Shortly after Nixon's visit, though, the National Council for United States-China Trade was set up. Its president, Christopher Phillips, said that as a result of the consumer goods that will be coming in this year, "our trade with China will be balanced for the first time since it began."

For example, in 1972 U.S. exoports to China totaled $63.5 million. They reached a peak in 1974 at $819 million, but were off last year to $303.6 million and are expected to drop again this year.

Meanwhile, imports from the People's Republic have been increasing steadily: In 1972 they were $32.4 million; last year, $158.3 million. Phillips predicted that the consumer goods would raise the level of imports to between $190 million and $205 million this year.

Trade with Peking has been heavily in favor of the U.S. because of massive exports of grain and other agricultural goods needed by China since it suffered one of its worst droughts.

The consumer goods from China that will hit the market in abundance this year will range from artwork to zori (a kind of sandal) and include biscuits and blouses, chocolates and carved figures, liquor and lingerie, toys and ties.

The Chinese have about 45,000 items consumers can use, and by this time next year most large department stores probably will carry some of them.

One company that is a member of the Washington-based trade council is the China Trade Corp., here in New York, which conducted a three-year study of Chinese goods. Its chairman, Charles Abrams, estimated that as many as 4,000 of the possible 45,000 consumer goods were saleable in this country. The fraction is so small, he said, not because of their quality but because of this country's packaging standards and regulations of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

China Trade Corp. is the only company that will import Chinese products exclusively, Abrams says.

The company hopes to familiarize American consumers with Chinese products with a Chinese Friendship Fair, which will tour major cities during the late summer and fall. "The fair will be a total educational process," Abrams said, "and from the reception similar exhibits have received in other countries, we know it will be a success."

Abrams concedes that, to some extent, the public will be buying products from the People's Republic because of the novelty.

And because of the interest consumers express in the People's Republic, the other China, the Republic of China, may suffer economically.

Dollar making a comeback

By G. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — While currencies of some other major industrial nations have been losing value in recent weeks, the once-beleaguered U.S. dollar has been waging a winning comeback.

An immediate benefit for Americans will be cheaper travel abroad and slightly reduced inflationary pressures at home. Goods from Spain, France, Great Britain and Italy all may be slightly cheaper.

On the other hand, U.S. goods may face cheaper competition from goods of other nations abroad, which could have an adverse impact on the nation's foreign trade.

But the gains in the U.S. dollar for the past year have been impressive, and no one complains anymore that there are billions of unwanted U.S. dollars sloshing uselessly in world money markets.

"The Deutsche-mark and the U.S. dollar obviously are in demand today," Treasury Secretary William Simon told newsmen last week.

The low point in the dollar's value was in February of last year when it was 18.8 per cent below its 1970 value in comparison with currencies of the nation's major trading partners, who are members of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development.

By January of this year, it was back to within 11.5 per cent of its 1970 value, and for the week ending March 17, after new devaluations in Europe, it was within 10.7 percent of its former value.

The gains have been primarily against the British pound, French franc, Italian lira and Spanish peseta. The German mark has also remained strong, as has the Japanese yen.

The increased value of the dollar is also reflected in its exchange rate with the Special Drawing Right of the International Monetary Fund. It has gone from a low of $1.25 per SDR about eight months ago to $1.15 per SDR in recent weeks.

Oil-exporting nations which a year ago were considering pricing their oil in SDRs instead of dollars because of concern over the falling value of American currency have lately been silent on the issue.

The chief reason for the turn-around in the opinion of economists both in and out of government is that the United States and Germany have made better progress against inflation than have France, Great Britain and Italy.

When the dollar was plunging in value, the U.S. was experiencing inflation above 10 per cent a year. But inflation has now declined to around 6 per cent and consumer prices rose just one tenth of one per cent in February, the smallest monthly increase in four years.

'Security' key issue for UAW

Knight News Service

DETROIT — Backers of the short workweek and cost-of-living protection for retirees kept pressure on the United Auto Workers 'leadership until the closing minutes of the union's bargaining convention Saturday.

Both demands have rank-and-file support. More than 1,000 delegates demonstrated in support of the two proposals before the opening of the Friday session.

Their persistence, veteran labor observers said, mandates an effort in these areas by UAW negotiators when the auto and farm-implement contract talks open in mid-July.

A 69-page omnibus resolution adopted by the convention took note of both the need to reduce working time to create more jobs and "the hardship which retirees suffer by reasons of inflation."

But UAW leaders have said that the hard facts of economies dictate choices somewhere below the grass-roots demands for 36 hours work for 40 hours pay and a full cost-of-living allowance (COLA) for retirees.

Both carry sticker prices that make them prohibitively costly, in the leadership view, at a time when they see the nation's economic recovery as tentative.

All railroads but 3 to hike freight rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — An average 4.7 per cent freight rate increase will go into effect on Sunday on all but one railroad operating east of the Mississippi River. The hike will be applied by all but two railroads west of the Mississippi on April 18.

The ICC approved the rate hike on Feb. 20, but the Southern Pacific, the Missouri-Kansas-Texas and the Long Island all refused to increase their rates.

This resulted in the ICC agreeing to delay until March 21 the effective date of the increase to allow the carriers time to decide what action to take.

Banks getting tough on REITs

By REGINALD STUART
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — This time a year ago, the strong threat of a rash of bankruptcies by the nation's troubled real estate investment trusts prompted many of the trusts' bank creditors to ease the terms for trust repayments of the billions of dollars due the banks.

Bankruptcy, it was felt, might result in years of settlement negotiations and could result in the banks' losing more than if they waited the problems out.

Just the reverse seems true today. The banks appear to be closing in on the REITs.

Some lenders have concluded that, after a year of putting together all kinds of REIT rescue packages, they should now seek immediate payment of their loans and run the risk of a REIT bankruptcy.

BANKRUPTCY, some people in banking and real estate now feel, might actually improve the possibilities of banks getting back at least part of what they put into the trusts.

Nearly half the estimated $11 billion in REIT bank loans is held by the nation's 10 largest banks, with several hundred other banks sharing the remainder.

Until about two years ago, when the real estate market began showing serious signs of collapsing, banks and investors viewed realty trusts as attractive new vehicles for expanding real estate development — and reaping good profits. REITs are tax exempt as long as 90 per cent of their earnings are paid out as dividends, which are taxable to the shareowners. Most of the trusts were formed in the last eight years and by 1974 had placed more than $20 billion, or 20 per cent, of all construction loans, made that year.

UNTIL their problems set in, REITs borrowed money from banks, relent it to developers at higher interest rates, and made their money on the spread between the two. To supplement bank loans, which were considered senior debt, REITs also raised money through private placements and sales of stock, called subordinate or junior debt.

When times were prosperous, most REITs were able to make their payments to banks promptly. But when times went sour, and borrowers from the REITs began to default on payments, a chain reaction occurred. Many REITs are still unable to pay bank debts at the original terms and still pay junior debt on time.

"I think there is a stiffer attitude developing on the part of some banks that in the past perhaps they gave up too much of their own position in order to keep the REITs from insolvency," said William E. Pike, chairman of the credit committee of the Morgan Guaranty Trust Co.

From the REITs point of view, the shift in bankers' thinking has been painful. Morgan, which at the end of 1975 had $257 million in loans outstanding to realty trusts, was cited earlier this month by Continental Mortgage Investors as one of the banks that figures prominently into its decision to file for protection from its creditors under Chapter XI of the Federal Bankruptcy Act.

Morgan was one of 25 bank creditors out of a group of 103 that refused to sign a credit agreement with Continental which trust officials said would have extended the life of the REIT and given it a better chance to work out its portfolio problems without the interference of the courts.

Continental owed more than $500 million to its bank creditors at the time of the bankruptcy filing. Among the more prominent of those refusing to sign the new credit accord were Morgan, to whom Continental owed $6.7 million; the Bank of America, $10.6 million, and the Crocker National Bank, $21.8 million.

The bankruptcy filing by Continental, the nation's second largest realty trust behind the Chase Manhattan Mortgage and Realty Trust, was only the highlight of a series of developments between the banks and the REITs that signaled a shift in bank posture.

Florida recovery gives hope

By THOMAS MULLANEY
New York Times Service

BOCA RATON, Fla — There has been a virtual halt in the once-frenzied pace of condominium-building along the Gold Coast and elsewhere in Florida, but the depression of the state's construction industry no longer dampens spirits to the degree it did last year.

Thanks to the general economic recovery in the nation, the bust in building is being largely offset by some concrete gains in other business areas.

The biggest plus all over the Sunshine State this year has been the banner tourist business, spreading a heavy volume of spending among hotels, airlines, stores, restaurants and other attractions from Disneyworld up north to the bottom of the keys, despite the long delay in the perennial baseball training exhibitions.

Other facets of economic activity are on the rise, albeit slowly, and the state's unemployment rate has receded from its exceedingly high rate of 11.5 per cent in January, down from 13 per cent late last year. Even the badly battered housing industry has recently shown a flicker of revival in the private, single-family home sector.

IN ITS latest monthly economic report the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Miami said that Florida's Southeastern counties, which had been hit by the recession more severely than most other areas, were "on the road to recovery" but the road is not without its obstacles."

The institution's economic index for Dade, Palm Beach and Broward counties rose for the fifth consecutive month in March and moved above the 200 level for the first time since September 1974. A year ago it was under the 190 mark, but three years ago it was around the 214 level.

THE economic upbeat in Florida, which has been developing slowly over the last few months, has been particularly encouraging to economic analysts because this region of the country has provided one of the most dramatic examples of the devastating effects wreaked by the 16-month national recession that officially ended for the country almost a year ago.

This state's gradual start along the comeback road typifies the character of the nation's recovery — a steady, though not [illegible] improvement of [illegible] pattern. With such a prospective [illegible] outlook [illegible] and [illegible] remains rather grim for many [illegible]

I am appalled to learn that all lunch meat and hot dogs contain sodium nitrite, an element which causes cancer in laboratory animals. My son and husband love these, and I'm worried. Why don't they take this additive off the market? Where can I buy hot dogs without the sodium nitrite? K.H., Signall Hill.

All hot dogs and lunch meat on the market contain the controversial antibacterial agent sodium nitrite, according to Dr. Harold Hayes, food safety and health officer with the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Washington, D.C. He said that while concentrated doses of the additive have caused cancer in rats, it never has been possible to link human cancer with sodium nitrite. In addition to maintaining the color and flavor of cured meats, the agent's principal role is to prevent botulinum toxin, which can cause botulism poisoning. "We feel the danger of botulism to be far greater than the potential hazard of cancer," Hayes said. New federal regulations that went into effect in January reduced the amount of sodium nitrite used from 200 parts per million to 156 parts per million in curing solutions for all processed products, except bacon and dry-cured products. The use of sodium nitrite has been a controversial issue for some time, with major consumer groups such as Consumers Union and Ralph Nader's Center for the Study of Responsive Law lobbying actively against the preservative.

Almost two months ago I ordered some upholstery work done on six chairs and a medical treatment bench from Anthony's Upholstery in Baldwin Park. When time came for delivery they did not show up. Every time I called they had excuses for not delivering my furniture. I have already paid them $84.50, and I need the furniture in my office. Can you help me? R.J.K., Redondo Beach.

By now you have your furniture. After repeated telephone calls to Anthony's Upholstery and a couple of false promises of delivery, they finally returned your furniture to you. Mrs. Anthony Pedilla, co-owner of the shop, told Action Line her husband had been ill and they had had mechanical problems with their truck.

I would like to know if the houses in the 2500 block of Webster Avenue are going to be bought up by the state for the Terminal Island Freeway extension. Rumors are going around to this effect. R.A., Long Beach.

The plans to extend the Terminal Island Freeway to Artesia Boulevard in Compton have been shelved because of a lack of funds, and in any event, the proposed route was east of Webster, and the state was not planning to acquire any homes in your area. State Sen. Joseph M. Kennick, D-Long Beach, has introduced a bill, SB1075, which would require the California Highway Commission to resume plans for part of the extension, but even if this measure is signed into law, the state has no plans to buy any houses on Webster Avenue, according to a spokesman for the California Transportation Department. This bill, which has passed the Senate and the Assembly Committee on Transportation, would require the construction within six years of a 1.1-mile extension connecting the Terminal Island Freeway to the San Diego Freeway. This project would cost about $50 million. The state currently is upgrading the existing Terminal Island Freeway from Seaside Boulevard to Willow Street. This project, which will cost $2.5 million, is scheduled for completion in mid-1977.

No can do

The State of California has to spend many dollars for cleanup because we have a bunch of litterbugs driving the freeways. My question is: Are the thousands of aluminum cans that are picked up recycled? J.B., Long Beach.

We checked with spokesmen in charge of road cleanup crews for the State Department of Transportation, for Los Angeles and Orange counties, for Long Beach and the City of Los Angeles and were told that none of the aluminum cans picked up by their crews is recycled. All five told us the cost of labor as well as the technical problems involved in separating the cans from the other litter make recycling impractical at this time.

was not the lot sampled. The lot from which an objective sample was collected was combined with other lots and processed into turkey rolls and shipped out from the establishment."

An FDA inspector, according to the memo, thought that FDA "should assume responsibility for the lot that was processed and shipped." The FDA and USDA were not sure whether the turkey rolls should be recalled, it said, but at least two officials felt that the FDA Bureau of Foods "should be aware of the situation in the event that they thought action was indicated in order to protect the consumer."

Van Houweling, however, argued successfully that the FDA had no "obligation" to take regulatory action on products under USDA's jurisdiction, and instructed his bureau not to ask USDA for any more information on the turkey affair.

One of the participants at the meeting pointed out, the document said, that since both agencies share responsibility in the drug residue program, "there is the additional possibility that USDA, or for that matter FDA, may be embarrassed."

The memo said that "it could be difficult to explain why FDA is bringing criminal charges against an individual when USDA had allowed the adulterated food (meat) itself (upon which the charge is based) to enter the channels of commerce for human consumption."

Van Houweling's conclusion was that his agency wouldn't become involved unless requested to step in by USDA, but that there would be no bar to FDA action in the future if it seemed warranted.

Dr. John E. Spaulding, a USDA official, said none of the turkey rolls processed from thousands of contaminated birds was retrieved from supermarkets.

"We didn't even try. There was no point in it," he said. The birds we had were clean. The other birds had gone out already."

Spaulding said there is a two to three-week lag before USDA gets a reading on its residue samples and that, unless it has a reason to do so the Agriculture Department cannot impound the birds. In this case, the meat had been processed and left the plant before USDA discovered the violations.

Turkey rolls have a shelf life of only 7 to 14 days unless they have been frozen, he said, and would have been eaten before a recall could have been initiated.

Ipronidazole residues dissipate when turkey meat is frozen or when it is cooked as turkey rolls at 165 degrees, he said. The drug is used to prevent the disease called "black head" which primarily affects turkeys and can be fatal.

Spaulding said that after this incident and a few others, turkey growers, "who are very sensitive to the residue problem," stopped using the drug.

Prosecutor sorry for family, praises Bailey

"Quite frankly, if the jury had acquitted her, I was going to tell you this was a case that had to be tried...There was no vengeance involved," he said, noting that a grand jury had indicted the newspaper heiress on the charges of armed bank robbery and use of a firearm to commit a felony.

The prosecutor said he had "nothing but sympathy" for the Hearst family. "I have children of my own. I think Patricia Hearst can straighten herself out and I hope she does so."

He said he believed Miss Hearst participated in the bank robbery with the Symbionese Liberation Army "soldiers" who had abducted her just two months earlier "because she got caught up in the rhetoric and. . .joined the SLA."

The most crucial witnesses in the government's case included Zig Berzin, a Vietnam veteran who testified that Miss Hearst was carrying spare ammunition on the day of the holdup, and a psychiatrist, Dr. Joel Fort, who said she was a willing robber, Browning said.

"I'm delighted with the verdict because I think he (Fort) has been vindicated by it. There were some terrible things said about him during the trial..."

Browning explained that the government was unable to introduce material which would have supported Fort's views on Miss Hearst's willingness in the bank robbery because Judge Oliver J. Carter wanted to shorten the trial as much as possible.

Bailey had attacked Fort's credentials savagely during the trial, at one point accusing him of trying to "fix" the case.

Patty wondered if she had a chance — Bailey

"I can't think of anything that hurt her more than (having to take) the 5th Amendment and certain documents, including a list of banks and instructions on how to make bombs," he said.

Bailey declined to speculate about the jury's reasoning, but Johnson injected, "The jury may have felt the accumulation of the evidence was overwhelming."

Bailey said he considered admission of these things and the exclusion of testimony by court-appointed psychiatrist Dr. Margaret Singer to be possible grounds for appeal. But he said he would not announce his intentions on an appeal until after sentencing.

Before the press conference, however, when asked if he planned to appeal, Bailey said, "Sure."

Asked about the 11 state charges the newspaper heiress faced in Los Angeles, Bailey said, "I wonder what the state would gain down there by additional punishment."

Earlier, Bailey approached Browning as the prosecutor was surrounded by reporters. Bailey had to yell at Browning to get his attention.

The prosecutor turned and said, "I'm sorry it couldn't have been a verdict both ways."

Bailey responded, "I understand."

"You put on a great case, Lee," Browning said.

the terrorists who kidnaped her on Feb. 4, 1974.

They rejected her explanation that she had never fully become "Tania," the heroine of the underground but had sprinted into the Hibernia Bank the morning of April 15, 1974, with guns pointed at her back and a threat that if she did not join the holdup she would be killed.

There were many witnesses to the bank robbery who came forward to testify against her. But the other robbers were dead.

After the verdict was read, Carter told jurors: "As to the verdict you've arrived at, it is well within the evidence of this case, and it will be accepted...You have done the best you can under the circumstances that were presented to you."

He told them, "Now that you have arrived at your judgment, do not try to second-guess yourselves. Judgment day is a difficult time."

The verdict was read in a packed courtroom. In a tense atmosphere, the foreman of the jury—William Wright, a retired Air Force colonel—handed the sealed envelope to the judge's crier, Howard Frank, who passed it to the court clerk, then to Carter.

As spectators seemed to hold their breath, the judge examined the verdict and handed it to clerk Eugene Driscoll, who arose and read in a calm voice: "We the jury, find Patricia Campbell Hearst, the defendant at the bar, guilty as to count one of the indictment, guilty as to count two of the indictment."

The two counts were armed bank robbery and use of a firearm to commit a felony. The penalties are 25 years on the first count, 10 on the second.

Miss Hearst, who strode into court quickly, sat facing jurors and did not turn to see her family until nearly the end of the 15-minute proceedings. She turned and looked at them wistfully, then turned away, conferred briefly with her attorney.

The jury had been escorted out of the courtroom by the time the doors were unlocked and reporters began their stampede to telephones. The panelists, who had been urged by the judge to meet with the press, declined to have a news conference and went instead to the hotel where they had been sequestered.

The jury's decision ended one of the most dramatic criminal trials in memory. In the end, it came down to which of two portraits of Patricia Hearst the jury found more believable.

'RESPECT' JURY, HARRISES SAY

Associated Press

Two Symbionese Liberation Army radicals indicted with Patricia Hearst in Los Angeles on 11 felony counts said Saturday they felt respect for the jurors who convicted the newspaper heiress of bank robbery.

It remained uncertain, however, whether SLA members William and Emily Harris would stand trial with Miss Hearst on the charges, which include assault, robbery and kidnaping.

In a statement following Miss Hearst's conviction, Los Angeles County Dist. Atty. John Van de Kamp said the newspaper heiress would be brought to Los Angeles as soon as possible to face trial.

He told newsmen that U.S. District Court Judge Oliver Carter had said that Miss Hearst, if convicted, could be brought to Los Angeles prior to sentencing.

But U.S. Atty. James Browning, prosecutor in the San Francisco trial, said Miss Hearst wouldn't be turned over to Los Angeles authorities until after her sentencing—and perhaps not even then. He did not elaborate.

thing offhand . . . both (U.S. Atty. James L.) Browning and I went all out."

Browning, the chief prosecutor, termed the verdict "entirely proper, and I'm very pleased with it."

"I see it as a bank robbery trial," Browning told reporters, saying he had "nothing but sympathy" for the Hearst family. "I have children of my own. I think Patricia Hearst can straighten herself out, and I hope she does so."

Emily Harris' lawyer Leonard Weinglass, said Miss Hearst's conviction "vindicates the position we have taken all along."

In Los Angeles, Dist. Atty. John Van De Kamp said Miss Hearst would be brought taken there as soon as possible to face state charges of robbery and kidnaping along with William and Emily Harris.

"She turned her back on people and chose to go the route of wealth and power and deception," he said. "She wrongfully accused her friends (the Harrises) and slandered her dead lover and vilified the political organization she chose to join."

Dr. Louis Jolyon West, a defense psychiatrist whose reports were credited by Miss hearst's lawyers as providing a blueprint for the defense, told reporters, "I feel bad about the outcome and regretful. I am not an emotional character but from my point of view there was more information the jury could have become acquainted with

Details of kidnap, 'conversion,' flight

Patty's trial: the background story

By WALLACE TURNER
New York Times Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Patricia Hearst's 39-day trial served to put some flesh on the almost bare bones of the sensational story of her kidnaping, alleged conversion to the doctrines of the self-styled Symbionese Liberation Army and life underground for 19 months as captive and then as fugitive from the indictment.

The trial concluded Saturday with the jury's guilty verdict.

Miss Hearst testified in her own defense. At first, it appeared that she was ready to tell all, to incriminate others without exception. It was not to be that way.

On Feb. 23, she took the Fifth Amendment 42 times to avoid being required to incriminate herself. Fundamentally, she was refusing to talk about anything that happened to her in the year from September 1974, when Jack Scott, the sports radical, dropped her off in Las Vegas, Nev. after an auto trip across country from Pennsylvania, to Sept. 18, 1975 when an FBI agent and a San Francisco policeman burst into her apartment here to arrest her and Wendy Yoshimura, another fugitive, who lived there with her and Steven Soliah, who now is on trial for bank robbery in Sacramento.

Some images of events flickered in the trial. . .

What happened to Miss Hearst in that year is unclear. Some images of events flickered in the trial, as when it seemed that she had broken with William and Emily Harris, sole survivors of the SLA group that had kidnapeped her.

The prosecutor, James L. Browning Jr., argued to the jury that Miss Hearst had broken with the Harrises and had drifted away from the brutal revolutionary doctrine of the SLA to adopt a "feminist revolutionary" political philosophy.

To understand all the convolutions of the Patricia Hearst story, it is best to go back to the point where she became a figure for American folklore, the night that William Randolph Hearst's granddaughter was dragged in her nightclothes, screaming, to be held for ransom, by a group of young people led by an escaped convict.

The convict, Donald DeFreeze, a black, had nothing in common with the others who were white, the children of middle-class Americans, but also the children of the Vietnam War.

It was those eight who planned and brought off the successful abduction of Miss Hearst at about 9 p.m. on Feb. 4, 1974. The SLA snatched her with the thought of trading her off for Russell Little and Joseph Remero, two others of the SLA crowd who were in jail, charged with the murder of Dr. Marcus Foster, the Oakland superintendent of schools. The SLA was first heard from after Foster's murder. A Communique No. 1 claimed "credit" for murdering Foster with cyanide tipped bullets. Remiro and Little have since been tried and convicted and are serving life terms.

It appeared she was ready to tell —but it wasn't so

Miss Hearst had been living with her lover and fiance, Steven Weed, 26, one-time radical at Princeton University. They had met when he was a teacher in the high school she attended for a year in Hillsborough.

The prosecution's [illegible] that Miss Hearst was [illegible] themes of disenchantment [illegible] and then [illegible] kidnapping to work out a way [illegible] that [illegible]

The prosecution's medical and mental experts leaned heavily on this view of Miss Hearst's unhappiness, for it was a strong element of their assertion that Miss Hearst was "a rebel seeking a cause" and was "ripe for the plucking."

Miss Hearst said she had been thrown into the trunk of a car, after being bound and gagged, driven a short way and thrown onto the floor of another car. She was driven for an hour or more in the second car, she said, and then led, blindfolded, into a house and put into a closet.

She said she stayed in there for weeks, and it was eventually estimated that she was in this closet in a house in Daly City, a suburb, for about three and a half weeks.

She told of being "interrogated" by DeFreeze and of making the early tape recordings that her captors used to tell her parents and the world that she was alive.

The recordings were played to the jury, all but one of them by the defense.

The SLA realized very early that the ransom of Little and Remiro was out of the question, for public officials ranging down from then-Gov. Ronald Reagan said it would not be considered. So the kidnapping effort turned to an attempt to make the Hearst family give $5 million worth of food to feed the poor.

This worked out to become the "People in Need" program.

The PIN program became a discredited administrative mess. But it cost the Hearsts around $2 million, and it failed to get their daughter back.

In the trial it has been disclosed that the group lived until late March in Daly City, and then moved to another hideout on Golden Gate Avenue in San Francisco, within sight of the federal courthouse, a mile or so away, where the national headquarters for Miss Hearst's search was based.

The government accepted Miss Hearst's story of being held in the closet at Daly City, although one of the government medical witnesses, Dr. Joel Fort, seemed to be trying to make it sound like a pleasant experience. However, the government did not accept her statement of being held similarly in a tiny closet in the Golden Gate apartment.

By the time of the move [illegible] the government contended Miss Hearst [illegible] a member of the SLA [illegible] close to it [illegible] had to [illegible] the closet.

[illegible] was that she was held prisoner in that closet until April 1. She was kept blindfolded, she said, and on that day was asked by by DeFreeze if she wanted to be turned free in a safe place or stay with the SLA.

"I didn't believe him," she testified. She said he had earlier told her the choice was "stay or be killed" and it was really that choice that was in her mind when she told him she would stay.

Miss Hearst testified that then her blindfold was taken off and instruction began in teaching her to use weapons. She said she even stood watches through the night as did the others.

Some tape recordings were made at the Golden Gate apartment, including one on April 1 in which Miss Hearst's voice announced to the world that although offered freedom, she had decided to "stay and fight."

She testified that this was in fact a script written for her to read by Angela Atwood, one of the eight.

Miss Hearst's first foray outside the apartment was to the bank robbery. The SLA picked the bank for its good getaway route, and the fact that it had surveillance cameras, which would show her in the robbery, Miss Hearst said.

The government opened its case by presenting evidence about the robbery. Witnesses said that two of the four women robbers and the one man had M-1 carbines and that one SLA woman — Nancy Ling Perry — had shot two men who came into the bank and tried to leave. Both survived and both testified.

The bank guard, Eldon Shea, testified that Miss Hearst had told him to get on the floor and threatened to blow his head off if he did not.

On cross-examination, Bailey managed to becloud Shea's testimony. But the defense lawyer was not able to shake the identification made by a witness the government provided on its rebuttal. This was Zigurd Berzins, operator of a radio equipment store across the street.

Berzins said he did not see the face of the woman in the bank, but in looking at a crude, jerky film the government produced from the bank surveillance camera negatives, he pointed to the figure of Miss Hearst as the woman he saw.

"I don't care if it's Patricia Hearst or who it is," he said, "that's the woman I saw."

This was strong medicine for the prosecution, for Miss Hearst had said in her testimony that she had not known if her gun was loaded.

The defense — including Miss Hearst's own statements — asserted that she had been told before the robbery that she "would be shot on the spot" if she did anything to frustrate the robbery.

Miss Hearst said that after the robbery, she was given one-ninth of a share of it to hold, she said.

A few days later, Mrs. Atwood wrote another script for Miss Hearst to read into the tape recorder. This one denied that Miss Hearst has been brainwashed or coerced, and contended that she was a willing participant in the bank robbery.

Shortly after that, Miss Hearst said, the group moved to another apartment, and then soon left for Los Angeles, about May 1, 1974. They lived first in a motel, then in a small empty house. On May 16, 1974 Miss Hearst went with Mr. and Mrs. Harris to Mel's Sporting Goods store in Inglewood. Harris was accused by a clerk of shoplifting and a struggle ensued.

Miss Hearst, across the street in a parking lot, saw the Harrises struggling with the clerks and picked up Harris's M-1 which had been altered to make it automatic. She said she fired it, and the recoil knocked it out of her hand. She picked it up, and emptied it onto the street. Then she picked up her own carbine and fired two shots from it.

Patty's trial: damaging statements

"I can't believe that I did what I did," she testified.

After making their getaway, Miss Hearst said they had gone to a motel in Anaheim on May 17, 1974, and had turned on the television set. They saw the live coverage of the shootout where their six companions were killed.

The story of what happened to Miss Hearst after that can be pieced together from the brief glimpses in her testimony and from documents that the government introduced.

She said she and the Harrises went back to San Francisco and Berkeley where they were met by Josephine Soliah and James Kilgore, two persons who have been sought for months by the authorities for questioning. Miss Hearst said she met Jack Scott at the Soliah-Kilgore apartment.

She said that Scott and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Scott of Las Vegas, drove her east in the summer of 1974.

The Scotts took her to an apartment in New York City, she said, and then farmhouses in Pennsylvania and New York state.

It was in that period that she met Miss Yoshimura, she said. Scott and Miss Hearst drove alone back to Las Vegas, where he left her. And that was where her story faded behind a constant response of Fifth Amendment claims.

But from other evidence in the trial, it is plain that Miss Hearst lived for a time in Sacramento.

Miss Hearst's picture was on a Sacramento City College identity card that the prosecution put into evidence. However, Carter refused to allow into evidence a hand-drawn chart of the interior of a bank in Sacramento because a woman had died in an area bank robbery. The judge said he did not want the jury to begin thinking Miss Hearst had been involved in a homicide.

The judge did allow into evidence a typed list that had Miss Hearst's fingerprints on it. It was headed "bakery" but really was plainly a detailed plan of the steps to take to rob a bank.

Among other documents put into evidence was the so-called Tania interview, which was damaging to Miss Hearst. Some items were written in her own hand. She testified that this was the product of the Harrises' desire to write a book and that her answers had been dictated, in principle, by what they wanted her to say. Altogether, if true, the "interview" described how Miss Hearst, the kidnapping victim, became Tania, the SLA member and bank robber.

Three things that happened soon after Miss Hearst's arrest, caused her defense problems. She was photographed, giving a clenched fist salute; she said this was because Mrs. Harris expected it of her.

She listed her occupation when booked into the San Mateo County Jail as "urban guerrilla" and again said that Mrs. Harris had expected it.

Then she made damaging statements to Patricia Tobin, when her old friend visited her at the jail. She said, for instance, that hers was now "a revolutionary feminist perspective" and that she was very sorry that she had been found and arrested.

Miss Hearst explained to the defense psychiatrists that she had talked this way because Mrs. Harris had been a few feet away in the visiting room. But the government produced evidence that Mrs. Harris was not in the room at that time.

The defense sought to keep the tape-recorded interview from being played to the jury, but Carter allowed it.

After it's over, jury members keep silence

By MARK L. KAUTZ

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The seven women and five men of the Patricia Hearst jury steadfastly maintained an agreed-upon silence after finding the newspaper heiress guilty of bank robbery Saturday.

Juror Marilyn Wentz, 36, said that the panel had agreed not to discuss the case. "I am satisfied with my own decision," she said, adding she was glad to have served on the jury.

Only one juror, Oscar McGregor, responded to newsmen pressing for comment as the panelists left their hotel. When asked whether he was sorry Miss Hearst had been convicted, he replied, "No," and brushed past reporters.

In San Mateo, Andrew Conway, husband of juror Charlotte Conway, said, "Right now, she's just happy to be home and to be a mother to her children again. She's been away a long time abnd everything's a bit confused."

Judith Braunstein said her husband, Bruce, had indicated the panel agreed not to discuss the case for at least a week. "Everybody's really spent," she said. "Right now, there's just nothing left."

An alternate juror, Mary Nieman, who wasn't privy to the deliberations, later said she was "disappointed" in the verdict, but she declined to elaborate.

The jurors rejected Judge Oliver J. Carter's suggestion that they meet with the press after the verdict. Instead, the panelists immediately returned by bus to pick up belongings at the nearby hotel where they had been sequestered during the eight-week trial.

Most lowered their eyes and appeared somber as they entered the hotel. Apparently not wishing to be buttonholed individually, all 12 crowded into one elevator and turned their backs on dozens of newsmen and cameramen.

The jurors later tried to slip out of the hotel individually through the hotel garage or side doors where they were met by their families inprivate autos.

All but one of the jurors was married, and most had families of their own. In all, the combined jurors had at least two dozen children — one man had seven and two women were mothers of four, a fact that defense attorneys believed was in their favor.

The average age of the jurors was 39. The youngest was a 24-year-old newlywed and the oldest was a 55-year-old retired Air Force colonel.

Four women are housewives, but other occupations were diverse, ranging from a self-employed potter to an aircraft mechanic, stewardess, postal worker and receptionist.

Verdict 'clears my son'

LITCHFIELD, Conn. (AP) — The mother of a slain Symbionese Liberation Army "soldier" said Saturday that Patricia Hearst's conviction on a bank robbery charge clears her son of an accusation that he sexually assaulted the newspaper heiress.

"My son was a revolutionary, not a rapist," said Virginia Wolfe, mother of William Wolfe, an SLA member who died in a shootout with Los Angeles police in May 1974.

"I know that my gentle Willie was not a rapist," she said.

IN courtroom testimony, Miss Hearst said Wolfe was the first of several SLA members who attacked her sexually.

That testimony contradicted a taped communique that Miss Hearst, as the revolutionary "Tania," issued from the underground in which she declared love for Wolfe and described him as "the gentlest, most beautiful man I've ever known."

She said she had not been closely following developments in the trial.

"My son is dead. He has been for nearly two years. It's all beyond me," she said.

Mexico 200-mile rule bad omen

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Maritime Editor

THE WATERFRONT

If other Latin American countries follow Mexico's lead and establish 200-mile territorial jurisdictions, American tuna boaters couldn't afford to leave the breakwaters of San Pedro or San Diego.

So claims John Royal, executive secretary of Local 33, Fisherman's Union, ILWU, in San Pedro.

Royal, a former Los Angeles Harbor commissioner, said Mexico's recent constitutional amendment would force American fishermen to pay exorbitantly high license fees to fish within 200 miles of the Mexican coast.

Mexico is expected to start enforcing the 200-mile restriction about June 5, Royal says. He fears the Mexican action could be the first step in expulsion of U.S. West Coast fishermen from foreign waters.

The Mexican government has not yet established its schedule of fees to be charged foreign vessels to fish within the 200-mile zone. If the fees are prohibitively high or the government decides to ban all foreign vessels from fishing in the zone, approximately 2,000 U.S. fishermen and 100 boats would be "beached," Royal says.

"As some of the 10 or 11 Latin American nations develop their own facilities and the ability to harvest raw resources in their offshore waters, there could be a complete phaseout of the American-flag tuna vessels in the years to come," Royal believes.

He cites as an example that Mexico is now building six new large ships to add to its fleet of 22 tuna boats. The new craft are expected to be fishing-ready by the end of the year.

Currently being considered by the U.S. Congress is a bill to extend America's fishing jurisdiction limit to 200 miles. The measure is urged and supported by East Coast fishermen, who claim foreign fishing fleets are depleting some Atlantic fish resources almost to the point of extinction.

Royal contends that if the bill becomes law, it will be a paper victory for the Atlantic fishing industry but would sound the death knell for the Pacific fishing fleet and deal a crippling blow to the Southern California fish-canning industry.

Many West Coast fishing industry leaders believe that if the U.S. adopts a 200-mile limit, it will prompt Latin American countries, especially those along the west coast of South America, to do likewise. Much tuna taken by U.S. West Coast purse seiners is netted within 200 miles of the South American coast. Closing those ocean waters could result in a virtual shutdown of the U.S. West Coast commercial fishing fleet. It would be economically unfeasable to pay the expected high license fees bound to be levied by the Latin American ocean-fronting nations.

Wait and see

A spokesman for the Army Corps of Engineers in Washington, D. C., has told the Waterfront the corps has taken a "wait and see" attitude toward action on a Coast Guard request it be allowed to establish shipping lanes over federal offshore oil leases outside the entrance to Long Beach and Los Angeles harbors.

The corps, said the spokesman, wants to see what the oil companies intend to do about anchoring drilling ships, building platforms, creating floating or nonfloating islands or other structures within the proposed ship safety lanes.

The corps' Washington headquarters was asked to review the matter after Brig Gen. Richard Connell, commander of the corps for the South Pacific, which includes the two Southland ports, recommended that the Coast Guard's request be denied. The spokesman said the corps has not ruled out the request by Rear Adm. Joseph G. Steele, commander of the 11th Coast Guard District headquartered in Long Beach, to establish the shipping lanes—described by one waterfront wit as an ocean extension of the Long Beach Freeway.

The admiral wants to protect ships entering or leaving the harbors by establishing an inbound and an outbound lane, called fairways. The proposed fairways would be from 1 to 1½ miles wide and extend about 18 miles out to sea toward the east end of Catalina Island. The path of the lanes would pass across two parcels of ocean area where the Department of the Interior has granted leases to oil companies to conduct exploratory operations for gas and oil.

If the safety lanes are established, the oil companies could not locate any drilling operations within them.

The Coast Guard and the oil companies are at loggerheads.

The companies want the lanes located four miles to the west—not over the leased parcels.

The Coast Guard contends that would result in additional hazards to navigation because the lanes would then have to be crossed by thousands of pleasure craft going to and from Catalina.

The Coast Guard suggests that the oil companies locate their drilling rigs outside the lanes and slant-drill into the oil field, but the oil companies claim the subsea oil fields are so close to the surface that the wells would have to be drilled almost horizontally—a feat not technically possible.

However, a production engineer with Long Beach's Department of Oil disputes that allegation and claims the wells can be drilled from outside the lanes and "whipstocked" to bottom out in the suspected oil-rich zones beneath the shipping lanes.

Little risk seen in new drilling

By RON ROACH
Associated Press

SACRAMENTO — Renewed drilling sought by Standard Oil in the Santa Barbara Channel would not greatly increase the risk of an oil spill — nor would it provide much oil.

Those are conclusions of an environmental impact report prepared for the State Lands Commission.

The draft report was received last week by the Senate Government Organization Committee. The Lands Commission will hold a hearing May 8 in Santa Barbara.

No new drilling has been allowed on state leases since the huge 1969 Santa Barbara Channel oil spill, which occurred on the federally controlled outer continental shelf. The ban was lifted in 1974.

A LAME-DUCK State Lands Commission in late 1974 approved new drilling, but the new commission rescinded the vote in 1975.

Atlantic Richfield won approval from the Lands Commission for 17 new wells, but the Coastal Commission rejected the 17 wells and that rejection was upheld by the state Supreme Court.

Standard wants to drill 36 wells using four existing platforms in the Carpinteria and Summerland offshore oil fields.

The report, prepared by Woodward-Clyde Consultants, said the chances of an oil spill or blowout from new drilling are slight — not "inevitable" — but the effects of one "cannot be disregarded."

With proper safeguards that Standard intends to employ, the report said, "few, if any, significant irreversible natural environmental changes are likely to occur."

However, the report raised the question of whether state approval of new drilling at Carpinteria and Summerland would have a snow-balling effect.

On the benefits from renewed drilling on the state's energy situation, the report said it would make "a small contribution toward meeting anticipated demand for oil and gas consumption

In 1980, the anticipated peak of recovery, the maximum daily oil production from the two fields would be 31,000 barrels

Bond rejects support of teacher political group

Former Assemblyman Bill Bond, Republican candidate for Congress in the 34th District, said Saturday he has told a teachers' political organization that he would not seek its endorsement or support "because they have rigorously pursued their own self-interest to the detriment of the rest of society."

Bond is running for the GOP nomination against Dan Lungren and Art Jacobson for the seat of incumbent Democrat Mark W. Hannaford. The 34th District includes East Long Beach, Signal Hill, Lakewood, Bellflower, Cerritos, Artesia, Hawaiian Gardens and a western portion of Orange County.

Bond said he appeared Tuesday before an endorsement committee of teacher representatives from several school districts, organized by the Teachers Association of Long Beach.

He said he could not in good conscience accept help from any teachers union or association because he feels "they have been irresponsible in their selection of candidates to support in the past, their demands for the right to strike are against the public best interest and teacher strikes during the last year were illegal and should have been treated as such.

"Similar to any other special interest group, public employe labor leaders want to know what you are going to do for them if you're elected. I won't hide my true philosophy to get a few votes. I will support fair pay and benefits for both active and retired employes and of course I will work to improve educational opportunities for our children, as I did in the Legislature.

"However, one of my chief goals is to find an effective means to curb the undue political influence of big labor, big business and other major pressure groups such as teachers' unions. The power exercised by these organizations over elected officials is one of the fundamental causes of bad government at all levels."

BOND SAID that teachers would never approve of someone's going into the classroom to instruct children who does not possess extensive training in education but "their unions have consistently supported totally inexperienced candidates over those who are well qualified simply to get another commitment of a vote to give them the right to strike.

"At the end of this pipeline we get people in office like Governor Pat Brown Jr. (sic), whose first priority was to provide collective bargaining rights to teachers. Yet to this day he has directed no attention to the critical problem of reforming and equalizing school taxes."

Calling teachers' organizations "particularly irresponsible" in demanding the right to strike, Bond said "It would be an intolerable situation for union bosses to be able to shut down schools or any other vital public service.

"Labor leaders and liberal politicians like Congressman Mark Hannaford claim these employes are 'second class' citizens without this 'right.' I say this is nonsense. The public has rights, too, and these rights should come first.

BILL BOND
Tells Union Views

"It is a very real question of basic philosophy," Bond said. "That these unions don't understand they are a part of what's wrong with government was never more clearly in evidence than when New York's teachers went out on strike during the height of that city's financial crisis. Of all the special-interest groups it is the teachers and other public employe groups who should be most concerned with improving government. But if they are not then it is easy to understand why government is in such bad shape."

Bond said his purpose in telling the teachers' representatives where he stands was not to offend them, "but to make them think. I know that laying the truth on the line will cost me politically but it is time for the big pressure groups to stop dealing with government solely on the basis of 'what's in it for me,' because there is a lot more at stake than merely paychecks and personal advantage."

Brown may be 'fading light'

By GIL BAILEY
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON—The popular feeling here is that California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.'s entry into the presidential race will make it much more difficult for any Democrat to win the nomination by way of the primaries instead of through trading at the convention.

However, the popular thinking in Washington, D.C.—the theory six months ago was that Jimmy Carter didn't have as much of a chance as Sen. George McGovern in 1972 in seeking the nomination—has been known to be wrong.

So there is a possibility that Gov. Brown's candidacy will be one of those little noticed nor long remembered by the voters.

Rep. Morris Udall, another candidate with a certain interest in the matter, advanced one reason last week why the Brown candidacy, and the candidacy of Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, may make little difference in the race.

"Voters want to have a hand in determining who is going to be nominee," Udall said. "They won't vote just to honor someone."

IT'S UDALL'S ANNOUNCED theory that Brown cannot translate his personal popularity as governor into presidential votes unless he becomes a nationwide candidate.

And California governors, no matter how popular (witness Ronald Reagan and Earl Warren), have had their problems translating in-state popularity into out-of-state votes.

ANALYSIS

Brown may have some particular problems, due both to his style and to his relatively little national exposure.

In addition he got started late and even last week said his campaign would follow "sequential order," meaning no plans had been made.

The Brown personality, and he has more personality than programs, has not had much national exposure.

He speaks of the voters "disaffection" with Washington D.C. and with big spending programs. He does not, however, say which programs he would eliminate and which he would keep.

He speaks of scarcity combined with increasing demands but again he does not specify how he would reduce demand nor allocate scarcity.

BASICALLY, BROWN has practiced in running California what Ronald Reagan preached. When Reagan reached the national scene, it was what he preached that has all but destroyed his campaign.

For Brown to take his casual life style to New Jersey for example, although his accent from south San Francisco should be at home there, may be more difficult than the political prophets believe.

Finally, what is Brown, a liberal, a moderate, or a conservative? From his record he is much closer to being a Jimmy Carter than a Morris Udall or a Frank Church, and a great deal of the Brown support at the moment in California comes from the Wallace wing of the Democratic Party.

The fate of the Brown candidacy may be settled during the April 6 primaries in New York and Wisconsin. If Morris Udall falls by the wayside, as so many others have in those primaries, then the liberals must seek another candidate at least as a holding action for Hubert Humphrey. It could be Brown.

Lightning might strike the Brown campaign or again lightning may have already struck Carter and it is too late to stop him.

Leaders in crisis:

Adams was outspoken American

By SID MOODY
Associated Press Writer

Not everyone loved John Adams as much as Abigail.

Theirs was a match that distinguished the institution of martimony. His was a presidency that infuriated many, at home and abroad. In truth, Adams was not an easy man to know, hence to like. This was no little due to his principles, which he clung to as stubbornly as the roots of an oak to his native New England soil.

By the time of the Boston Massacre in 1770, John Adams was an outspoken supporter and spokesman for the American cause. Yet he took the unpopular course of defending the British soldiers who had killed five Bostonians on the principle of equal justice to all. When he took the oath of office as America's second president March 4, 1797, Adams characteristically wore not only a plain gray suit but buckled on a sword for the occasion.

The sword symbolized the peril the new nation faced. France, her former ally, was undergoing her own revolution, and her radical leaders were trying to goad the Americans into joining their war with Great Britain. The war had deeply divided American politics. The Republicans, led by Adams' Vice President, Thomas Jefferson, were sympathetic with France and what they consider a revolution against tyranny. The Federalists and their chief ideologue, Alexander Hamilton, favored the British as defenders of order and tradition against atheistic anarchy. It was Adams' hope to stay in the middle, pledging in his inaugural address to conduct a "system of neutrality and impartiality among the belligerent powers of Europe." It would not be easy.

REPUBLICANS AND FEDERALISTS 'DISCUSS' EUROPEAN SITUATION

THE BRITISH were impressing American sailors into service aboard their warships by the hundreds. Spain was plotting to seize American territory in the Gulf Coast area, and the French were alternately bullying American merchant ships at sea and lobbying brazenly for American support within the country. Into this combustible mixture dropped the "XYZ Affair."

Adams had sent a three-man commission to Paris to negotiate a settlement. A coded letter from the commissioners informed Adams that they had been approached by three French agents, identified only as X, Y and Z, who said France's revolutionary government would not negotiate without a $3 million "sweetener," loans and a guarantee that America would resist reapproachment with Britain. When news of the proposal was strategically released by the President, the Republicans were embarrassed into silence and the country rang with the defiant toast: "Millions for defense, but not a cent for tribute!"

Congress authorized for the first time a standing army of 10,000 men. Merchant vessels were empowered to be armed and seize any French warships or privateers found in American waters. The treaty of 1778 which had brought France to America's side during the Revolution was abrogated by Congress. The President weighed declaring war on France in an increasingly bellicose atmosphere.

AS IS OFTEN the case in American history, one victim of the crisis was civil liberty. Over the strident protests of the Republicans who declared them unconstitutional, Congress passed the Alien and Sedition Acts, which made aliens subject to seizure or deportation in a wartime situation and declared it a crime to write or speak "seditiously or maliciously" against the United States.

Adams did not initiate the measures, but he did support them, mindful of the 30,000 Frenchmen in America, many of whom were active agents of the revolution, not to mention many more anti-English Irishmen.

It was in this climate of near hysteria, that a little known incident known as Fries' Rebellion occurred in 1798. Fries was a vocal auctioneer in Pennsylvania, where popular feeling, egged on by the Republicans, was high against a federal property tax Congress had passed to help finance the new army and an expanded warship building campaign. When two Pennsylvania Dutchmen and a militia captain were arrested for refusing to pay the tax, Fries and a company of several hundred armed men stormed the jail where they were held and freed them. Fries in turn was captured, tried and, with two others, sentenced to hang for treason.

THE FEDERALISTS, Adams' party, were vehement that the sentence be carried out. Hamilton, whom Adams called the "bastard brat of a Scottish peddler," had been intriguing against the President for war on France and to enhance his power in the party, which was delighted at the show of national force against Fries. Supreme Court Justice James Iredell said if the guilty were not punished "anarchy will ride triumphant and all lovers of order, decency, truth and justice will be trampled underfoot."

To dissent from his party at such a time would have brought condemnation from the Federalists that Adams was siding with the Republicans, who were vehemently against taxes, especially to finance war on France.

Adams' cool-headed diplomacy successfully avoided war with France. But the intriguing Hamilton split the Federalist party in the 1800 presidential election, which Jefferson won. Adams, apparently not even invited to his successor's inaugural, retired to his home in Quincy, Mass., at peace that, as ever, what he had done was for country, not party.

Next: Thomas Jefferson.

George Hamilton on home-wreckers

NEW YORK — "The only Hollywood home-wrecker left," said the "best-dressed" vice president and fashion director of the Sole Leather Industry, George Hamilton, "is my close friend Warren Beatty.

"Warren is close to being a male fatale. He's had a couple of situations where there were husbands." George names them but not for publication. "I wouldn't ever want Warren to baby-sit for me!"

Tall, slim 36-year-old George, who recently made a lot of money on the stock market buying on margin ("In one day I made as much as I made in pictures in two years") was in a soul-baring mood as he had a prosciuto and melon lunch at the Regency.

"Really, there's no such thing as a home-wrecker," he decided. "The home has already been wrecked and somebody takes advantage. If my wife ever cheated I'd not blame the guy but my own neglect. Warren Beatty," George smiled, with what seemed like admiration, "works very quietly, and he's still a bachelor."

As for women home-wreckers, George insisted as he sipped an Italian aperitif, that he'd never met one.

"The women control the parties in California, and when they hear about a home-wrecker type, they don't invite her. That woman is unheard of for a year. The way for a woman to be a success in Hollywood is to be nice to the women, not to the men.

"The women," George added, "also have the money. It's unfortunate that they inherited it, but they've got it."

The one-time playboy, once linked with the leading beauties and a president's daughter, says his wife, Alana, has domesticated him exactly as he wished.

"I put on a nightshirt and get into bed with my son, 17½ months old, our dog and about eight books, and watch TV, and then I fall asleep. I got married because I wanted a wife, a home and a child, and I have them and I'm happy.

"My wife has her own life-style. She's in TM. I haven't the discipline for it. I'm afraid I'd go to sleep."

WARREN BEATTY

GEORGE HAMILTON IV

With unusual candor, George said he became a spokesman and troubleshooter for the Leather Council so he could have a "secure future."

"One way to succeed in Hollywood is not to need them. When you need them, you sacrifice, you do things that hurt you," he said. Now he's negotiating a 10-year deal, has offices in Chicago and Boston and zips around the country mentioning that now is the time to buy leather-soled shoes.

Prices are going up, he lets us know.

"I've never done a commercial. You never believe those guys who say they use a certain product. But leather I've used all my life. I give them 20 days a year. I travel. I'm now convinced that actors should travel more and politicians should travel less."

With the leather job and stock-market profits, Hamilton says, "I don't really need the movies to survive."

Nevertheless, he raised $3 million to produce and star in a picture about the oil fields called "Scandal" to be filmed this year.

"If the stock market hadn't gone up," he admits, "I'd be working for somebody else now. I took big chances, and I can't lose now."

An interviewer must remember that Hamilton is a spoof artist. When he first went to Hollywood broke, he drove a '39 Rolls and spoke of his Palm Beach mansion.

"I couldn't afford not to have that car because I rented it our for $100 a day. It was working, and I wasn't. People thought I was worth millions, and I didn't want to disappoint them. Hollywood creates its own myths and believes them."

One final word from the leather merchant: "Never have dates with a producer's wife."

Today's Best Laugh: Some H'wood marriages consist of a guy taking out a girl once or twice before the wedding, and once or twice afterward.

Wish I'd Said That: If you don't go into debt these days you're probably doing something illegal. — Bob Burton.

Remembered Quote: "It's hard to celebrate a 35th wedding anniversary — it's too soon to brag and too late to complain."

Earl's Pearls: Someone described a Broadway hanger-on: "I'll say one thing for him — he never met a celebrity he didn't like."

Desi Arnaz once told an interviewer that one of his Broadway shows was "Too Many Girls." Lucille Ball spoke up: "That was also the story of your life."

Arts show slated

With new exhibits, new entertainment and a new name, the Long Beach Arts, crafts and Hobby Show will be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday, April 2-4, in the Arena.

For the first time, commercial exhibitors will take part in the annual show, and will be permitted to sell handcrafted items and supplies.

The commercial exhibits will be separated from the traditional amateur hobbyists and their displays, which this year will number about 160, and will feature such things as dulcimer making, leaded stained glass, calligraphy, dolls and woodcarvers.

Artists and craftsmen, both commercial and amateur, will give continuous demonstrations of their skills, and there also will be a continuous stage show, featuring an old-fashioned musical review, "It's a Grand Old Flag."

There also will be entertainment by a 30-voice choir from the Society for the Preservation of Barber Soop Quartet Singing in America.

Show hours will be from noon to 9 p.m. on both Friday and Saturday, and from noon to 6 p.m. on Sunday. Admission will be $1 for adults. Children aged 12 and under and senior citizens 65 years and older will be admitted free

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

FORECAST FOR MONDAY

Your birthday today: Career-building occupies most of this year's time and energy. Your natural aggressiveness is dramatized by pressure or inspiration from little crises. Relationships are susceptible to occasional failures in communications or cooperation; think about every move, however trivial. Avoid expensive commitments. Today's natives have a knack for finances and related subjects, as well as a theatrical flair.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Be satisfied with minimum business progress. Take the day off if feasible. You can't do much about the comments of associates. Remain unruffled.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): So-called silent partners become querulous. Abandon schemes involving casdual travel. Charity begins at home, protect your own welfare.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): An intense and inspiring pace is followed by much success in personal and public enterprises. Quit while you're ahead and avoid excess.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Reject efforts to embroil you in disputes. Concentrate on the job. Loved ones don't realize what you're going through; be easy on them.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Present and future resources ride on trivial decisions. Buy only what you need. Let others display temper, but you maintain your poise.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Use sales resistance as a shield where group funds are concerned. Paying careful attention brings useful information. Be selective in business deals.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Discipline your response to older folk, avoiding harsh action. Listen to the whole story of family incident. Travel with sensible precaution.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Work of any significant quality is all uphill. You must cope with people who won't accept things as they are. Stay out of legal procedures.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Ancient chickens come home to a new roost. Learn from the experience without recrimination. Follow a low-key course; don't even think of speculation.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Ask no favors, although many are asked of you. See to neglected maintenance work. Whether to buy new or repair the old is a difficult decision today.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your theories are under fire from all sides. Little is gained by an immediate defense. Renewed resolution comes later. Consider how to improve your health.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): It's not time to get involved in anybody's gamble or expedition, consider each situation and your natural reaction in context. Children create problems.

Transistor plant burns

PHOENIX (AP) — Damage has been estimated at $150,000 from a fire brought under control Saturday by 130 fire fighters in a chemical shop of a Motorola transistor and component plant that could have forced evacuation of the surrounding area.

The Fire Department sent 29 units and kept the blaze away from lethal chemicals which could have created deadly fumes and forced evacuating a one-mile surrounding area, authorities said.

No one was seriously injured in the fire, but six firemen suffered minor acid burns and two Motorola employes, Jules Nelson, 47, of suburban Glendale, and Matthew MacKenzie, 57, of Scottsdale, were treated for smoke inhalation.

Vats of acid and cyanide caused a hazard in bringing the fire under control.

Rock group coming

Bachman-Turner Overdrive, which hit the top of the charts with "Takin' Care of Business," "Let It Ride," "Rolling on Down the Line," "Hey You" and "You Ain't Seen Nothing Yet," will be making their only appearance this year in Long Beach at the Arena April 9. Tickets are on sale at the Arena box office for the show, which also features Wishbone Ash.

Fusion of soul music, jazz seen

NASHVILLE (AP) — Trumpeter Freddie Hubbard who won a Grammy award in 1973 for the traditional jazz album "First Light," says a fusion of soul and jazz is the only way jazz will be able to survive.

"Jazz isn't for dancing, but now you can dance to it," he says. "We're going back into a funky thing, a soulful groove to pull back people. It's bad because we're slowing down the creativity. But we're pulling people back into the music so that maybe they'll go back into our music and follow it up, and then maybe we can create, not compromise."

In 1959, when he was 20, Hubbard came to New York from Indianapolis to break into the jazz world.

"In the olden days, people thought of jazz as a kind of subculture. It was a place where you would go; there would be a lot of smoking, a lot of drinking and a lot of women.

"I think the musicians are getting more respect now. Most of them have been to schools. They know something about Western music, and they can go to schools and discuss jazz with people who teach."

Santa Clara park features nostalgia

SANTA CLARA (AP)— About 19,000 people attended the opening-day ceremonies Saturday at Great America, a 65-acre amusement park combining turn-of-the-century nostalgia with dozens of rides, restaurants, gift shops and live shows.

Marriott Corp., a hotel and restaurant conglomerate, spent $50 million to construct the park. A second, identical park will open May 29 near Chicago, and a third is planned for the Washington, D.C. area.

Speech slated on minorities

Dr Gary Nash, a UCLA history professor, will speak Monday at Long Beach State University on "The Indian and the Black in the American Revolution."

He will speak at noon in the Graduate Center as the third lecturer in the college's symposium on "The Meaning of the American Revolution."

Nash has written widely on racial relations in early American times. His most recent book is "Red, White and Black."

The fourth speaker in the symposium will be Dr Ira Gruber, professor of history at Rice University.

Guess Who(siers) next for Bruins after 82-66 win?

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

About the time Arizona coach Fred Snowden was conceding defeat to UCLA Saturday, fans in the end zone bleachers of Pauley Pavilion unfurled a banner.

"Indiana Whosiers" it read.

The Wildcats couldn't stop the determined Bruins and now it will be Indiana's turn as UCLA won an all-expense paid trip to Philadelphia and a shot at its 10th national championship in the last 12 years with an 82-66 lashing of the Wildcats.

UCLA fans in Saturday's turnout of 12,459 hadn't forgotten Indiana's 84-64, season-opening triumph over their Bruins. Neither had Gene Bartow.

"In that game we were so overprepared and I wanted to win so badly in my first game that our players tried too hard to win it for me," said the weary UCLA coach. "Taking nothing away from Indiana, the way they played that night we could have played a perfect game and still lost by 15 points."

Bartow's players weren't thinking so much of their semifinal match with the Hoosiers as just being in the final round of four.

"Chilly Philly, here we come," shouted forward Marques Johnson in the the noisy Bruin locker room following the Western Regional championship.

The junior all-America performed brilliantly down the stretch when UCLA unleashed a 12-0 blitz that broke a 58-58 knot with 8:03 to play and sent the Bruins winging, 70-58, with only 2:21 remaining.

"I couldn't begin to tell you how we went from 58-all to our insurmountable lead," said Bartow. "If I knew, I'd do it every time."

After Ralph Drollinger, Richard Washington and Johnson gave UCLA a five-point cushion (63-58), Arizona slowly started to fold.

Jimmy Rappis, a never-miss shooter in the Wildcats' semifinal win over Nevada-Las Vegas, was reduced to a hobbling liability in the final and was mercifully pulled by Snowden with 5:51 showing. The senior guard had taken lengthy treatments Friday to reduce the pain in a bruised left heel and arch but twice reinjured the foot Saturday while finding the basket only once in eight attempts.

"He was shooting off one foot and I knew from the start he wasn't going to have a good scoring game," said Snowden later. Minus their courageous quarterback, the Wildcat offense disintegrated.

Center Bob Elliott walked underneath the basket. Guard Herman Harris carried the ball and later ran over the tenacious Raymond Townsend. Arizona even fumbled away an inbounds pass in its own end.

Those four turnovers proved disastrous. The Wildcats were outscored, 24-8, in the concluding eight minutes and Bartow thought fatigue might have been a factor.

"They were well prepared for us, but I honestly think the last 10 minutes of that wild game with Las Vegas (114-109) took its toll. We seemed much more rested and played near-perfect basketball in the stretch."

Johnson, who picked up his third personal foul at 16:29, was tagged with No. 4 at 4:01. With the help of UCLA's 2-1-2 zone defense he refrained from from being disqualified and was removed along with the other Bruin starters to individual standing ovations with 1:33 to go.

"It was an aggressive game," said Johnson, a 11-point, seven-rebound performer. "Picking up some of those ticky-tack fouls was frustrating and rendered me almost useless on the offensive boards."

'Bring on Hoosiers'

David Greenwood wasn't popping off.

But in quiet, measured tones, the 18-year-old UCLA freshman center pointed out that Indiana's 84-64 victory over the Bruins last Nov. 29 in St. Louis had been for the championship of the weekly wire-service polls—and nothing else.

"Indiana won when it didn't count," said the 6-10 former Verbum Dei star Saturday after the Bruins qualified for a rematch with the Hoosiers by dispatching Arizona, 82-66, in the NCAA Western Regional final at Pauley Pavilion.

"That was a practice game in St. Louis," said Greenwood. "We're going to win when it counts."

UCLA will face the top-ranked and unbeaten Hoosiers in the semifinals of the NCAA tournament next Saturday in Philadelphia.

It was obvious after the the Bruins had burst away from Arizona in the final eight minutes Saturday that they had Indiana on their minds.

"We're looking forward to playing Indiana," said clever Andre McCarter, who will be going home to Philadelphia for his last two basketball games as a collegian. "The time we played them in November, the floor was slippery and we had a new coach to get used to.

"We didn't have our offense adjusted. I think Indiana was playing as well then as it is now, but we're playing better."

Junior foward Marques Johnson, who was chosen to the all-tournament team, cited some differences between the team Indiana met in St. Louis and the one the Hoosiers will be playing in Philadelphia.

"We've matured as a team," said Johnson. "We've adjusted to coach (Gene) Bartow and his style of play, and his whole philosophy of coaching.

"We've jelled at just the right time."

Bartow joined in the "bring on Indiana" chorus.

"I'm looking forward to playing Indiana, as is the whole team," he said. "I know they're a super team with a super coach, but if we play the way we have in 13 or 14 of our last 16 games, we can play with any college team in the country."

Bartow paused and grinned. "Indiana is, after all, a college team."

Junior forward Richard Washington, chosen the tournament's outstanding player, said the Bruins have the "same kind of team as we had when we went into the tournament last year."

"This team is just as strong, maybe stronger," he said. "We're definitely getting more out of our guards (McCarter, Raymond Townsend). Last year, Dave Meyers had a leg injury in the NCAA tournament. This year, we're completely healthy."

Bartow, who appeared to be a nervous wreck during the game, alluded to the pressure he has been under as the successor to John Wooden, who took the Bruins to 10 national championships in 12 years.

"We're where we were supposed to be, at least according to everybody out here," said the UCLA coach, whose mailbox has been filled with angry letters after each of the Bruins' four defeats. "You know, we played a bad game against Indiana before.

"Marques Johnson and Ralph Drollinger got into foul trouble early. Very few things went right. I've seen Indiana play some great basketball since then, but I've also seen us play some great basketball. It should be interesting."

Rutgers, Michigan also advance

Associated Press

Indiana continued its relentless march toward the national championship with an impressive victory over Marquette and joined UCLA, Rutgers and longshot Michigan in advancing to the semifinals of the NCAA basketball tournament Saturday.

The Hoosiers, 30-0 and ranked No. 1, turned back No. 2 Marquette 65-56 to win the Mideast regional at Baton Rouge, La.; Defending champion UCLA, 26-4 and ranked fifth, overpowered Arizona 82-66 in the West regional at the Bruins' home court in Los Angeles; No. 4 Rutgers, 31-0, ran by Virginia Military 91-75 in the East regional at Greensboro, N.C., and No. 9 Michigan, 24-6, trimmed Missouri 95-88 to win the Midwest regional at Louisville, Ky.

So it's on to Philadelphia where Indiana will play UCLA and Rutgers will meet Michigan in the semifinals next Saturday afternoon. The survivors play for the championship Monday night, March 29.

The semifinal doubleheader will be televised, starting with the Rutgers-Michigan game at 11:15 a.m. (PST).

Indiana, which has lost just one of its last 65 games, goes into the final four as the favorite. The Hoosiers, despite the benching of All-America Scott May with foul problems, broke to a 30-19 lead midway through the first half against Marquette. But the scrappy Warriors rallied to trail by one, 36-35, at the half.

The Hoosiers again pulled away in the second half as May returned to score 11 points and give his team a 51-41 advantage with 10:23 left.

Again Marquette rallied. Forcing Hoosier turnovers, the Warriors rode the outside shooting of Earl Tatum to close within 57-54 with 2:15 remaining.

But Marquette's hopes ended when Tom Abernethy sank a pair of free throws and the Hoosiers retained possession of the ball due to a technical foul called on Warrior coach Al McGuire. Free throws by Abernethy and Bob Wilkerson and a layup by Quinn Buckner iced the Indiana victory.

Burly center Kent Benson topped the Hoosiers with 18 points. May had 15 and Abernethy 12. Tatum led Marquette, 27-2, with 22 points and Bo Ellis added nine.

Dodger pitching hopeful trims down

Bryant: A 'slim' chance

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

VERO BEACH — Among the candidates to replace Andy Messersmith on the Dodgers' pitching staff is a fellow who has won the grand sum of three games the last two seasons, nearly had his career end in a slip from a swimming pool slide and rooms with a stuffed teddy bear.

Desperation? Not really.

Ronald Raymond Bryant also is a former 24-game winner and one-time National League pitcher of the year.

But since that peak season of 1973 when he was 24-12 for the San Francisco Giants, Ron Bryant's career has fallen — literally — on ill times.

It was in the spring of [illegible] at a Palm Springs hotel where the Giants were staying that [illegible] freak accident on the swimming pool slide. Bryant fell and ripped his side open.

When he finally did [illegible] he won but three games. [illegible] last year at St. Louis he was [illegible] with an earned run average of balloon proportions [illegible].

Not surprisingly, he was a free agent last month when he contacted Dodger vice president Al Campanis and asked for a job. "I wanted a West Coast club," explained the Redlands native.

So, for the price of a ticket to Albuquerque — he has a Pacific Coast League contract at the moment — the Dodgers have grandiose hopes for the 28-year-old lefthander, much like they had a year ago for Burt Hooton, who wound up winning [illegible] games [illegible].

[illegible] the fact that both [illegible]

[illegible] mammoth things are expected of Bryant. Hooton lost only 15 pounds and besides winning 18 games, bagged his last 12 in succession.

It is Bryant's 24-victory season of 1973 that the Dodgers prefer to talk about, not the events since.

"The biggest reason for the drastic change was my confidence, not the accident," Bryant insisted Saturday after a lengthy workout. "I'm sure I'll get my confidence back once I get to pitching regularly."

He received an immediate confidence lift from Campanis, who said after he saw Bryant work two scoreless innings in the [illegible] game with USC at Dodger Stadium, "I like him. Really. I think he's going to make the club."

If he does, it means the Dodgers' roster will include one [illegible] coaches, 25 [illegible] and a teddy bear.

Kings decision Montreal

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

Maybe the Kings should open the Stanley Cup playoffs against Montreal. The Canadiens seem to bring out the best in coach Bob Pulford's skaters.

Weathering a furious third period comeback, the Kings hung on to defeat the Flying Frenchmen, 4-3, before a frenzied sellout crowd of 16,005 at the Forum Saturday night.

The defeat ended the Canadiens' 15-game unbeaten string, which included eight wins in a row, while the Kings regained a share of second place with the idle Pittsburgh Penguins in the Norris Division.

The setback also deprived Montreal's division champs of a chance to improve on their own NHL record for fewest defeats in a season. It was only their 10th loss in 71 games, matching their standard of 10 reversals set in 1972-73.

"We should have been playing like that on the whole home stand," Tommy Williams said, reflecting on only the Kings' third win of their seven-game stand. "I don't know why we aren't more consistent. That's been our biggest problem lately."

It marked the Kings' second win as well as a tie in their last three meetings with Montreal. In their last joust at the Forum on Jan. 31, the Kings won, 7-3.

"Except for the first game when we lost 9-0, we've played well against them all year," defenseman Bob Murdoch said.

"It was nice to finally get a win [illegible] stand. We've been struggling lately. It was also nice to [illegible] the fans something. They've done a lot of booing lately," Murdoch [illegible] [illegible] directed [illegible] [illegible] game at [illegible]

Suns put the heat on Lakers, 106-93

By DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

PHOENIX — When it comes to television performances, perhaps the Lakers should be censored.

They gave their Southland viewers another occasion to fall asleep here Saturday night as they turned in a lacklustre effort in falling to the Phoenix Suns, 106-93.

Considering what this game could have meant to them — an alomst certain playoff berth — it was embarrassing that the Lakers couldn't have shown some semblance of spark.

What coach Bill Sharman thought of the performance had to be bleeped out. But by now he is used to such efforts. The Lakers have lost seven of their last eight on TV and by an average margin of 14 points.

Instead of a three-game lead over the Suns with 10 games to play, the Lakers now find themselves only one-half game in front of third-place Seattle and one ahead of Phoenix.

"It's a whole new season now," said Sharman. "If we don't get meaner and more aggressive on the boards we are going to be in deep trouble."

The Lakers have 10 more games, six at the Forum, including one tonight against Milwaukee. But they end the season with games in Portland and Phoenix and that is something they don't look forward to.

No wonder, since they have a 9-28 road mark.

Phoenix dominated the backboards and turned seven offensive rebounds into baskets in the first half. This lifted the Suns to a 52-38 lead and the Lakers never came close to catching up.

Garfield Heard and Curtis Perry of the Suns are two of the finest rebounding forwards in basketball, but the Lakers have size up front, too. On the road, however, they don't display any of their muscle.

Guard Lucius Allen, who played poorly (3 of 12 shooting) summed up the Lakers' frustration very well.

"We know what they do defensively but we can't seem to adapt to it," he said. "We want to penetrate but we can't. We had to take too many perimeter shots tonight an they didn't fall in.

"Personally, I stunk up the place, but then no one else did much better. They are a very physical team and they outmuscled us at every position."

Phoenix's front line of Heard, Perry and rookie star Alvan Adams combined for 30 rebounds, a whopping 18 offensively.

Adams, a shoo-in for Rookie of the year, was brilliant with 29 points, one more than the Lakers' Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who really didn't get untracked until the second half.

Guard Paul Westphal, who along with Ricky Sobers easily penetrated the porous Laker defense, contributed 19 points for the Suns and also had four steals.

"Phoenix's offense is a simple one," said Sharman, "but we can't stop it. We talk about what we have to do and then we can't execute."

Only rookie Don Ford played well for the losers. The young forward hit 7 of 11 shots and totalled 16 points, giving him 38 in two nights since replacing Corky Calhoun as a starter.

Calhoun, out with the flu Friday night, returned to play 27 minutes and gave a creditable performance. So did guard Stu Lantz, although he didn't shoot well (4 for 14).

Laker sharpshooter Gail Goodrich made only 4 of 13 from the field, meaning the team's three guards hit only 11 of 39 shots.

Abdul-Jabbar was restricted to 10 points in the first half. He was in foul trouble again early in the fourth period but by then the outcome was decided.

The decisive priod was the second when the Suns outscored the Lakers, 25-16. They had 10 more field goal attempts and the Lakers committed nine turnovers while hitting only six of 15 shots. Calhoun had three of the baskets.

Sharman baited the referees most of the night, but they weren't to blame for the one-sided loss. Both teams committed an identical 26 fouls.

Ironically, this was the 17th consecutive time that the home team in the Phoenix-Lakers series has won, dating back to 1973. Against these odds and considering their lack of spirit Saturday, the Lakers could have mailed in this loss.

Prep spikers in mid-season form

By DAVE WIELENGA
Staff Writer

According to the calendar, spring is just beginning but stopwatches at Saturday's 55th Southern Counties Invitational track meet at Hungtington Beach High were reading more like late May.

Sprinter Donn Thompson of Gahr High, Foothill distance runner Bill Spillsbury and pole vaulter Bill Hintaus from Aviation were the standouts from a field of 800 entrants from 59 schools.

Thompson, who is competitive at distances from 100 to 880 yards and as a hurdler, focused his attention on the quarter-mile Saturday. Despite chilly late-afternoon winds, he emerged with a meet record 47.0, wiping Billy Sims' seven-year-old standard off the books by one-tenth of a second.

The senior standout also ran a pair of relay anchor legs, as Gahr placed second in the 440 relay in 43.3 and came from behind to win its mile relay race with a time of 3:25.5.

Spillsbury, also a senior, led from wire-to-wire in winning the large division two-mile in 9:01.8, the best in the nation this year. He rambled through the first mile in 4:28 and kicked home his last lap in 67 seconds to topple Curtis Beck's 1972 mark of 9:07.9.

Spillsbury returned later in the afternoon to record a 4:17.1 mile, the day's best, although Santa Fe High sophomore Sal Peralta ran 4:17.8 in the next race.

Hintaus won a dramatic duel with national sophomore record holder Anthony Curran of Crespi to win the pole vault at 15-9.

With only two vaulters remaining in the competition, Curran, who's best is 15-9¾, took the lead with a 15-6 vault. Hintaus also topped that height, then cleared 15-9. Curran passed at 15-9 and the pair assailed 16-1, but neither was successful and the Aviation star went home with the award as the meet's outstanding field event performer.

All six Moore League school's made an appearance, Poly (18 points) and Compton (15) finishing third and fourth in the team standings.

Led by Compton's Andre Polk, who outsprinted Peter Owens of Poly to win in 1:55.8, the league's halfmilers were the most impressive. Owens clocked 1:57.5 and was followed by Al deFrates of Millikan (1:58.1), Poly sophomore Nelson Herring (1:59.3) and Randy Cox of Wilson (1:59.9).

Willie Fowlkes of Poly clocked 50.0 to lead Moore League athletes to a fine showing in a 440 race. Compton's Aaron Hudson (50.4) was second while Millikan's Jim Nieto (50.[illegible]) and Wilson's Herman Acosta (50.7) were fourth and fifth.

Pasadena and Muir tied for the large school's crown with 32 points. Pasadena [illegible] lock when a Muir long jumper was disqualified after it was learned he had allowed a teammate to make several jumps in his place.

Crespi pocketed the small school's title with a clutch 3:25.2 victory in the mile relay, their last event of the day.

Tony Parker of the Annapolis Yacht Club sailed his "Pantera" to seven wins and two losses in the three-day Congressional Cup Series which ended Saturday. His decisive triumph came at the end of the ninth and final series, in which he defeated Ted Turner, Atlanta Yacht Club and owner of the Atlanta Braves.

It was Parker's second appearance in the Congressional Cup competition, the 12th since the trophy was established for the Long Beach Yacht Club by an Act of Congress.

There were three skippers who had six wins and three losses. They were Dick Deaver (Los Angeles YC), Graham Hall (Naval Academy Sailing Squadron) and Turner, who was ahead until the final four series.

Dennis Conner (San Diego Yacht Club, winner of two previous Congressional Cup regattas, finished with four wins and five losses as did Pierre (Poppy) Delfour, representing the Yacht Club d'Hyeres of France, and Ken Young (U.S. Yacht Racing Union).

Barney Flam (LBYC) had three wins and six losses as did Marc Hollerbach (Yacht Racing Union of the Great Lakes). Hugh Treharne (Australian Yachting Federation) won two races and lost seven, but the two he won were against heavy favorites.

Although the ocean was calmer on the final day of the Cup Series, it turned out to be one of the most hectic of all racing days. The strain of five previous series of races had taken a toll on men and equipment, and with four series to go on Saturday crews, committeemen and all others involved were tense, to say the least.

Turner had the toughest schedule, but until the final series he had a chance to tie for a victory and perhaps win inasmuch as he had beaten Hall in a previous match.

The ninth race was a real hoodoo for Turner. He had lost to Deaver (Los Angeles Yacht Club) in the eighth series. In the ninth everything seemed to happen. The final knockout came when his jib split on the run from the leeward [illegible] to change sails and that cost him two minutes.

Meanwhile, Hall, who had a chance to tie Parker with 7-2, dropped behind in his race with Treharne and lost by 31 seconds. Thus Treharne, the hard-luck skipper of the first day, became a giant killer. He won only two matches, but those were with Turner and Hall.

Barney Flam, representing the host club, Long Beach YC, had hard luck in the last race. He missed the windward mark adn had to go around again, so Hollerbach beat him by 55 seconds.

Saturday's results:

Sixth series—Hall def. Deaver, 19 (double protest); Turner def. Flam, 6 (double protest); Conner def. Hollerbach, 30; Young def. Treharne, 52 (Treharne protested); Parker def. Delfour, [illegible] (double protest).

Seventh series—Hall def. Hollerbach, 28; Flam def. Conner, 24 (Connor protested); Turner def. Young, [illegible] (double protest); Deaver def. Delfour, 10; Parker def. Treharne, 11.

Eighth series—Deaver def. Turner, 1:11; Hollerbach def. Treharne, 31; Delfour def. Young, 1:17; Parker def. Conner, 15 (Connor protested); Flam def. Hall, [illegible].

Ninth series—Delfour def. Conner, [illegible]; Deaver def. Young, 30; Hollerbach def. Flam, 55 (Flam protested); Parker def. Turner, 1:21 (Turner protested); Treharne def. Hall, 31.

Vikings sparkle in relays

Gerald Peete sped to a 10.8 clocking on a 440 leg to lead Long Beach City College to a victory in the 880 medley relay and Gary Jenkins was clocked in a swift 20.9 to pace a Viking win in the 8-man mile relay Saturday in the Northridge Relays.

Shaun Ward broke his own school record with a toss of 216-11 to win the javelin and Dave Fuller captured the discus with a heave of 157 feet.

KINGS—

Kozak (No. 17), the Kings nearly had their skates scared off as the Canadiens completely dominated the final 20 minutes.

Guy LaPointe (No. 20) and Murray Wilson (No. 10) scored 26 seconds apart to cut the Kings' advantage to 4-3, but goalie Rogie Vachon then took center stage to make save after save and preserve the pulsating win. Guy Lafleur's 49th goal in the first period accounted for Montreal's other tally.

"I though we showed a lot of guts at the very end," Pulford said. "I thought we played with a lot of effort. (Marcel) Dionne played very well. Murphy also had a good game. He was almost out cold when he got hit by a puck. When he skated off the ice he nearly collapsed on the bench. But then he came back and got the goal which put us ahead 3-1," Pulford noted.

"To beat them is a big victory. I think it will mean a lot to us from here on in."

With eight games remaining, the Kings have only three home dates remaining.

"Having Pittsburgh push us might be good for us," defenseman Neil Komadoski reasoned. "The pressure now is sort of like the playoffs."

The Kings proved their was some fight left in them. The teams were at each other's throats in the second period when Kozak and Bob Gainey scuffled behind the Canadiens' net. Moments eariler Kozak and goalie Ken Dryden engaged in a shoving match in the crease. Komadoski and Gainey also engaged in a brief skirmish to highlight a frantic second period.

It's this kind of performance that keeps the Kings' followers trying to figure out their bewildering heroes.

KINGS NOTES: Mike Corrigan needs two goals to become the first player in NHL history to score 20 goals at each forward position. Corrigan notched 20 as a center with Vancouver in 1970-71, 37 in 1972-73 with the Kings at right wing and currently he has 18 as a left winger. . . . Whitey Widing remains sidelined with an ankle injury. He did not accompany the Kings for their match in Minnesota tonight, but may be available Wednesday when the team returns to the Forum against the Islanders. Widing's next game will be his 500th in the NHL, all but 44 with the Kings. . . . Kings' defenseman Gary Sargent missed his sixth game in a row because of a back injury. . . . The Kings open the Stanley Cup playoffs on Tuesday, Apr. 6. Their opponent and the site are undetermined. Tickets are on sale only at the Forum. . . . Saturday's sellout was the Kings' sixth of the season. With three home dates remaining, they trail last year's record gate, averaging 12,[illegible] compared to 12,613 after 37 dates. . . . Ken Dryden entered Saturday's game with a 1.99 GAA and a 41-8-7 won-loss record in goal. Rogie Vachon was 4.20 GAA and 21-13-4.

A teddy bear?

"He was my roomie with the Giants," Bryant said, straight faced, "and I think I'll bring him out of retirement."

Indeed, after his abrupt flop in 1974 the bear, decked out in a teddy bear sized Giants uniform, received a good deal more publicity than Bryant did.

"It's a pretty good roomie when you stop and think about it," Bryant said still dead serious. "He sleeps a lot and doesn't talk back even when you lose 15 games."

Nostalgia, anyone?

Young Mel Kenealy poses proudly in his race car, circa 1933, in the pit area of old Legion Ascot Speedway. Kenealy, now 72, drove the same type of car in three Indy 500 races.

MEL KENEALY
With scrapbook of memories

HANK HOLLINGSWORTH

Driving in the Indianapolis 500 with a two-seat machine, almost a half-century ago, is a far cry from next Sunday's U.S. Grand Prix West, but Mel Kenealy will view the race through Long Beach streets with just as much enthusiasm. Maybe more.

The 72-year-old Long Beach resident, who was at Indianapolis for the 1930-31-32 classics, had a grandstand seat for the Formula 5,000 race in September, but he is hoping for a choicer location this time.

"You betcha I'll be there," enthused the beaming Kenealy, who finished eighth in the 1930 Indy race, but had his car break down in the other two 500-milers.

"The Grand Prix cars are a lot different than the kind I drove, but the excitement's still there. I still get a kick out of watching any kind of auto race.

"I want to get into the pits this time, though. I'd sure like to get a look at what's inside those speed machines. They're a couple thousand worlds apart from the model-T's, model-A's and everything else I drove."

KENEALY hasn't lost any of the aggressiveness that he demonstrated in 15 years of competitive racing (1922-37) on dozens of tracks all over the country. That aggressiveness gives him a sure-fire method of gaining admission to this era's major events, including the Grand Prix West.

"I always get passes for the races. I go to the racing office and tell them who I was, and take along my pictures and scrapbook so they'll know that I'm not lying. They always come through," declared the Gasoline Alley veteran.

MOST OF the excitement in Kenealy's racing life was generated at three Southland tracks, all gone now—Legion Ascot Speedway ("a couple miles north of downtown L.A."), Hollywood's Gilmore Stadium and Atlantic Stadium ("on Atlantic Avenue, a dozen or so miles out of Long Beach").

The only time he was injured was in a 1932 race at old Ascot, but that proved a blessing in disguise.

"Two cars collided and turned sideways, so I shut off my motor and gas, and slid into them," recalled the Denver native, who came to Long Beach from Los Angeles five years ago. "I slammed into the steering wheel and fractured my spine. I wore a corset and missed a month's racing.

"I celebrated my return by finishing second in the feature race at Ascot, but that wasn't the big thing.

"During my recuperation, I was signed as consultant in the Warner Brothers movie, The Crowd Roars, starring Jimmy Cagney. I got $30 a day, which was darned good pay in those depression days.

"The only action scenes were when Babe Stapp, driving my car and behind a camera car, opened the movie going 50 miles-an-hour, and when they used some shots of real races.

"What really killed me was that they took lots of pictures of Cagney in a race car with the wheels turning a mile a minute, the wind blowing, him going through all those facial contortions—and the car was going nowhere. I learned a lot about the movies that month."

DRIVING A two-seat machine with a mechanic in the rear seat was an exasperating experience for Kenealy.

"It was stupid — all it did was slow us down," snorted Mel. "A mechanic couldn't fix a car when you were going 100-miles-an-hour down the straightaway. I never could figure out why they put a mechanic in a rear seat back of the drivers. They had to remake the cars, and everything.

"The AAA (American Automobile Association) contest board just decided one day to put in the rule. It lasted just the three years I was at Indy, but that was enough."

Strangely, Kenealy's salad days were in the depression era.

"We made good money in the '30s," recalled Mel. "A guy could make $3,000 in one day if he won some heats, the helmet dash (a race in which the three or four top qualifiers competed) and the feature.

"Even though it was depression, people would pay to see auto races. Somehow, they had money. Ascot could seat about 15,000 and lots of times every seat was filled and people paid to stand and watch."

KENEALY RACED against the best drivers of the era — "Wilbur Shaw, Louie Meyer, Rex Mays, Kelly Petillo, Floyd Roberts and a good driver from Long Beach, Chet Gardner, who got killed 40 years ago. I'll bet every one of them would have gone out of his mind to race in this Grand Prix."

Death was no stranger to drivers in those early days, especially at old Ascot, which Mel nevertheless still holds closest to his heart.

"Quite a few were killed at Ascot," he claimed, shaking his head at the remembrance. "When you'd turn there on the dirt, it was tricky and dangerous."

Kenealy holds no love for the current Ascot Park track at Gardena.

"That new Ascot is no good," he blurted. "It's just a half-miler and there's no blacktop. It's not much better than our old dirt tracks. Maybe not as good."

KENEALY'S battered scrapbook, the one which gives him entree to big races today, contains numerous pictures of movie queens of his racing era, lovelies like Claire Windsor and Lois Wilson, hugging and kissing the auto race winners. The recollection brings a twinkle to Mel's eye.

Mel admittedly broke into auto racing "to make money", but he departed the sport with a far richer satisfaction.

"Yeh, I got into racing just to make money, and I made good dough during the depression, but the old race drivers learned a lot for the people who manufactured passenger cars," he said proudly.

"In '31 I went 120 miles an hour at the Bonneville Salt Flats in Utah and my back tires wore out. But that was what we were trying to learn."

With another twinkle in his eye, Mel concluded: "I suspect it was a little more fun racing then than now. Everything else was."

Even if everybody's wheels were spinning and they were going nowhere.

'California a separate race'

"What's glamorous? Actually, one works quite hard. But it's very nice to have a nice life, and we do have. It's better than being a bank clerk in South London." — James Hunt.

JAMES HUNT, who will drive in U.S. Grand Prix West in Long Beach next weekend, enjoys fruits of success after last Sunday's victory in "Race of Champions" at Brands Hatch, England.

—AP Wirephoto

Man of the world that he is, James Hunt is apt to find himself in almost any part of the globe, except where he has spent the past week.

"When I first heard about this race in Long Beach, I was skeptical," the Englishman says, aligning himself with untold millions.

"When you do it in the streets, it's new, you've got to disrupt the town, you have the noise problems, the big investment, it's on the West Coast, which is a long way to fly the cars . . . well, I thought it was a lot of hot air.

"I'll tell you, the guys that put this together deserve a success just for the guts of doing it."

Words such as those are music to the ears of Christopher R. Pook, Hunt's former countryman and father of the Long Beach event.

HUNT, TEAM McLAREN'S top driver, understands the stake that the Formula One program has in next weekend's United States Grand Prix West, so he has been running up and down the state like a primary candidate to promote it, enjoying himself immensely.

"I've been here several times," he says. "Riverside, Ontario, Laguna Seca. I find California a very stimulating place. I like to play golf and I play tennis. I have my racquet with me. But there are a lot more things to do than I ever get time to do."

Hunt, 28, apologizes, however, for being "very un-American" when he arrived at the Beverly Hills Hotel.

"I'd been in the room for five minutes before I realized I didn't have the TV on."

Among his preferred diversions is lobby lounging.

"I couldn't work out whether that bird sitting in the lobby last night was a hooker or not," he muses.

ALL OF THIS considered, Hunt concludes that "Californians are a bit of a separate race. Californians will like grand prix racing."

After all, Hunt reasons, everybody else does.

"It's only when we're in the 'States that this ever becomes a pertinent question, because to every other country in the world, grand prix racing is it—there is nothing else—and it's for the world championship."

Grand prix has always seemed a more glamorous type of racing than the domestic brand dirt tracks and bare knuckles compared to the image of dashing, devil-may-care chauffeurs with white scarves flowing behind them.

"What's glamorous?" Hunt counters. "Actually, one works quite hard. But it's very nice to have a nice life, and we do have. It's better than being a bank clerk in South London.

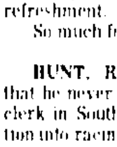
"Take some film star. Those people work very hard. The situation might surround them all the time but they don't actually get into it. I know if we try to sit back and enjoy it, we're probably not going to do a very good job on our cars."

HUNT'S EMPATHY with movie stars is natural. By coincidence, another guest at the Beverly Hills the past week was Elizabeth Taylor—the coincidence being that James's estranged wife Suzy, described in an old press release as a "ravishing society model," has been seen in the recent company of Richard Burton.

"I can handle it," Hunt says of the publicity. "It doesn't bother me."

However, he claims he did not encounter Liz in the Polo Lounge, nor did he bother to look up her room number.

Perhaps James is tired. The past week has been a continuous round of late breakfast interviews, luncheon appearances, publicity junkets hither and yon and a banquet or three. He has handled himself admirably and watched his physical condition.



RICH ROBERTS

At a media gathering one night he requested an orange juice from the bar but received a screwdriver instead.

"What's in this?" he protested after a small sip and returned it for a straight refreshment.

So much for the image.

HUNT, RAISED in Surrey, insists that he never would have become a bank clerk in South London, but his introduction into racing was not without pain.

"I bought myself a formula Ford but I had to buy it on half purchase (time), which was a big risk because I couldn't afford to pay it back. So I did laboring jobs. I was a porter, then a hospital cleaner at night, scrubbing the floors . . . that sort of thing. It was the only way I could get started.

"But then I ran out of money before I'd even raced it, doing some testing and things. We had an engine blow up and the engine was being rebuilt, but the company wouldn't give it to me without paying for it, so they kept the engine, which was fair enough."

James calls that crisis in his budding career "a big crunch drama."

"I remember the bill was 92 pounds and my father was going to give me 100 pounds for my 21st birthday. I asked him for it but he said, 'It's a month away, so you can wait; you've got to do things in order,' which was fine, except I had a sponsor lined up who said he wanted to see me race. People like that don't stay hot for a month, they stay hot for a week.

"I presented my special case and he still said no."

Hunt's father is a stockbroker.

"He wasn't going to risk anything on me," James says.

"So I presented it to my mother, who sympathized, and she sat up all night and persuaded him, and they gave me the money in advance."

SO HUNT WAS able to drive, won the sponsor and was off on the career that finds him among the favorites for next week's race, off last season's victory in the Dutch Grand Prix and last Sunday's win in the special "Race of Champions" event at Brands Hatch, England.

Does Long Beach have his mother to thank for his presence?

"Oh, I'd be here today," James says. "I just would have been here a different way. If you want it, you can get it. The breaks come in odd ways, but they always come if you persevere."

Chris Pook couldn't have said it better.

A.L. woos Toronto —so does the N.L.

NEW YORK (AP) — The American league voted Saturday to expand to Toronto for 1977 and the National League immediately set up a possible collision course by saying it would actively consider expansion to the same city for the same season.

Presidents Lee MacPhail of the American League and Chub Feeney of the National League announced their separate actions at the conclusion of the joint meeting of the 24 major league owners.

"The American League has declared its intention to expand to Toronto in 1977 and so advised the National League and the commissioner in a joint meeting," MacPhail said.

THEN FEENEY disclosed the National League's plans, saying his league will actively consider expansion for 1977 and, if it adopts expansion, Toronto will be included. He said that should the National League decide to move to Toronto "the city would have to decide which league it wants."

"There is one ball club and we're not contemplating two teams there," said MacPhail.

Earlier Saturday the Player Relations Committee, of which Feeney and MacPhail are members, formally withdrew their "best and final" offer to the Players Association in the continuing labor conflict.

The American League, which had already voted to expand to Seattle for 1977, requires a three-quarter majority to approve a new team. "Our vote was 11-1," said MacPhail, who declined to identify the dissenting team.

MacPhail refused to set a price for a Toronto franchise but the price for Seattle was $6 million.

"If Toronto decides to go to the National League, that will leave us looking for a 14th franchise," he added.

MacPhail acknowledged that the American League decision gives it a head start in the race to Toronto. "We have made a commitment to expand and they have not," he said, nodding toward Feeney.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn said he was not upset over both leagues aiming for the same city.

"I don't think it is a battle or a war," he said. "But I certainly think the situation is competitive. I don't think there is anything unhealthy about competition of that kind for franchises. I don't consider it bad for baseball."

TORONTO originally thought it had a franchise when the San Francisco Giants ownership accepted a bid in principle to purchase that club. That deal fell through when the Giants were purchased instead, by local interests and kept in San Francisco. Toronto would be a prime target for the National League because of the natural rivalry it offers for the Montreal Expos, currently the only non-United States team in baseball.

In connection with the labor dispute with the Players Association, MacPhail said: "The owners' offer has been withdrawn. We are going to negotiate further. We want to wait to hear their ideas."

"If the withdrawal means nothing," said Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players Association. "It's a negotiating tactic. They can do anything they want."

Miller said he expected to return to the negotiating table with the Player Relations Committee on Monday. The main task for the parties was further refinement of the owners' [illegible] and [illegible] proposals, which would permit players to deal with [illegible] and in some cases would [illegible]

Then he said...

• FRAN TARKENTON, on his qualifications as a TV golf commentator: "I know as much about golf as Howard Cosell knows about football."

• JOE FRAZIER, explaining why he has ordered a new Cadillac Seville when he already has a '71 Rolls, '72 Mark IV, '75 Cadillac Brougham, '62 Corvette and an Austin taxi: "Blew the transmission on one, can't open the trunk on another, somethin' wrong with the others. I think what I need is somethin' to drive when they're all in the shop."

• MARTINA NAVRATILOVA, tennis star on her weight problem: "I put on weight when I first settled in this country. I was on a 'see food' diet. Everytime I'd see food, I'd eat it."

• CECIL SMITH, TV columnist: "Radio isn't dead though sometimes when Superfan comes on I wish it were."

• AL McGUIRE, Marquette basketball coach on the quick hands of two of his players, Lloyd Walton and Earl Tatum: "If there was a school for pickpockets, they'd both be Phi Beta Kappa."

Johnson said he and his teammates dedicated the game to senior guard Andre McCarter, whose season-long goal has been to make it to the NCAA finals in his hometown of Philadelphia.

"Andre was going to get to Philadelphia if he had to walk and I would have been right alongside him," said Bartow.

"That's right," McCarter said. "I told them, 'get me home and I'll take care of everything else.' " His contributions in the Regional finale were nine points, five assists and a hawking job on Rappis.

"I knew he was hurting, but he's a great shooter and no way was he going to get an open shot."

"It hurt quite a bit and I couldn't move very well," said Rappis. "I'm just grateful the coach let me play. I don't know if I should have but I wanted to and there's nothing I can do about it now."

With Rappis merely bringing the ball upcourt with a limp and a prayer, Arizona went to its inside gang of the burly Elliott (10 points), Phil Taylor (14) and Al Fleming (14).

Harris, who riddled Vegas for 31 points, was virtually forgotten. He didn't take a shot for the game's first eight minutes, scored the last of his 18 points with 10:18 to play and was on the bench the final 2:51.

"I switched from man defense to the zone to force them to take outside shots as well as to protect Marques and Richard from foul trouble," said Bartow. "Our stategy on Harris was to make him work as hard as possible for each shot and Raymond (Townsend) did just that. He had very few, if any easy ones."

"We ran into a cold spell when the ball just wouldn't go down and we couldn't make a clutch basket when we needed it," said Snowden of the Bruins' explosion. "We got everything we expected in the way of shots."

Townsend and Washington hurt the Wildcats more than any other Bruin.

Townsend caused Harris to miss on 6 of 10 second-half shots while he was hitting 7 of 12 off the lame Rappis.

"That's one of the most talented backcourts we've played against all season," said the sophomore guard. "Harris got about three baskets in a row off me late in the first half when he was popping out from a double low stack and we weren't getting any communication. If I had concentrated better, I'd have had two or three more baskets myself."

Washington was the tournament's most valuable player. Joining him on the elite quintet were Johnson, Rappis, Al Fleming and Harris. Richard, who shot poorly (7-18) Thursday, hit only four of his first 14 attempts but was 7-of-10 and snared eight of his 10 rebounds in the second half.

Ten of his points came before the blitz, when the Wildcats were still threatening a Bruin lead that varied between one and three points.

"It was only a matter of time until we wore them down," said the other UCLA all-America. "This maybe a stronger team than last year's. We've definitely had better play out of our guards."

He might have added centers, too. David Greenwood and Ralph Drollinger combined for 13 point and 10 boards.

"They were really strong but they also pushed off and did a lot of illegal things like that," said Greenwood of Arizona's front line. "Our job (his and Drollinger's) was to stop Elliott. Stop him from touching the ball and he doesn't score. I think he got six points off me."

The lanky freshman only hopes he can say the same about Kent Benson's point production next week.

Rambo leads way in JC tournament

John Rambo scored 32 points to lead the Kappa-Alpha-Phi all-stars to a 103-91 victory over Wilson Ford in the Barstow Invitational JC basketball tournament Saturday night.

The all-stars trailed by 11 at halftime. Poly's Michael Wiley and Joe Ware chipped in 13 points. The Stars face Capital Insulation of L.A. today in the semifinals at 11 a.m.

'BRING ON INDIANA'—

Bartow praised his coaching rival, Fred Snowden of Arizona.

"Fred did a phenomenal job getting Arizona ready," he said. "I thought we were awfully strong down the stretch and could have gone another 10 minutes like that."

Snowden said the Wildcats "didn't play to our full potential, but I'm sure UCLA had something to do with that."

Asked what he expected when the Bruins face Indiana, Snowden said: "I haven't seen Indiana personally. But I've seen them on TV. Any team in the final round of four has a legitimate chance to win the national title."

Informed that three Arizona players—guards Jim Rappis and Herman Harris and forward Al Fleming—had claimed places on the all-tournament team, Snowden clapped his hands and said:

"Is that right? I'm just ecastic about that. I wish you could meet our players. They are beautiful people."

Rappis, who reinjured his left heel and arch with eight minutes remaining and played the first 32 minutes at half-speed, said he was "grateful to coach Snowden for letting me play."

"Maybe I shouldn't have played at all," said the senior guard, who converted only one of eight shots after going 10-for-11 against Nevada-Las Vegas Thursday night. "It hurt quite a bit from the beginning."

He shrugged his shoulders. "There's nothing I can do about it now."

Thirty minutes later, he left Pauley Pavilion on crutches and the 200 fans who were still around gave him an ovation.

There were some beautiful people in the stands, too.

HEDGEMON LEWIS KO'D IN TENTH

WEMBLEY, England (AP) — John Stracey of Britain stopped Hedgemon Lewis of Los Angeles in the 10th round Saturday night and retained the World Boxing Council welterweight title.

Lewis, 30, finished the fight looking dazed and on the point of exhaustion after taking a terrible battering from the aggressive 25-year-old Briton.

British referee Harry Gibbs stepped in and stopped the fight after 1 minute 25 seconds of the 10th round to save Lewis from further punishment. It was his third unsuccessful attempt to win the welterweight title. He previously lost twice to Jose Napoles before Stracey beat Napoles for the crwn.

A partisan crowd of 8,000 waved Union Jacks and roared for Stracey at Wembley Empire Pool.

U.S. poloists tip Canadians

Jon Svendsen scored all four of his goals in the second half to lead the United States National water polo team past the touring Canadian Nationals, 6-5, at the Belmont Plaza Olympic Pool Saturday night.

The Canadians won by the same score on Friday. The teams conclude the three-game series tonight at the same facility at 7.

Mike Dabney and Ed Jordan scored 23 points apiece for Rutgers against hustling but outmanned VMI. The Scarlet Knights broke it open with a 227 streak in the final 4½ minutes of the first half and went on top by 21 early in the second. The Keydets, plagued by fouls, crept to within 10 with 8½ minutes left but could get no closer.

VMI lost four players on fouls, including Will Bynum who led all scorers with 34 points. All-American Phil Sellers added 16 points for Rutgers.

Michigan got a balanced attack going to overcome a 43point outburst by Missouri guard Willie Smith. The Wolverines built an 18-point first-half lead before Smith led the Tigers back with his long-range jumpers after intermission. Missouri surged ahead 76-71 with 7:54 left, but Michigan resumed the offensive and gradually pulled ahead for good behind Johnny Robinson and Rickey Green.

The Wolverines went into a stall over the final two minutes to protect their lead.

Green finished with 23 points, Robinson added 21 and Phil Hubbard 20 for the winners.

Cypress softballers stun Vegas

Cypress' hustling Hawks surprised the top-seeded Las Vegas Gamblers, 3-2, in the winners' bracket finals Saturday in the Carson Parks-Recreation/Shakey's softball tournament at Dominguez Park.

The Hawks must wait until 2:15 today to get an opponent from the losers's bracket that must defeat them twice to win the title.

Carson Glenn Miller meets Glendale Continental Furniture at 9 a.m. and that winner plays Oceanside at 10:45. Las Vegas gets the 10:45 victor at 12:30 p.m. to set up the title game or games.

LBSU thinclads eye national ranking

Coach Ron Allice calculates that his Long Beach State track team ranks among the nation's top ten. He'll find out Monday when the 49ers entertain U. of Washington and Occidental at 1 p.m.

"We think that this meet will have great bearing on our national dual meet ranking," Allice said. "Occidental is consistently one of the leading NAIA division teams in the country, while Washington was ranked eighth among all major universities last year.

"Last week we defeated Irvine, the No. 1 college division team in the country. If we defeat Washington and Occidental, we'll be very pleased, but not over-confident. We're going to No. 1 UCLA on March 28."

If the weather is conducive to records, there may be a bunch of them Monday. Many of the races look like eye-strainers.

- 100 meters — Greg County (9.4) and Rickie Jackson (9.4) of Long Beach vs. Al Davis (9.3w) of Washington.
- 200 — Pablo Franco (20.7) of Washington vs. Jackson (21.5) and County (21.5)
- 400 — Albert Shorts (46.2) of Long Beach vs. Keith Tinner (46.7r) and Jerry Belur (47.0r) of Washington.

UCLA vs. Vols

Perfect-record UCLA and Tennessee meet today, 1:15 p.m., at Westwood. UCLA leads their intersectional track and field series, 5-0.

- 800 — Greg Gibson (1:48.6) of Washington vs. Malcolm Cleary (1:51.0) of Oxy and Larry Boaen (1:52.6) and Larry Hayden (1:52.7) of Long Beach.
- 400 hurdles — Gene Taylor (50.6) of Oxy vs. Brian Mondschein (51.1) of Washington and Otis Fisher (52.6) of Long Beach.

There appear to be only two "sure things" — Dwight Stones (7-6½) of Long Beach in the high jump, and 49er Donnie Baird (17-10) in the pole vault.

Allice isn't adding those points yet. Stones cleared only 6-10 in his first meet on the new jump facility, and Baird is coming off a hamstring injury. Baird, second at 17-6 in the recent indoor nationals, is switching to a lighter pole and raising his hand-grip from 14-6 to 15 feet.

A team from the Ivory Coast, Africa, will be an added entry in the 400 relay.

Admission is $1.50 for adults, $1 for students.

‘Putters’ into tourney lead

Golf grass greener for Hubert

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A large number of golf's touring pros have complained— some mildly, some more vehemently —about the grainy, Bermuda grass greens they've encountered at the $175,000 Greater Jacksonville Open.

But Hubert Green, a native of Alabama, a former collegiate star at Florida State and now a resident of nearby Bay Point, Fla., is right at home on these conditions.

"If you're putting good and you know Bermuda greens, know the grain, you can be a little more brave on your putting," Hubert said Saturday after his five-under-par 67 had staked him to the third-round lead in this non-televised event and put him in prime position to claim a rare, second consecutive title.

"You don't have to worry so much about running the ball past the hole. You can stroke your putts with much more authority," said Green, who scored a runaway victory last week in the Doral Open—also played on Bermuda grass greens.

"My putter has been working a little bit better the last couple of weeks," he said. "It's very enjoyable. It's a very welcome change."

Green, rapidly becoming one of the game's more popular players, rewarded the big gallery that trailed him on his trek through a plush residential area spiked by pines and mirrored by lakes with five birdies and no bogeys in a solid round that made him the man to catch in Sunday's final 18 holes of the chase for a $35,000 first prize.

The 44-year-old Barber, who recently joined the elite list of men who have won $1 million playing this game, shot a 68 in the mild, sunny, breezy weather and advanced to second place at 207, just one stroke back. Hill managed a 71 and was another shot behind at 208.

Graham, in a slump most of the year, birdied four holes in a row at one stretch and later holed out a 40-foot sand shot for an eagle-three on his way to a 65.

Carner leads lady golfers

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — Joanne Carner of the United States carded a two-under-par 71 Saturday for a two-day total of three-under-par 143 to take the lead in a women's golf tournament at the Grange Links

Four strokes behind was Australian Jane Lock, last year's winner.

The first round leader, Rhys Wright of Australia, carded a disappointing 79 for a 149 total.

Cathy Duggan of the U.S. was fourth at 152, followed by Gillian Bannan of New Zealand at 154.

Nastase goes ‘soft’ in victory over Connors

CARLSBAD (AP) — Ilie Nastase, the Rumanian star who paid a $6,000 fine to get into the event, won the $30,000 first prize Saturday in the Independent Players Association Tennis Tournament by whipping Jimmy Connors, 4-6, 6-0, 6-1.

After Connors broke the Rumanian's serve twice in the first set in the finals at La Costa, Nastase dominated the match in the final two sets and rattled off 10 straight games before Connors captured the fifth game of the third set.

Connors, 23, who beat the 29-year-old Nastase in straight sets at Hampton, Va., just a week ago, appeared befuddled by a switch of strategy when the Rumanian quit trying to match the lefthander's power and successfully went to softer placements

To get into this week's tournament, Nastase had to pay a $6,000 fine assessed against him for a match in Canada last year where he was accused of not trying in the final set he lost to Manual Orantes.

"He played good," Connors commented of Nastase this time. "He ran down a lot of balls and hit some great shots."

The first thing you have to do to get a lot of car for not a lot of money is believe it's possible.

The 1976 Fiat 131 Sedan.

You can't believe that a car costing as little as ours could come with rack-and-pinion steering, a five-speed gear box, front-wheel disc brakes, radial tires, undercoating, tinted windows, door-to-door carpeting, a rear window defroster, an adjustable steering wheel, and complete rustproofing? Plus the room of much larger cars? And the performance of much more expensive ones?

Then, before you spend your money on any car, you'd better test drive a Fiat 131.

Because not only is it possible, but all those things come on a 131 with a choice of either two doors or four.

Chapman, L.B. State trade wins

Lefthander Bob McRae pitched five innings of one-hit baseball and his teammate banged out 14 hits in six innings Saturday as host Long Beach State split a doubleheader with Chapman College.

McRae and the 49ers jumped on the Panthers for an 11-1 triumph in the seven-inning nightcap after Chapman had won the first game, 3-2, by throwing the tying run out at the plate with two out in the ninth.

The 49ers (13-10) made it easy for McRae to secure his second win when Shaughn Lewicki walked to force in one tally and Greg Commentz, Jim Smith, Steve Fenoglio (2 runs) and Frank Hardy followed with consecutive run-scoring singles in a six-run third inning.

Vikes' Metro skein snapped

Saturday was not Long Beach City College's day.

First the Vikings saw a ninth-inning, game-tying rally dissolve when Ed Myers singled into a double play.

Then the Vikings saw their 10-game Metropolitan Conference win streak disappear when Bill Tidmore limited them to three hits while hurling host East L.A. College to a 1-0 triumph.

The second event could not have taken place without the first.

Tidmore, who was to win his first Metro game of the season, was protecting the 1-0 lead when LBCC's Perry Maloney opened the ninth inning with a single and advanced on a groundout.

Jeff Newon was inserted as a pinch-runner and he was sent to the plate when Myers singled to center.

But East L.A.'s Ken Tillman fielded the ball cleanly and threw a strike to catcher Jess Monarrez, who tagged out Newon and then threw to second where the advancing Myers was tagged out.

The Monarchs managed only five hits themselves, but put two, two-out doubles together for a third-inning tally that spelled defeat for Greg Harris for the first time in six decisions.

Monarrez and Juan Williams had the back-to-back two-base hits.

The win was East L.A.'s fourth in 10 league games.

Patterson beats Santa Ana

Cerritos back on winning track

Dave Patterson, the pitcher of record Tuesday when Cerritos College suffered its first loss of the year, got the Falcons flying again Saturday.

Patterson hurled five-plus innings of one-hit relief and collected his sixth win of the season as Cerritos handed host Santa Ana College its first South Coast Conference loss of the year, 5-3.

The triumph, Cerritos' 16th in 17 games overall and fourth in five league outings, moved Wally Kincaid's troops back into first place in the SCC.

Santa Ana is 3-1 in league and 15-5 overall.

Cerritos lacked much of its offensive punch Saturday, collecting only six hits, three by first baseman Mark Carpenter. The Falcons were aided, however, by nine walks.

One of those free passes came with the bases loaded in the sixth inning and forced in the winning run. Carpenter drove in an insurance tally in that stanza with a groundout.

Upsets hit L.B. junior net tourney

By BOB MARTIN
Staff Writer

Upsets rocked the 20th Long Beach Junior Tennis Championships Saturday, but two national champions advanced with ease to this morning's semifinals.

Lea Antonoplis of Glendora, the national Girls 16 champion in 1975, won two matches in the Girls 18 division, beating Julie Gebhart of Pacific Palisades, 6-1, 6-0, and then ousting Elizabeth Smith of San Diego, 6-1, 6-1.

Lea, who has played in some of the Virginia Slims women's pro tournaments, is top-seeded.

Tracy, who turned 13 last December, won the national Girls 14 title last summer.

Two 11-year-old Long Beach stars, Carol Heynen and Brad Ackerman, won two matches each to gain the semifinals. They were the only players from the host city left in singles contention as the second weekend of competition got under way at the Lakewood County Club Tennis Center and Long Beach City College.

Miss Heynen, top-seeded in Girls 12s, blanked Carey Hagey of La Jolla, 6-0, 6-0, in the third round and then beat Anne Nasser of Pasadena in the quarterfinals by the same score. She has yet to lose a game in the meet.

In the Boys 12s, Ackerman defeated Tim Pawsat of Santa Ana, 6-4, 7-5, in the fourth round, and then eliminated Jeff Krieger of Claremont in the quarterfinals, 6-2, 6-0. He'll face top-seeded Ricky Leach of Arcadia at 10 this morning.

Semifinals and finals in all events will be played today at Lakewood Country Club.

THE BIGGEST upset was registered in the Boys 18 division when unseeded Chris Dunk of Santa Ana ousted top-seeded Curt Stalder of Rancho Palos Verdes in the round of 16 by a 2-6, 6-4, 7-6 score.

Dunk, a 6-foot, 3 ½-inch senior at Foothill High in Tustin, led 5-1 in the third set, then fell behind 5-6 before pulling out the match over Stalder, who plays for UC Irvine.

At 9 this morning, Dunk will face sixth-seeded Robert Van't Hof of Downey, who plays regularly on the La Lakewood courts.

John Stiepel of Los Alamitos also scored a major upset, as he eliminated second-seeded Randy Nixon of Coronado, 7-6, 7-6, in a Boys 16 quarterfinal.

LBSU women go East for shot at national cage championship

By ELAINE RISINGER
Staff Writer

Even before the first pre-season game in December, Fran Schaafsma was calling her Long Beach State basketball team "the best I've ever coached." During last week's western regionals at San Jose State, the 49ers set about proving it.

The squad won a bid to the AIAW National Tournament by upsetting UCLA in the semifinals. UCLA had edged LBSU twice during the regular season.

Fran and the team will leave Monday for Penn State where they will meet second-seeded Immaculata College in the opening contest Wednesday. The last time the 49ers were in national competition 1972 when they finished sixth.

Cal State Fullerton, which won the regional title, goes into the championship race ranked third. Delta State College of Mississippi, defending champions, are top seeded. Sixteen school will participate.

Fran is optimistic over her team's chances at Penn State. "I don't think anybody there will be any tougher than the teams we faced here. I don't plan to change anything in our game. We will just try to execute with consistency."

Two players are doubtful for the 49ers. Cardi Hicks, a starting guard, has a sprained ankle, and Debbie Cantu, reserve guard, has an injured knee.

Recounting the final game against Fullerton at the regionals, Fran quoted Billy Moore, the Fullerton coach, who described her team's night as "the best game we've played."

Fran continued, "Fullerton played superbly. Nancy Dunkle had 29 points and blocked seven or eight shots. She really looked like an all-America."

An early lead and a scoring blitz in the middle of the second half provided the victory for Fullerton. "Our big thing was to qualify for nationals," explained Fran, who feels fatigue from a three-game schedule and LBSU's victory over UCLA left her team a little flat for the Fullerton game.

LBSU gymnasts missed qualifying for the AIAW National Tournament by a mere 1.9 points at the western regionals last weekend. Coach Marion Duncan lost a team member, Marta Stolz, during her first event with torn knee tendons.

LBSU's top all-around gymnast, Denise Garber, was one of only two individual specialists qualifying for the nationals. She earned a score of 33.3. Miss Garber is entered this weekend in the Western States University Games at Cal State Hayward, and will compete at the nationals in early April at Appalachaian State University, Boone, N.C.

Top scorer for the day from Long Beach City College (the only community college to qualify for the regionals) was Susie Rapp, who had an 8.1 on the balance beam.

Only four universities, Cal State Fullerton, San Diego State, USC and University of Nevada-Reno, qualified for national competition, an indication of the high skill level demanded by judges in the area. Most conferences, coach Duncan explained, send six or seven teams, which many times finished lower in the finals than the Southern California entries.

SALLY MONSOOR, coach of the Long Beach City College tennis team, hopes Golden West College will be "worried just a little bit" after the Viking's' strong 6-1 triumph Thursday over Orange Coast College. LBCC meets Golden West Thursday on the GWC home courts.

In the winning column at the OCC-LBCC contest were Marilyn Pruett, 7-6, 6-3; Terry Berryman, 6-1, 6-1; Chris St. Schruber, 6-1, 6-7, 7-6; Laura Krebs and Terri Machado, 6-0, 6-2; Karolyn Hathaway and

WOMEN IN SPORTS

Joan McLean, 6-3, 6-1, and Betsy Hose and Jani Kuhn, 6-2, 6-1.

IN A match that wasn't decided until the very last game, LBCC's coed badminton team tied L.A. City College, 12-12. "It was one of the best games we've had all season," coach Gillis Brown said.

The two schools split matches in the ladies, men's and mixed singles. L.A. pushed ahead in the ladies doubles with LBCC coming back to tie in the men's doubles.

Rhea Gram's badminton team at Cerritos College ran its Coast League record to a perfect 2-0 by stopping Pasadena College, 16-8. Greg Garrett, Henry Xang, Dominic Cadena, Harmon Vincon and Jerry Baas each won three matches for the Falcons. Paul Luangraj and James Tung won two.

ALTHOUGH the LBCC softball team lost Monday to Golden West, 6-0, coach Donna Prindle was pleased with her team's play against the National Community College champions. Cindy Mast earned LBCC's one hit.

LBCC also lost to Mt. San Antonio College Wednesday. Top batters for the Vikings are Kim Doyle, .500, Kay Haggerty, .385, and Kim Kelly, .307.

Offensively, Norma Jackson was a one-woman gang when the Cerritos softball team downed East L.A., 6-0, Wednesday. Norma, a shortstop with an .889 batting average, hit two singles, a double, had 3 RBIs and scored twice.

Capably taking over as catcher for the day was Pam Wunderlich, who replaced Barbara Johnson, out with an injured back. Pam, a freshman from Mayfair High School, singled and scored a run.

Cerritos squeaked by Santa Ana College, 1-0, Monday in a nonleague game pitched by Norma Jackson, who allowed only one hit and had seven strikeouts.

THE WAY things are shaping up, it appears that Thursday's basketball game between Jordan and Poly High Schools will decide the Vinnie G. Eaton title. Both teams are undefeated at this point.

Jordan downed Millikan Thursday, 45-29, with Adrienne Hamilton leading the scoring with 20 points. Rhonda Skitch added 11. Adrienne had 22 rebounds, Rhonda 13.

Launa Gaudette was high scorer in the JV game won by Jordan, 26-12. Latishue Hamilton's 11 rebounds aided the victory. Lorie Lindahl is team coach.

Prix drivers will be on scene today

By ALLEN WOLFE
Staff Writer

Grand Prix drivers, crews, and officials of the Formula One Constructors Association — all of whom will take part in next week's United States Grand Prix West — are scheduled to arrive in Southern California today following a 12-hour trans-polar flight from London.

The charter jet, carrying 240 passengers, including 40 members of the European press, is due to touch down at 6:05 p.m. at the West Imperial Terminal of L.A. International Airport.

Among those meeting the plane will be Long Beach Grand Prix president Chris Pook plus association officers Dan Gurney, Phil Hill, Don Dyer, Jack Queen, Pete Biro, John Queen, Jim Michaelian and Sumner Offill.

"We will be part of a small welcoming delegation," says Pook. "Nothing elaborate is planned. Everyone will be tired from their long flight and we will do our best to have them situated in their hotels as soon as possible."

Grand Prix drivers arriving on the flight will be Jody Scheckter, Patrick Depailler, Gunnar Nilsson, Bob Evans, Carlos Reutemann, Carlos Pace, Vittorio Brambilla, Ronnie Peterson, Jochen Mass, Tom Pryce, Jean-Pierre Jarier, Renzo Zorzi, Harold Ertl, John Watson, Emerson Fittipaldi, Ingo Hoffman, Hans Stuck and Arturo Merzario.

James Hunt, winner of last Sunday's non-championship Race of Champions at Brands Hatch, England, has been in Long Beach since Tuesday, while Brett Lunger and his bride Jo have been in town for almost 10 days. World driving champion Niki Lauda, engaged in test sessions at the Ferrari factory in Modena, Italy, will not arrive until early Tuesday. His Ferrari teammate, Clay Regazzoni, arrived Saturday.

The majority of the Grand Prix teams will be staying aboard the Queen Mary, although the Elf Tyrrell team of Ken Tyrrell, Jody Scheckter and Patrick Depailler will stay at the Breakers Hotel, and the French Ligier Gitanes team with driver Jacques Laffite will reside at the Buffums Apartment Hotel.

For the first part of the week, the Grand Prix troupe will be engaged in sightseeing ventures around Southern California, including trips to Disneyland, Marineland and Knott's Berry Farm, plus accommodating the media at numerous functions.

The Grand Prix cars will be shuttled to Long Beach via two Tradewinds Airlines CF-44 freight planes, one scheduled to arrive at Long Beach Airport at 9:30 p.m. Tuesday, the other at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday. Both planes will clear customs in Bangor, Maine, refuel and fly non-stop to Long Beach.

Once the cars arrive in Long Beach, they will be dispersed to seven auto dealerships in town, where they will undergo registration and technical inspection Thursday from 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Jamestown Motors, 1350 Long Beach Blvd., will house the cars belonging to Team Tyrrell, McLaren, UOP Shadow, John Player Team Lotus, Frank Williams and Penske. Team Surtees will be at Import Auto, 1460 Long Beach Blvd.; Team March will be at Salta Pontiac, 1545 Long Beach Blvd.; Copersucar-Fittipaldi will be at Coast Cadillac, 1501 Long Beach Blvd.; Ferrari will be at Bob Autry, 1860 Long Beach Blvd.; Team Hesketh will be at Holiday Motors, 1427 Long Beach Blvd., and Martini-Brabham will be at Mel Burns Ford, 2000 Long Beach Blvd.

The public is invited to see the cars on display during registration and tech inspection, although the cars will be on formal display later Thursday at the Concours d'Elegance on Pine Ave. between First and Fifth streets. The affair is scheduled from 3 to 4 p.m.

Competition begins Friday with the first round of practice and qualifying, followed by additional time trials Saturday to determine the 24 starters for the race Sunday.

The United States Grand Prix West is for a duration of two hours, starting at 1:15 p.m.

Andretti will sample drag boat

Mario Andretti, who will be driving through the streets of Long Beach next Sunday in the U.S. Grand Prix West, is about to discover what it's like to go over 150 mph in a drag boat.

Andretti will ride with lady driver Mary Rife in her blown fuel hydro "Proud Mary" to start today's Kidney Foundation drag boat racing benefit at noon at Marine Stadium.

Rife, a Mission Viejo housewife who doubles as a machinist in Gardena to help finance her racing program, went 168 mph Saturday during qualifying to earn a berth among the 16 finalists for today's event.

The 3,000-plus spectators who tuned out Saturday saw seven boats surpass 180 mph and two exceed 190. Top speed of the day was turned in by Doug Hilton, Redondo Beach, at 192.42 mph.

Millionaire mare Dahlia tests males, Santa Anita turf today

Dahlia, racing's millionaire mare, gets her first look at Santa Anita's grass course today when she faces seven male rivals in the $100,000 San Luis Rey Stakes.

Sandy Hawley, Santa Anita's top rider this meeting, will be aboard Dahlia, who will carry 121 pounds in the 1½-mile event.

The six-year-old daughter of Vaguely Noble can become the richest mare in racing history with a victory or even a second-place finish in the San Luis Rey. She needs less than $20,000 to top Allez France's money-winning mark.

Dahlia's top contenders in the event, worth $66,300 to the winner, are expected to be Top Command, ridden by Bill Shoemaker; Avatar, the Belmont Stakes winner, ridden by Laffit Pincay, and grass specialists Announcer, ridden by Fernando Toro, and Top Crowd, with Frank Olivares aboard.

Completing the field are Gai Hai, with Don Pierce up; One On The Aisle, Jorge Tejeira up, and Copper Mel, with Francisco Mena aboard.

All starters, with the exception of Dahlia, who receives a five-pound sex allowance, will carry 126 pounds.

In Santa Anita's feature race Saturday, the $56,800 San Bernardino Handicap, Hawley piloted Martin Ritt's Zanthe, who commanded the pace from the start and lengthened his lead in the stretch to draw out to a seven-length victory.

Second choice of the crowd of 35,459, Zanthe carried 118 pounds, equaled the course record of 1:45⅘ for 1⅛-miles on the turf and returned $7, $3.40 and $2.80.

Favored Riot In Paris, with Shoemaker in the irons, paid $3 and $2.60 for second place and Mateor, ridden by Don Pierce, paid $3.60.

Bingo II, Copper Mel and Cruiser II completed the order of finish in the field of six four-year-olds and up.

The winner, trained by Bobby Frankel, picked up $34,000 as he won his second stakes of the season. Earlier at Santa Anita Zanthe captured the San Gabriel and also placed in both the San Marcos and the San Luis Obispo.

"It was a good race for him," Hawley said. "He rates so well, but I think he could have done just as well if he wasn't on the lead. Turning for home, I hit him a couple of times just to keep him from loafing."

The victory was the seventh stakes win of the meeting for Hawley.

U.S. RACE ROUNDUP

GULFSTREAM Hail The Pirates ($11.20), purchased earlier this week by John A. Bell III, caught Legion in the final stride to win a three horse photo-finish in the $122,600 Gulfstream Park Handicap. Ridden by Braulio Baeza, the winner was a nose in front of longshot Legion, who was a head in front of Packer Captain. The 6-5 favorite, Hatchet Man, was fourth in the field of seven and Foolish Pleasure, who would have been an overwhelmingly favorite, was not entered because trainer Leroy Jolley did not like the weight assignment of 131 pounds. The winner's time for the 1¼ miles was 2:01⅕.

AQUEDUCT Bold Forbes ($5.40) bolstered his Kentucky Derby credentials by running away from seven other three-year-olds and winning the $56,300 Bay Shore Stakes in stakes record time. Ridden by Angel Cordero, the winner crossed the finish line 7½ lengths ahead of Eustace and was clocked in 1:20⅘ for the seven furlongs. The victory was Bold Forbes' second in four starts this year and his ninth in 12 career starts.

OAKLAWN Jorge Tejeira, aboard his third winner of the day, rode heavily favored Royal Glint ($2.60) to victory in the $50,000-added Razorback Handicap. Winner of the $250,000 Santa Anita Handicap, Royal Glint defeated Marauder by four lengths in 1:42⅘ for the mile and 1/16.

NEW ORLEANS—Johnny Appleseed ($24.40) came from far off the pace to win by a neck in the $100,000 Louisiana Derby. Ridden by Marcos Castanedas, the winner charged along the rail at the head of the stretch and outdueled Glassy Dip in the final eighth of a mile. Favored Princely Game faded to 12th in the 1⅛-mile contest, timed in 1:49.

GOLDEN GATE Nice To Have ($[illegible]) began to circle her competitors at the turn, then cut loose in the stretch to win by a head in the $22,350 Gold Poppy Handicap. The leading four among eight fillies and mares were separated by a head, a neck and a nose. Silverlark was second and Our First Delight ran third. Randy Schacht was the winning jockey for the mile and 1/16, timed in 1:4[illegible].

PIMLICO Zen ($3.40) defeated Cojak by 2¾ lengths in a field of [illegible] winners to win the $2[illegible] [illegible] Stakes. Ridden by Jacinto Vasquez, the winner ran the six furlongs in [illegible].

Inflation hits state parks; fees will go up, April 1

Inflation has hit the California State Parks and the use fees for most of those will rise on April 1. Herbert Rhodes, director of State Parks and Recreation, says the increases are necessary because of a 200 per cent rise in the costs of maintaining and operating state park units since the last general increase in 1967.

Although the acquisition and development of land and facilities for the park system are supported by all people of California, those who actually use the park facilities are expected to support about 50 per cent of the operating and maintenance costs, Rhodes pointed out.

He said that all tickets purchased before April 1, including future campsite reservations, will be available at the present rates. Fees for tours of Hearst Castle were revised in March 1974, and will not be changed.

Here is the schedule of changes for camping:

Campsites with facility hookups for camping vehicles, $5 per night, up $1 from the present rate. Most family campsites, $4, up $1, which include a table, stove and food cupboard. Such sites also are provided with flush toilets, piped drinking water, improved roads and in most cases, hot showers and laundries.

Primitive (undeveloped) campsites, $2, up 50 cents. Such sites normally includes cleared access roads, chemical or pit toilets and, in sme cases, a table and central water supply.

CHARGES FOR GROUP CAMPS will remain the same—50 cents per night for each person in adult groups, and 25 cents per night for each person in youth groups (17 years of age and younger). The minimum charge for any group is $10.

Reservation fees for campsites and group camps remain the same—$1.50 per campsite for each period reserved, payable when reservations are made; $2.50 per group camp for each period reserved.

Horse camps, $3 per campsite per night, up $1, with up to two horses; 50 cents for each additional horse (up 25 cents); $4 per campsite per night for Los Caballos Campground at Cuyamaca Rancho State Park (up $1).

Boat camps, $2 per campsite per night (up 50 cents).

Off-season camping permits, $20 (up $10). Each permit is good for 10 nights of camping at designated units in the off-season (winter at most state units, summer in desert units).

Additional motor vehicle, $1 per night (no change).

Dogs in campgrounds, $1 per night (up 50 cents); no charge for seeing-eye dogs.

Trail camps (hikers and bicyclers), 50 cents per night per person. This is a new category of campground being established this year. Most of those will be situated near the coast.

THERE ALSO ARE CHANGES in the day-use permits:

Persons entering by private vehicle, $1.50 (up 50 cents); on foot, 25 cents (no change); by bus, $5 per bus (up $2).

Secret Witness case summaries

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 65 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $43,000 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial. Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the case list below, one of the selected and varying summaries of Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information DIRECTLY through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing in care of the Secret Witness post office box.

Today's summaries follow:

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 49-year-old deaf mute Kenneth Lawrence Willis, found stabbed to death in his Long Beach duplex at 6042 Orange Ave. on Dec. 30, 1975.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 59-year-old David E. Smith, of Downey, shot to death during a holdup at Lucy's Restaurant, 5096 Long Beach Blvd., shortly before 2 a.m. on Nov. 24, 1975.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the torch slayer of Alice Olay, 52, of Downey, whose charred body was found in a blazing auto in a lot at Pioneer Boulevard and Rosecrans Avenue in Norwalk early on the morning of Sept. 19, 1975.

—A $1,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and manslaughter conviction of the hit-run driver who struck and killed Myrtle Taylor, 88, of Gardena, as she was crossing Vermont Avenue at 149th Street in Gardena at 7:15 p.m. on Oct. 24, 1975. The driver was described by witnesses as a tall, thin black man about 30 years old, driving a 1969 Chevrolet Impala or Caprice, blue with a matching vinyl top.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Robert L. Boone, 28, of Long Beach, who was found shot to death in a Signal Hill field at 23rd Street and Junipero Avenue on the morning of Aug. 18, 1975.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the holdup slayer of Benjamin Wallace, 48-year-old San Pedro taxi driver who was found shot to death and slumped over the wheel of his cab parked at Seaside Avenue and Terminal Way on Terminal Island at 3 a.m. on Sunday, Aug. 3, 1975.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of James Hamilton Macgenn, 50-year-old employe of King's Imperial Restaurant in Lynwood at 1004 Atlantic Ave., stabbed to death in the restaurant parking lot as he was leaving work at 3:30 a.m. on June 1, 1975.

—Rewards totaling $3,500 — including $2,000 guaranteed by Secret Witness and $1,500 pledged by store owner Christopher Saunders — will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Duane Fettig, 29-year-old clerk shot to death during a holdup at the Melody Liquor Store, 20716 S. Normandie Ave. in the Torrance area, on the morning of Feb. 5, 1975.

—A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest of Douglas Lee Thompson, 23-year-old fugitive from a murder warrant in connection with the holdup-slaying of David W. Arouette in his television repair shop at 8465 Long Beach Blvd. on Dec. 30, 1973, with an additional reward of $1,500 to be paid when and if Thompson is convicted of the murder.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of Graydon James Smith, 42, stabbed to death in the living quarters behind his dry cleaning shop at 3937 Long Beach Blvd. during an apparent robbery attempt on Nov. 4, 1974.

How to become a Secret Witness

For this purpose a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identities of informants will be kept secret.

You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal or the capture of a fugitive in cases publicized in this column. Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions, or the capture of fugitives, in cases not published in Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone 436-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight on weekdays, or from 3 pm. to 11 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Do NOT give us your name. Or write to: Secret Witness, P.O. Box 67, Long Beach, Calif. 90801.

THE SEAL BEACH PIER, ON THE QUIET OF A LATE WINTER DAY

'A little bit of someplace else'

Seal Beach: city of many hamlets

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

SEAL BEACH'S GREEN BELT ALONG THE OLD PACIFIC ELECTRIC ROUTE

Pick a nice subdivision somewhere. Say in Reseda or Northridge. Or La Palma or Anaheim.

Then plunk yourself down in College Park East, a large but tidy tract of single family homes in the northeast corner of Seal Beach, and see if you can tell the difference.

Chances are you'll think you're in Reseda or Northridge. Or La Palma or Anaheim. Or any one of a hundred middle-class subdivisions that are part of the great suburban sprawl of Southern California.

IF YOU'D like a change of scenery, though, you might try getting on Seal Beach Boulevard and driving south toward the ocean. You'll have to traverse the San Diego Freeway, of course, then cross Westminster Avenue and Pacific Coast Highway. But if you persevere, you'll end up in a section of the city that offers a mellow blend of expansive beachfront, sparkling ocean, quiet streets, pleasant homes and charming storefronts, not to mention a city hall that is modeled after Santa Barbara's and an open belt that cuts a refreshing green swath through the center of town on what used to be the old Pacific Electric right-of-way.

In Seal Beach, the section is known as Old Town; to the outsider who first sets eyes on it, it's nirvana by the sea—a nostalgic setting that borrows joyfully from the past (without being precious about it) and guards its small-town character with the same fierce if provincial jealousy that San Franciscans reserve for their town.

Unconsciously, if not consciously, Old Town is the Confederacy of Seal Beach. It would just as soon be on its own. As for College Park East, it would probably feel more comfortable as part of adjoining Los Alamitos or nearby Rossmoor.

OLD TOWN and College Park East form the Odd Couple of Seal Beach—or rather, one of its Odd Couples. But, then, that's the nature of the city: it's not "a whole bunch of small towns more or less glued together," as Laker basketball star Kareem Abdul-Jabbar said of Los Angeles recently. It's a crazy collage of disparate communities, joined in political matrimony and clinging tenuously to the sides of a huge federal reservation known as the U. S. Naval Weapons Station, which forms the centerpiece of the collage.

Although it is under federal jurisdiction, the weapons station lies within the boundaries of Seal Beach and, in fact, occupies more than half of its 12 square miles. In a sense, it represents the largest piece of open space in Seal Beach, with 1,200 of its 5,000 acres having been designated a wildlife refuge.

And while it's true that the weapons station accentuates the splintered quality of the town, it's also true that it has been a buffer against massive development. It may, in fact, be Seal Beach's last remaining barrier to amoebic growth and unrelieved suburban sprawl.

The other sections of the city include, in addition to College Park East and Old Town, the Hill, College Park West, Leisure World, Surfside and the Oakwood apartment complex, not to mention a trailer park and a fancy housing tract called Bridgeport.

COLLEGE Park West is smaller but similar to its counterpart on the east and nestles in a triangle formed by the Garden Grove Freeway, the San Diego Freeway and the San Gabriel River. It lies about three miles west of its sister subdivision and is virtually isolated from the rest of the city. Outside of the freeways, it has only one entrance and exit, and that's through Long Beach.

Just south of it, on the other side of the San Diego-Garden Grove Freeway, is Leisure World, the famous retirement community that is sealed off from its neighbors by a surrounding wall and a gate through which visitors can enter only by special permission. Leisure World accounts for almost a third of the city's population of 28,000.

No other section of the city outside of the weapons station quite rivals Leisure World for its sense of isolation as Surfside, a private community of beachfront homes and cottages with a fence around it and a guarded entrance.

Then there's Oakwood, an isolated, almost forgotten apartment compound that would feel right at home in Long Beach if it didn't sit on the other side of the San Gabriel River.

OAKWOOD has a twin (more or less) in Long Beach's Stoneybrook, a three-story superblock of garden apartments that fits right into the chic new housing pattern of southeast Long Beach, where Marina Pacifica is the reigning queen.

Seal Beachers—if they think of Oakwood at all, and they seldom do—think of it as a haven for swinging singles. It's an overworked image, though. What swinging goes on in Oakwood is far more sedate than it may have been in the South Bay Clubs that preceded it on the Southland scene. (The South Bay Clubs—they're all Oakwoods now—catered exclusively to single people.)

Today (if you don't count kids) Oakwood has a healthy mixture of singles, married and unmarried couples and oldsters. And while it seems like a glorified dormitory to someone coming in from the outside, its numerous social and recreational activities also give it an air of resort life (the image it likes to project).

You'd think that a town with as many separate identities as Seal Beach inevitably would suffer a certain psychic dislocation. And you'd be right, of course. Even Seal Beachers have a hard time trying to get a handle on their city.

Is it an easy-going beach town that suddenly comes alive each summer with swarms of visitors? Or is it a central city surrounded by residential areas?

And where does its real personality lie—in the surrounding enclaves, which form a loose confederation of middle-class fiefdoms, or in the city's old core, a proud little kingdom that seems forever on the verge of political burial?

Oldtimers in the city would like to think of it as a beach town, and, secretly, many who live in Old Town would just as soon hack it alone if it were possible—although most of them admit it's not.

You'll get a few oldtimers to concede that Surfside and the Hill (which lies just north of Old Town, above Pacific Coast Highway) are legitimate parts of the city. But the other annexed areas? God, no!

MIND YOU, the old timers don't begrudge the outlanders their well-trimmed lawns and backyard barbecues. They're "fine citizens," says Ray Gise, a pipe-smoking resident of Old Town with 50 years of Seal Beach history under his belt. It's just that the outlying sections belong elsewhere—in Long Beach, Los Alamitos or Rossmoor. Neither their roots nor their hearts are really in Seal Beach, the old timers will tell you—Seal Beach in their lexicon, of course, meaning Old Town.

Nowhere is the split personality of the city so evident as on the city council, where a four-to-one vote seems to be the rule rather than the exception—the lone vote usually being Old Town's.

Blind hit-run victim mourned at funeral as 'friend to everyone'

By KRIS SHERMAN
Staff Writer

An estimated 500 mourners, including several members of the Guide Dog Boosters of America accompanied by their dogs, attended funeral services for Raymond La Belle in Long Beach Saturday.

La Belle was struck by a hit-and-run driver as he crossed San Antonio Drive at Atlantic Avenue last Sunday evening. He died of internal injuries two days later at Memorial Hospital.

His wife of 10 months, Marsha, 26, also was injured. She was listed in satisfactory condition at Harbor General Hospital in Torrance, where she underwent surgery Tuesday for a fractured pelvis.

Both have been blind since birth.

The two, guided by Marsha's dog, Tad, were crossing to the east side of San Antonio Drive with the green light when they were struck by the hit-and-run driver, who was northbound on Atlantic Avenue.

County prosecutors have filed a three-count criminal complaint against a 50-year-old Long Beach man, Harry Lee Lyles, of 2103 Orange Ave.

Lyles, arrested Wednesday after a car matching the description of the hit-and-run vehicle was found near his home, is free on $1,500 bail. He is scheduled for arraignment Tuesday in Long Beach Municipal Court on one count of felony manslaughter and two counts of felony hit-and-run driving.

La Belle's funeral in the Long Beach Fourth Ward of the Mormon Church was conducted just a few blocks from the accident scene, and mourners noted with more than usual sadness that their friend, who loved automobiles, was ironically killed by one.

'Bill of Increased Rights' due for aged

By MOLLY BURRELL
Staff Writer

A "Bill of Increased Rights" for senior citizens—including pioneer legislation which prohibits listing age on applications for state jobs—is emerging in the California Legislature, Human Relations Commission conferees learned Saturday in Long Beach.

The legislative review came from Assemblyman Fred Chel, D-Long Beach, chairman of the Joint Committee on Aging. He was one of six speakers at a meeting at the Queensway Hilton where about 400 HRC members from throughout the state held their third annual conference.

Other proposed bills would mandate training and utilization of an older-worker specialist in each state employment office, change the Office on Aging to the Department of Aging, and make an independent Commission on Aging responsible for advising the state on all matters of concern to older persons.

Already enacted is nursing home legislation that sets up an ombudsman program and mandates unannounced inspections by the health department, which then can issue citations and assess fines.

Chel also stressed the need for liaison in all matters that concern the elderly—health, housing, education, nursing care homes, transportation and consumer affairs. He said this is a major objective of the proposal to give the Department of Aging co-equal status in order to coordinate with other state departments.

"California has the largest pool of aging population of any state in the union and will probably continue that way," he said.

"Funding for senior citizen programs has increased from $432,904 in 1967 to $20,640,000 this year," he said, adding, "I see it as my personal as well as committee responsibility to see that this money is spent in the best possible way."

But, he warned, all money programs are going to have tough sledding in the Brown administration and advocates should agree on a small number of specific priorities rather than press for everything at once.

Earlier in the meeting, Loretta Peterson, a state ombudsman from the California Office on Aging, told the group "This is the Day of the Seniors. They are breaking out of stereotypes, opening doors, expanding horizons including job expectations and sex."

George Toll, chairman of the Long Beach Advisory Committee on Senior Citizens Affairs, Cora Corks, chairman of the state Commission on Aging, Helen Wakefield and Esther Jackson of the Long Beach Senior Opportunities Services (SOS) were the other speakers.

Other panels Friday and Saturday dealt with affirmative action, gay rights, housing and zoning, Chicano concerns, black feminism, urban Indians, redlining, inter-ethnic conflict, human resources and employment.

People Talk

J. C. Anderson

"SPRING HAS come, the grass has riz, and I know where a 27-inch catfish is." He's in the frying pan of the anonymous Long Beach fisherwoman who caught him unawares at El Dorado Park and invited him to a no-host lunch.

Moonstruck schoolboys write spring on cement block walls and Russell W. Shoup of Long Beach commits its magic to paper in a poetic letter to the editor. Kites sky-dance, [illegible] and homemakers with dustcloths in their hands semaphor the season's arrival [illegible] as baseball diamonds turn into Woolworth's rhinestones.

Spring is a time for rebirth, for nature and for my venerable Pinto, the troubles of which finally came to a stop with a new emergency brake. No [illegible] afraid to risk the freeways and highway patrol safety citations. The full moon has appeared, bringing with it the magical ministrations of Jack Wixom, owner of Pacific Ford, who passed the right word to his mechanics.

The Pinto I once swore at I now swear by. My regard for the restored little wagon is equal to the sum of all its parts, working parts, that is.

SPRING is a time to make amends to a Cub Scout wronged when I inadvertently omitted his name from a column I did about the pupils in Room 1 at Mark Twain School. So let's hear it for Scott Bushman, gentleman, scholar and one of teacher Gail Schack's brightest lights. Great Scott! How could I have been so remiss? I'm sorry, young Master Bushman. It won't happen again. Cub Scout honor on that.

Certainly I should be as kind to Scott as he was to me. For as he wrote in a letter to me a few days after my visit:

"Dear Mr. Anderson. Thank you for coming to school. It was nice [illegible] I like the paper [illegible]"

And now that I have at last mentioned Scott Bushman's name, I hope he will think even better of the paper.

If that sentence were a rose, I'd press it in my memory book of spring. For if it is true that I can talk to children, then perhaps one can speak to tomorrow, can know the future and see its genesis in the eyes of the young.

What if Jerry Brown goes to Washington?

SACRAMENTO—If "different" is the same as "good," then Jerry Brown is a good governor of California and perhaps could be a good president of the United States.

Of course, if that were the only quality required, Evel Knievel could be a good president, too.

Certainly other qualities are necessary. Certainly Jerry Brown has other qualities. Do the qualities Jerry Brown possesses at least approximate the qualities required of a president?

Jerry Brown says he wants to be President. He has asked that his qualities be examined. He is asking more than that. He is asking that people compare his attitudes and concerns with theirs. And if they are similar, he is saying, that is reason enough to entrust him with the presidency.

Voters are no longer going to respond, the governor thinks, to "candidates (who) hold out 52 or 21 programs and say 'because of these, elect me.'

"If you look at this country today, (people) are looking for vision.

"I'm offering people not years of expertise but the energy and the openness of someone who has come rather late to the process."

And so, he says, he will not "string out a laundry list or a set of boxes and packages of things that have been done. A lot has been done in the last year in this state, but that's not the point.

Bob Schmidt

View From Our State Bureau

"It's a process, it's an energy, and it's a commitment to a particular style of government and an approach, and that's all, and people can make their choice."

Two years ago, gubernatorial candidate Brown was saying pretty much what he is saying now. The right answers can't be found until the right questions are asked, he said, and the right questions are not being asked.

So what was being done wasn't working, and a New Spirit was needed in Sacramento.

The New Spirit was elected, and the questions being asked do indeed seem to be different, and the people looking for the answers do indeed appear to be different in background and style from their predecessors.

Whether what is being done is different, too, is not known yet.

Certainly few if any changes which might have been accomplished in state government's method of doing things, or even in its choices of things to do, have filtered down to the people.

Pretty pictures are now on the walls of some local Department of Motor Vehicles offices, but, to ask a Jerry Brown-type question, is that the way to a better world?

It is, apparently, the way to higher ratings in public opinion polls.

But somewhere along the road between Jerry Brown's downtown Sacramento apartment and the White House, the relative responsibilities of a governor and a president are going to have to be examined.

A governor is a Very Important Person, without doubt. His budget decisions, his appointments to key offices, his support or opposition to legislative proposals, his leadership generally can have significant impact on the lives of people in his state.

In the national or global or even cosmic scheme of things, however, the President of the United States is quite something more than a Very Important Person.

A president can ask that war be declared. He commands the military and can, as Richard Nixon said, make a decision which would end the lives of millions of people in a matter of minutes. He can influence the value of the dollar and the pound and the mark and the lira and, hence, the price of a loaf of bread or a cup of rice. He can make jobs happen.

What he causes to be done can impact on 200 million people, on three billion people, on the dust of the moon, on all of this generation, and on the next, and on the ones after that.

A president is to a governor, it might be suggested, as a governor is to a grammar school hall monitor.

So that while a governor is a Very Important Person, people in his state might feel they can tolerate a little strangeness in him, allow him a little experimentation, give him room to depart from what has been the traditional way of doing things.

California, perhaps, can afford to be a pilot project for development of a New Spirit. It can afford to stop and think things over, to allow problems to simmer and policies emerge, to re-examine its expectations. For awhile.

Can the country afford to do those things? Can the world?

Jerry Brown would probably ask, Can the country and the world afford not to?

The more immediate question is, Is Jerry Brown wise enough to ask the right questions and, more important perhaps, is he wise enough to recognize the right answers?

It will be a different kind of business, this 1976 Democratic presidential primary in California.

Ford uses the media

President Ford has been granting lots of interviews to newspaper and television reporters recently.

By coincidence, he decided to honor an old Chicago Tribune interview request just before the Illinois primary. The same sort of coincidence had brought reporters for Florida newspapers to the Oval Office for a chat with the President just before the Florida primary. On Thursday 32 North Carolina reporters journeyed to Washington for an interview. Their state's Republicans choose between Ford and Ronald Reagan on Tuesday.

But by Thursday's meeting, journalists were beginning to have second thoughts. Three of North Carolina's leading editors—in Raleigh, Charlotte and Greensboro—politely declined the White House invitation.

"These are not command performances," presidential press secretary Ron Nessen said in response to criticism that journalists were unwittingly being used in the President's primary campaigns.

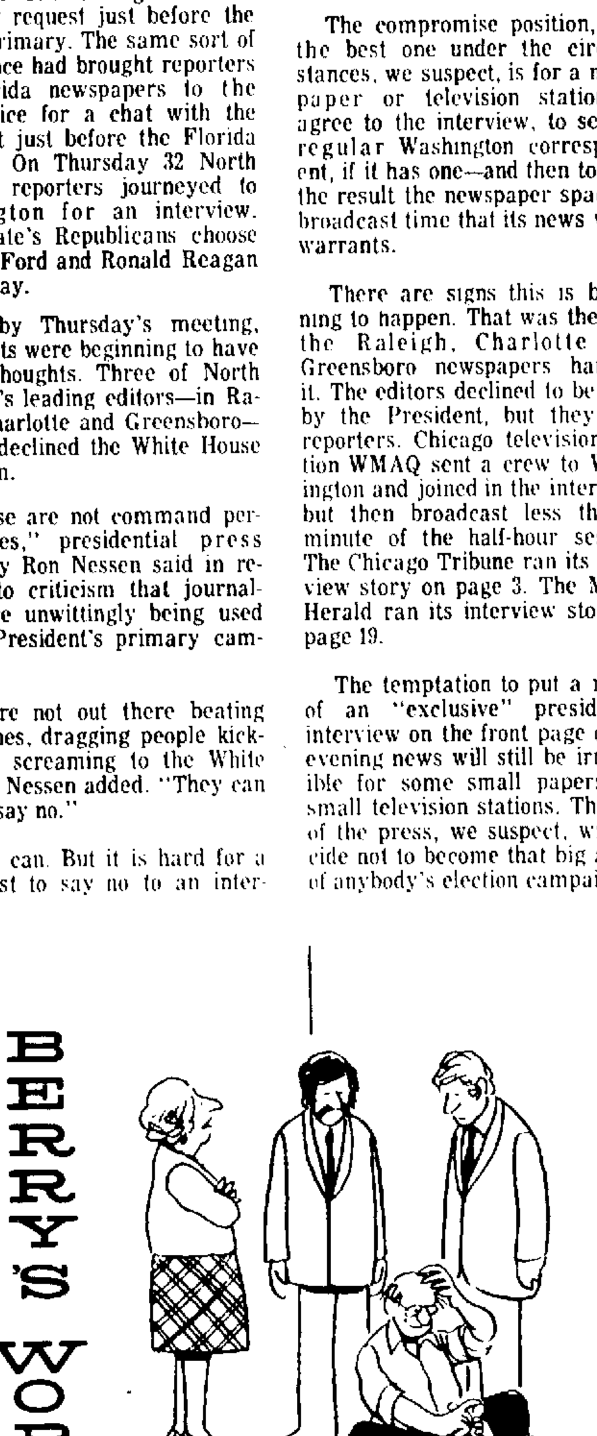
"We're not out there beating the bushes, dragging people kicking and screaming to the White House," Nessen added. "They can always say no."

They can. But it is hard for a journalist to say no to an interview that might produce real news. It is especially hard when the journalist knows that at least some rival journalists are certain to accept the invitation to talk with the President.

The compromise position, and the best one under the circumstances, we suspect, is for a newspaper or television station to agree to the interview, to send a regular Washington correspondent, if it has one—and then to give the result the newspaper space or broadcast time that its news value warrants.

There are signs this is beginning to happen. That was the way the Raleigh, Charlotte and Greensboro newspapers handled it. The editors declined to be used by the President, but they sent reporters. Chicago television station WMAQ sent a crew to Washington and joined in the interview, but then broadcast less than a minute of the half-hour session. The Chicago Tribune ran its interview story on page 3. The Miami Herald ran its interview story on page 19.

The temptation to put a report of an "exclusive" presidential interview on the front page or the evening news will still be irresistible for some small papers and small television stations. The rest of the press, we suspect, will decide not to become that big a part of anybody's election campaign.



"I think it was having to worry about terrorist gangs being able to make an atomic bomb that nearly made him crack!"

Cover-up mentality continues

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Malicious and premeditated destruction of evidence of political crimes in the Action agency demonstrates that Watergate cover-up mentality still permeates the highest levels of government.

The theoretically nonpartisan Civil Service Commission sat on a report showing systematic application of political standards imposed on Action agency appointments, in violation of the law.

Clark Mollenhoff

ONLY RECENTLY has the Justice Department, prodded by Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., and Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., initiated an investigation in the District of Columbia under U.S. Attorney Earl J. Silbert.

The mass of complaints from Action employes and Congress finally stimulated a Civil Service Commission investigation.

Although the commission, early in its investigaation, "obtained testimony concerning a purge of files in the Office of Staff Placement and Training to remove evidence of political screening activities," Civil Service Commission Chairman Robert Hampton did not ask for a probe of these obvious crimes. He leisurely finished the investigation and wrote a report. Then the commission sat on that report for months until Moss and Hawkins obtained a copy and sent it to the Justice Department with an analysis of the possible criminal law violations.

THAT REPORT, recently released by Moss and Hawkins, establishes these points.

1. Illegal political screening of candidates for appointment to theoretically nonpolitical high level posts in the Action agency was taking place systematically from 1971 through 1974 with the knowledge of some top Action officials.

2. Personnel records and documents related to those questionable hiring practices were destroyed with the approval of some people in top management.

It took Atty. Gen. Edward Levi's Justice Department two months after first seeing the report to conclude that "possible criminal violation may be indicated."

Assistant Atty. Gen. Richard L. Thornburg, who heads the criminal division, notified Moss and Hawkins on March 11 that the investigation was being referred to the United States attorney's office "for appropriate disposition."

THE ACTION agency was created in 1971 by President Nixon in a merger of the domestic VISTA program, the Peace Corps and a number of other voluntary agencies, and there were reports from the outset that the new agency was being highly politicized.

The Civil Service investigation established that personnel officials at Action were keeping track of political preference through "code forms" in which "P-I" indicated the highest political priority of "must be hired" and "P-V" was the lowest indicating "political unreliability" or a person "recommended by a political opponent of the President."

The Civil Service report cited evidence that one employe had taken incriminating records from the office, placed them in his car trunk for several months, and had finally dumped them in a trash can at a department store.

IF THERE IS more delay in the follow-through on these political crimes because they may involve persons still in government jobs, the statute of limitations might bar prosecution. Any unusual delays will be as much a part of the cover-up as the efforts of Action agency officials to destroy relevant records.

The politicizing of the Action agency demonstrates again the need for some type of nonpartisan special prosecutor to move objectively and aggressively when evidence points to crimes by political appointees where there are obvious conflicts of interest for any politically appointed attorney general.

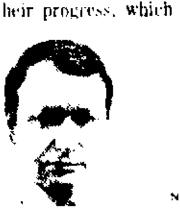
Why Ford, Carter lead

WASHINGTON — The success of Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter in the presidential race so far cannot be explained adequately by computerized analysis of voting districts or by the prestige of the presidency or the tireless energy and administrative skill of Carter.

There is apparently another factor in their progress, which is harder to define and impossible to prove. They are quite different in many ways, but they are both touching some longing in the American mind and spirit for something we have lost.



James Reston

New York Times News Service

MAYBE THE voters in the early primary elections are trying to tell us something. They have not responded to the appealing personality or theatrical conservative ideology of Ronald Reagan. Or to the angry domestic complaints of George Wallace or the anti-Soviet, anti-Kissinger tirades of Senator Jackson, or to the liberal or populist appeals of Mo Udall and Fred Harris.

The voters in the primaries have been very cautious and moderate. As Eric Hoffer says in his new book, In Our Time, they don't quite know what is happening to them. They are "separated" from the past, "a different people in a different country," but somehow he thinks they still believe in believing and yearn for the values of the past.

It is easy and even popular to sneer at these philosophic imponderables, and try to calculate the outcome of the election in terms of power blocs, big-city bosses like Mayor Daley in Chicago, Big Labor leaders like George Meany, and Big Business lobbies like the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, but Carter is leading in the Democratic race, not because he has the Democratic establishment with him, but because it is against him, and because he believes he can appeal to a different and more powerful constituency among the increasingly disenchanted and independent voters of the country.

THE CHANCES are that he won't make it all the way to the top, and will have to settle for the vice presidency. He starts from scratch and Ford starts from an accidental presidency, which is quite a difference, but even so, Carter might just be closer to the longings of the people for new, younger leaders and ideas than anybody else, and take the Democratic Party over, against its will, as Jack Kennedy, with different values and few ideals, did in 1960.

Carter is not talking about "confrontation" with our adversaries, like Jackson, or about ideology like Reagan on the Right and Fred Harris on the Left, but about cooperation, reconciliation and even about "love." He is very romantic about all this, and it infuriates his opponents, but it still touches some longing among the American people.

"We are not enemies but friends," Lincoln said in his First Inaugural Address. "We must not be enemies. Though passion may have strained, it must not break our bonds of affection. . . ." Lincoln did not argue the particular issues that divided the American people, but avoided these divisions and appealed to their common ideals.

IN A TOTALLY different and more complicated situation, Ford and Carter are succeeding by making this same cooperative appeal.

The tragedy of the Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon administrations has been the decline of decency. All three of them may have been more intelligent and more cunning than Ford and Carter, but if the voters are saying anything in the primaries this year, they are apparently asking for simpler, more honest and more moderate men and policies.

IT SEEMS A strange comparison, but DeGaulle held France together in its critical post-war years not by telling people what they wanted to hear, but by setting a moral example. During that crisis in the life of a nation, when you asked why the women of France always supported DeGaulle on the great issues put to a vote of the people, they gave a plain and human answer. Particularly the women.

"We don't quite know whether he is right or wrong, but we trust him," they said. "He is our regret—the symbol of values we regret we have lost. So we support him. We would like to believe in his values, even if we don't live by them."

I think there is something of this same yearning in the success of Ford and Carter in our own elections. Whatever else they are, they are the opposite of the fancy, articulate ways of Kennedy, the cunning techniques of Johnson, and the illegal, unspeakable outrages of Nixon.

The American voters seem to be responding to these plain and undramatic campaigns of Ford and Carter, and this could in the end be important, or even decisive. The other politicians, the universities and the press may not like it, but maybe the majority of the American people do.

Alternate transit plan urged

While choking on smog and tightening our financial belts, is now the time to buy Baxter Ward a new set of trains to play with? His toy San Diego line hasn't been wound up to go yet!

The people of Los Angeles County deserve a choice—not rail or nothing. A freeway conversion can be built for much less.

Mr. Ward's rail scheme does nothing to remove traffic or smog caused by too many cars. It merely duplicates existing freeways as another passenger carrier. Rail will do nothing to cause the average motorist to stop using the car to commute to work. With everyone still using the automobile, who'll ride your train, Mr. Ward?

Freeways can be converted to a very satisfactory rapid transit system for less than one-third the price of rails.

I would build rapid transit transfer stations over the existing freeways at two-mile intervals to connect freeway flyers to local feeder lines. Transfer stations would be four-level structures: one level for freeway flyers, one for a passenger lobby with shops and ticket offices, one for the local feeder vehicles, and the original level, which would be the freeway itself. Large aircraft-carrier-type elevators would be used to move large numbers of passengers from one level to another.

Using the high-speed lane for 120-passenger electric trolley double-decker super coaches will make it possible to carry up to 72,000 passengers per hour over one lane of any freeway in each direction. Rapid Transit District estimates given out at the last transit election called for up to 40,000 per hour by rail.

These super coaches would stop on the top level of the transfer station, taking advantage of gravity to help them stop going up a ramp to that level. This will store energy for the acceleration on the down ramp while getting under way again. Local area feeders would have shorter ramps from local streets, and would stop on the level next to that occupied by the freeway. The passenger exchange lobby would be next to the upper or flyer level.

Preliminary plans are available from me. I ask no fees for the studies I have made, just consideration.

A one per cent sales tax can build the freeway conversion as a pay-as-you-go project. It is my belief this can be done in about 10 years. As each section is completed, it can be serviced with existing coaches until the super coaches can be built to take their place.

As soon as the majority of the transfer stations are built, or possibly alternate stations at four-mile intervals, my plan calls for a parking tax to be levied on all employe and other full-shift parking spaces in all business and commercial areas. Mr. Ward plans a sales tax forever to support his loser. I feel that all who use our freeways and streets should pay for that privilege, and no one else. This includes both the driver of the private car and the user of public transportation.

It is my estimate the whole plan would cost under $3 billion if carried to completion. With all stations in but rolling stock kept to the probable starting minimum, the cost should not exceed $2 billion.

With this system, real freeways will once again be freeways in the real sense of the word. Transportation will be good for those who do not choose or cannot afford to drive their own vehicles. I ask the taxpayers to consider this plan very carefully before they jump into—or should I say in front of?—the RTD railroad train.

Arthur Rubinstein

With the vast degree of editorial focus being centered upon the strife-ridden, often cataclysmic international hot spots, along with the multiple national and sttate political epicenters of interest, it was heartening to see the beautiful thoughts presented in the I, P-T's "89 young years" editorial March 17. There is room indeed for such ruminations concerning the legendary Arthur Rubinstein.

I know that the legion of admirers of this towering figure of classical romanticism share my sadness at learning that this virtuoso of the keyboard may be forced through failing eyesight to terminate an unparalleled career that has brought him international acclaim for seven decades of superlative performances for a public that has never ceased to marvel at his art.

Over the years, I have ever been enthralled with maestro Rubinstein's literally ethereal communicative sense in bringing forth the essence of each composer—from Chopin, his sublime specialty, to Bach, Brahms, Debussy, etc. The keyboard mastery of this genius continually created a tonal tapestry of magic that was ever fresh, ever new and always exciting. Music lovers the world over can relish the time they have heard Rubinstein, for an artist like this passes our way but once. May the joy he's provided others be his the rest of his "young years."

Hayden's struggle

It is painfully evident that some of your readers make false and cursory accusations that are intended solely to buttress their own biases. I am specifically referring to one Klaton Chapman letter, March 14, who labeled Tom Hayden as a Marxist-Leninist. If Mr. Chapman would take the time to read the Tom Hayden literature, he would find that Mr. Hayden is not against our free enterprise system.

Conversely, Mr. Hayden is a firm believer in democracy but feels there is ample room for improvement. Any criticisms he has of our society occur within a patriotic framework. Tom Hayden feels the voters should truly have a voice in their government—and this is what he is [illegible].

Realtors praised

It has been impossible for me to write earlier, so at this time I wish to express my thanks to the members of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors who worked so diligently to defeat the real property transfer tax the city council adopted late last year.

I was delighted that the Realtors stood firm and did not bow to the unethical way the council attempted to deprive the taxpayers of their constitutional right to petition against any issue which is unjust, unfair or discriminatory. In my opinion, there was an attempt by the city council to brainwash all the residents of Long Beach into believing they were going to have either a transfer tax or a sewer tax, with no other alternative. Their action made the job of obtaining the signatures doubly difficult, but the Realtors came through with more than enough signatures in spite of their little scheme.

The city council partially redeemed themselves by dropping both the transfer tax and the sewer tax.

A state decision

I disagree with your editorial of March 16 regarding Proposition 15. I believe the polls are the place for Californians to have a say about nuclear power in this state.

It is not unreasonable to ask the power companies to demonstrate to the Legislature that safety systems are adequate, that highly radioactive wastes can be safely stored, that full financial coverage would be provided in the event of a major accident, that feasible evacuation plans are available. There is no other industry with the potential for such far-reaching, devastating effects should a mishap occur.

Our most valuable nonpolluting short-term energy source is conservation. Not "going back to the caves" but using the energy we already produce more efficiently and less wastefully. In the longer range, solar and geothermal energy look to me to be more promising sources than trying to reprocess radioactive wastes commercially (which is not being done at present either) and which thousands of people find [illegible] into the breeder reactor with its even [illegible].

Try gambling

When I proposed about two months ago that the city of Long Beach designate a portion of the land around the Queen Mary, about the size of the Hollywood race track including the parking lot and stable grounds, for gambling, the answer I received was that gambling was not permitted in California.

When I walked out of the old Arcade railroad station 58 years ago, I found that Los Angeles had but two places that one could go to spend his weekends. They were the Long Beach Pike and the Venice Pier. Horse racing was not permitted except at fairgrounds, and dog racing was not permitted, either.

Not long after that San Francisco had two tracks, the Tanforan and the Bay Meadows. Then in 1934 came Santa Anita. Soon after that we had five tracks.

If gambling is permitted at the races, why not in a designated part of Long Beach as it is in Arcadia?

I am now 91, and I do not gamble. But the Queen is not enough attraction to pull Long Beach out of the red!

Purse snatching

Somehow I do not feel any compassion for the victims of purse snatchers who lost great [illegible] or a sizable amount of money [illegible].

Many banks have free checking account service, plus the fact that any Social Security check or paycheck can be mailed to that person's account to be drawn upon at any time.

I never have more than $3 or $4 in my purse and have never been refused a check-cashing privilege. Naturally I have proper identification, which is easy to obtain.

Why can't normal, intelligent people understand this and stop the daylight robbery [illegible]?

Tiny-screen nightmares

Russell Baker

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Nightmares by a roaring television screen:

I am wandering in the desolate wilds of the American stomach. It is located at the southern extremity of the American esophagus, and it would be harder to imagine a more forlorn place. Stomach acid sloshes about at all hours. The entire landscape is obscured by impenetrable vapors, which I instantly recognize as the notorious "stomach gas."

FROM FAR above I hear the esophagus shouting to the stomach. "Potato chip with cheese dip coming down!" it cries. The stomach groans furiously. In an instant there is a thunderous roar overhead. Potato chip and cheese dip shoot through the gas like meteors from blackest space and plunge into the acid.

Then, without warning, a drenching torrent pours down upon me. The stomach snarls in rage at the esophagus. "Why didn't you warn me this bum was about to drink half a martini?" it cries. "I'll fix him."

In a murderous act of treachery, the stomach produces a dense mass of stomach gas and forces it back up the esophagus. I am caught in the updraft and am forced up, up, up, until I am wedged right under the breastbone. There, trapped, I hear the esophagus calling again. "Brace yourself down there! A whole anchovy coming down!"

LOOKING UP, I see a gigantic salted fish plummeting upon me. I struggle to race back down the esophagus, but my feet are stuck in cheese dip, and the anchovy is gaining rapidly. . . .

I am jolted briefly into blessed wakefulness, then doze again. I have retained a baby sitter named Mrs. Marsh for the evening. She has brought a huge suitcase containing toothpaste, toothbrushes, sticks of chalk, glasses filled with dyed water and a Thompson submachine gun, which she is pointing at me with one hand while dipping chalk into dyed water with the other.

She is determined not to let me go out to the movies until she has showed me how deeply her toothpaste will penetrate the enamel of my children's teeth. She is demonstrating with the chalk sticks. Sure enough, the dye is turning the chalk bright hues all the way through.

"You wouldn't do that to my children's teeth?" I am pleading. She cackles insanely. "Hah!" I cry. "Your toothpaste may penetrate chalk, but chalk isn't tooth enamel!" Mrs. Marsh fires a burst of machine-gun fire over my head to remind me to keep my hands up.

"My toothpaste," she gloats, "will penetrate anything. Look!" And she rubs it on the television set, which turns bright purple.

IS THERE nothing I can do to stop her mad plot? One thing, she tells me. If I agree to stay home and sit with her until midnight while she demonstrates her toothpaste's penetrating power on the Queen Anne chairs. . . .

I open my eyes and close them again, then reopen them wide because, standing right there before me, is my blue pinstripe suit. It is in an ugly mood. "I've got something to tell you, stupid," says the suit.

"What's holding you up?" I ask. "Do you have the invisible man inside?"

"I wish I did," says the suit. "He's probably got enough sense to realize a man needs twice as much protection."

"Where do you talk from?" I ask the suit. "Your voice seems to be coming from your right pocket, but I don't see the flap moving."

THE SUIT SAYS it has not come there to talk about suit anatomy. "Well, flip off then," I say. "I don't hold with wool that talks."

The suit makes a terrifying grimace with its left lapel and calls for reinforcements. In an instant, I am surrounded by angry clothing — sweaters, underpants, socks — all prancing around the room and jabbering furiously. I swing a right hook at a pair of socks, and miss, and in the next moment the clothes have all leaped on me and are about to break my arm, when I awake.

Breathing heavily, I lumber off to bed and put out the light. There is a stranger in the room. I demand to know what he is doing there. He says he is looking for the washing machine so he can surprise me next time I do the sheets by showing me a soap that gets white things twice as white. I lead him to the cellar. He thanks me. On the stairs I am mugged and robbed of all my vacation cash. When I get back to bed Karl Malden tells me always to carry traveler's checks.

Politicians get payoffs

Jack Anderson with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — At least $8 million in illegal corporate payoffs have disappeared into the pockets of Washington politicians during the past decade.

While the spotlight has focused on corporate bribery overseas, we have investigated payoffs to politicians here at home. We have determined that political bigwigs collected the $8 million from four corporations alone: Ashland Oil, Gulf Oil, Northrop Aircraft and Phillips Petroleum.

THE DIMENSIONS of the scandal indicate it may develop into a corporate Watergate.

Our reporters, Terry Repak and Marc Smolonsky, dug through Securities and Exchange Commission documents in an attempt to trace the money. They contacted 45 congressmen who were identified in the documents as recipients of illegal payments.

Our investigation even led to the White House itself. President Ford allegedly received an illegal $1,000 contribution from Phillips when he was the House Republican leader. A White House spokesman told us there was no way to verify the payment now. But he conceded the money was never returned.

When Richard Nixon occupied the White House, his campaign aides were caught accepting an illegal $100,000 contribution from Ashland in 1972. The money was returned with a big show of piety. We have now discovered that the Nixon campaign accepted an earlier $100,000 from the same oil company in 1968. But this money, since it was never publicized, wasn't given back.

OF THE 45 members of Congress who are identified in SEC documents as receiving illegal money from corporate lobbyists, only six have returned the loot. They are Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn.; Carl Curtis, R-Neb.; Henry Jackson, D-Wash.; James McClure, R-Ida.; J. B. Johnston, D-La.; and Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark.

They paid back a total of $45,600 in illegal gifts. But Mills did not return another $5,000 Ashland contribution, strictly illegal, which was given to him to distribute to Democratic colleagues.

Sen. James Eastland, D-Miss., admitted receiving a $5,000 payment from Ashland but said he had no intention of returning it. House Democratic leader Tip O'Neill, D-Mass., acknowledged he got $200 from Phillips. He also felt no obligation to return it. Both men explained that they [illegible] the contributions had come [illegible] corporate funds.

[illegible] whose names appear on the SEC lists of illegal recipients [illegible] acknowledge that they got [illegible] money from the corporation [illegible]

ONE GULF [illegible]

Through a spokesman, he denied receiving an illegal payment but acknowledged the gifts may have gone to his campaign committee. Our information indicates that Humphrey collected $30,500, all told, from Gulf and Ashland.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., according to the documents, received $11,000 from Phillips and Gulf. But a spokesman insisted that Hatfield never got any illegal payments.

Another $1,000 illegal donation from Phillips allegedly went to Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C. A spokesman said there's no record of the illegal payment but acknowledged it might have come in from a corporate bagman. The money, in any event, won't be returned.

There are reports that Speaker Carl Albert collected $3,000 from Phillips. A spokesman said the speaker vaguely remembers receiving contributions from Phillips but can't recall the exact amount. The money won't be returned.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., according to the records, accepted $3,000 from Ashland. An aide said the money won't be paid back. "It's between Ashland Oil and the man who made the contribution," he said.

WE FOUND records at the SEC of illegal payments to members of Congress of $1.1 million from Gulf, $800,000 from Ashland and $500,000 from Phillips. We couldn't find how another $4 million from Gulf and $1.5 million from Northrop were distributed.

Only four corporations accounted for these staggering political payoffs. The SEC is investigating many other companies that were also slipping money to politicians. But no one is investigating the politicians who accepted the payments.

LAST LAUGH: In 1972, we told how Thai government leaders were helping to hustle heroin to U.S. markets. The Thais accused us of "slanderous accusations" and the State Department, more delicately, backed them up.

Now we have found out who was slandering whom from some newly declassified State Department cable. They show our reports were so accurate that U.S. Ambassador to Thailand Leonard Unger thought they had been leaked from his classified cables to the State Department.

Unger told the State Department in a "confidential" cable that our stories "appear to be unmistakably attributable to executive branch documents or conversations with executive branch personnel privy to this and other [illegible] reporting on events and conversation in Thailand."

"I realize," he went on, "that this could come as no surprise to anyone that apparently Jack Anderson has access to whatever he wants in Washington today."

Seal Beach: a town of many hamlets

At bottom, the one issue that, more than any other, fuels the fires of political discontent in Seal Beach is growth. Should the city, with the few remaining open spaces it has left, continue to use the state redevelopment law as a tool for continued growth and improvement, or should it leave well enough alone?

With a 35-foot building height limit in effect, and the large annexations having already been made, the current fight over the redevelopment of several smaller parcels of land would seem to be a tempest in a teapot.

YET, SEAL Beach, true to character—it had a dandy of a fight over gambling in the postwar years—is in another political uproar.

On the one piece of projected redevelopment property that could be considered sizable—a 79-acre tract of undeveloped private land just north of the Hill—a suit has been filed to block its inclusion in the redevelopment agency's jurisdiction.

Meanwhile, antidevelopment forces are hotly contesting other parts of the agency's plans, including the rezoning of a 7-acre parcel on which the city intends to build a new and more efficient police station.

Old Towners in particular want to keep the station where it is—where it's most needed, they assert.

WHILE ITS transfer to a more modern and centrally located building might serve the interests of efficiency, as city officials claim, it would also represent a concession to the city's present, as opposed to its past. And perhaps unconsciously, that's what many Old Towners are fighting: the symbolism as well as the fact of the proposed move.

Thus far, the city has found the redevelopment law an extraordinarily handy tool, using it with an ingenuity that some say is close to unconstituional. The forthcoming court showdown doubtless will test that claim.

With all the controversy surrounding it, even its die-hard critics are willing to concede that redevelopment hasn't been all bad or all good. As one of its supporters, Mayor Tom McKnew, points out, the redevelopment agency has enabled the city to do away with an antiquated waste treatment facility, help the downtown area with a new sewer system, improve the city's drainage, put in new water lines and buy the old Pacific Electric right of way, which is now the gently rolling green belt running through Old Town.

"Unfortunately," says McKnew, "many are uninformed as to what the agency has done and can do. It's a bridge between the private and public sector."

BY STIMULATING the private development of so-called blighted areas, and thereby raising the value of the developed land, the agency has been able to use the additional tax proceeds for public improvements (such as the green belt).

Realistically, there's little prospect of any sizable growth in the city's population, even if the 79 acres and the city's old equipment yard (which is due to be vacated) are used for new homes.

Seal Beach has pretty well reached its population limit, having banned high-rise structures and committed itself in policy to low-density housing.

In 1965, before the new policy was established, then City Manager John Williams predicted that Seal Beach's population would almost triple within 20 years. It was 20,000 at the time, and Williams said it would reach 58,000 by 1985.

AT THE same time, be forecast the development of high-rise apartment towers on the Seal Beach side of the San Gabriel River.

Since then, the Oakwood Garden Apartments have gone up (to a level of three stories), and the city's population has risen by 8,000, which is far off Williams' predicted pace.

In the last six years, during which 2,000 dwelling units were added to the city's housing stock, the population grew by only 200, according to Mayor McKnew.

McKnew gives two reasons for the slow growth rate: many older people who moved into Leisure World in the past decade or so have lost their partners through death, and, elsewhere in the city, families have gotten smaller.

THE CITY'S modest growth notwithstanding, many Old Towners are saying—in effect—that they've had enough. Rueful over past annexations, which were more than they could swallow, they're now ready to draw the line on any further development, however small or large it may be.

The key to the city's charm, they feel, is its small-town character. And to continue to develop an increment here and an increment there is to further destroy the essence of what they're trying to preserve.

What's more, they still remember their own close brush with redevelopment a few years ago, when the council was considering a number of plans for improving and refurbishing Main Street.

To carry out the improvements, it was proposed that Main Street be placed under the redevelopment agency's jurisdiction, but the notion struck terror in the hearts of Old Town merchants. Fearful of possible large-scale changes, they led a public outcry against the scheme and convinced the council that if there was to be any improvement at all, it would have to be less than massive and done with city money, not redevelopment agency funds.

SINCE then, many of the storeowners have spruced up their places to the point where even the minor improvements that are planned might seem excessive to some. (The plan calls for new street lamps, some repavement, the introduction of uniform trash receptacles and some benches.)

Whether the improvements are made or not, one claim can be made for Main Street: it is unquestionably one of the most engaging shopping districts in Southern California. Its natural, small-town ambience, the diversity of its shops (including its liquor stores, taverns, offices and restaurants), the friendliness of its merchants, its proximity to the ocean—all conspire to make it a thoroughly charming yet unaffected place. (All this in the space of three blocks.) Which explains why Old Towners feel so damn jealous about it.

Nor can you blame them, given the jewel they have.

Blind hit-run victim mourned at services

"He loved cars," said La Belle's "home teacher" and fellow church member Ralph Brown. "At times, we would be walking across a parking lot together when a nearby car would start. Ray could tell from the sound of the engine what make of car it was, often even pinning down the year."

Brown eulogized La Belle as "a person who had a natural talent to meet people. He was open and honest, always quick to make a friend.

"Ray also had an excellent memory. . .he would remember special things about people he had met long ago," Brown added.

"Ray and his wife were champions of the cause of educating sighted people to the capabilities of the blind," Brown said quietly. "He opened up a whole new world to me, as a sighted person."

Bishop Vealer Barton characterized La Belle, who had belonged to the Fourth Ward for 10 months, as "a boy who knew no boundaries. . .an energetic person who was a friend to everyone he came into contact with."

La Belle, a native of Long Beach who was blinded when given too much oxygen after a premature birth, graduated from Wilson High School in 1970.

He and Marsha, blind since birth as a result of the same medical procedure, were married last May 17 during a Mormon service in Los Angeles.

(Ray has a twin brother, Richard, also blind since birth, and Marsha has a twin brother, Mark, who is partially sighted, according to friends.)

La Belle's mother said they had known each other since childhood, having met at various functions for blind children.

"They were incredibly happy together," said Ed Meier of Los Alamitos, national president of the Guide Dog Boosters of America.

"They had so many plans," he added. "Marsha took a new job about four weeks ago as a medical transcriber at a Long Beach hospital, and Ray was to have begun a new job Monday as a field representative for the Fuller Brush Company. He had gone through the training and bought two new suits. He was all ready to go."

Meier and other members of the Guide Dog Boosters said Marsha credited her golden retriever, Tad, with saving her life. He said she and Tad graduated from the training school of Guide Dogs for the Blind in San Rafael about two years ago.

"They do very extensive training there in traffic situations," said Diane Walker, president of the Los Angeles Guide Dog Boosters chapter.

She said the dogs are trained to recognize danger situations and avoid them by quickening their pace, stopping altogether or pulling back. There are cases of some guide dogs being killed while successfully protecting their masters, added Ms. Walker.

"Tad pulled Marsha back out of the car's way," she said, "but he apparently couldn't pull Ray back too."

She said the dogs are trained to guide only one person but "feel a responsibility" to other members of the family.

Meier said La Belle, also a Guide Dog Booster, was "between dogs" at the time of the accident. "Ray had a dog up until a couple of months ago," Meier said, "but they just didn't work out together. He was to have gone back to school (Guide Dogs of the Desert in Palm Springs) to get another dog next month."

Marsha's dog, Tad, was not seriously injured in the accident, but his future is in doubt, friends said. The dog has been taken back to San Rafael for interim training, but officials there won't know for some time if he has been psychologically damaged or if his training was broken by the accident.

"We've been told that they're holding Tad up there until Marsha is well enough to see if they can be reunited," said Ms. Walker.

"We hope with all our hearts that the two will be walking together again soon," Meier added.

La Belle's mother, however, said doctors are not yet sure, but some of Marsha's injuries could result in permanent disabilities.

A fund for Marsha has been set up at Union Federal Savings and Loan Association, 4500 Atlantic Ave.

Three held in cocaine bust

Three men were arrested and cocaine with an estimated street-sale value of about $40,000 was seized in a Pico Rivera drug-selling probe, sheriff's investigators said Saturday.

A sheriff's department spokesman said an undercover narcotics officer had arranged to buy the cocaine, and met the men Friday night near Rosemead Boulevard and Telegraph Road in Pico Rivera.

The purchase reportedly was made and the suspects taken into custody at the scene, the spokesman said.

Booked on suspicion of sale of a controlled substance were Francisco Mendoza, 35, of 7242 Pico Vista Road, Pico Rivera; Orazo Fernandez, 28, an alien; and Romualdo Torres, 35, of Mountain View.

He orders cash at Colonel's

A bandit armed with a pistol which he kept under his shirt took more than $70 from a Kentucky Fried Chicken store at 1601 W. Willow St. after ordering a 17-year-old clerk to put the money into a bag, Long Beach police said Saturday.

The clerk told officers the bandit pulled up his shirt and showed the gun stuck under his belt, then told her, "See this? You know what it is. I don't want to use it. Put the money in the bag."

Off-sale robbery nets $100

Two bandits, one of them armed with a pistol, took more than $100 from the cash register at Joe's Liquor Store, 3806 Santa Fe Ave., after ordering two employes to go to a back room at 1:15 a.m. Saturday, Long Beach police said.

The clerk told police one of the bandits bought beer and wine, then handed him a $20 bill.

As he was making change he heard the man say, "Let's have the rest of it," and looked up to see the pistol.

Two customers approached the counter during the holdup and the gunman turned to them and said, "Would you gentlemen be so kind as to go back to the rear where you came from?"

The customers complied, and the bandits escaped in a car they had left with its engine on in front of the store.

Girl with boa returns home

A 14-year-old Bellflower girl who ran away from home with her pet boa constrictor returned home late Friday, Lakewood sheriff's deputies said.

The girl, Julie Marie Janssen, called her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Janssen, on Thursday to say she was in Long Beach, had bought a rat and fed it to her snake, and would return home soon.

Cella, 3 others named in suit alleging embezzlement

Orange County political contributor Dr. Louis J. Cella Jr. and three of his associates, already under indictment by the Orange County Grand Jury and a federal grand jury, now face a lawsuit filed by two hospitals from which they allegedly embezzled money.

The suits, filed in Santa Ana Superior Court, ask $2 million in actual damages and $10 million in punitive and exemplary damages.

Named in the suits and the indictments were Cella, Stephen R. Evans, George Louis Ollendorf and Theodore Schiffman.

They are scheduled for a pretrial hearing Monday before Judge Jerrold S. Oliver in Santa Ana Superior Court.

The indictments charged that the $2 million was used by the defendants for political and personal purposes.

Cella and his associates allegedly skimmed the money from the two hospitals when Cella controlled both institutions. He is a major stockholder in both but does not hold majority control.

Also named in the civil suit but not indicted is Richard O'Neill, Southern California Democratic chairman.

Cella and O'Neill were the largest individual contributors to 1974 California political campaigns. Cella is a registered Republican.

The civil suits were filed on behalf of Mission Community Hospital in Mission Viejo and Mercy General Hospital in Santa Ana.

Artist's rendering points up spacious and open-styled motif of Smoke Tree townhomes community in Irvine

Family environment a feature of Irvine's Smoke Tree homes

The new Smoke Tree community in Irvine offers a selection of large townhome plans ideal for families, according to the builder, Warmington Development.

The maintenance-free townhomes lifestyle also provides an excellent family environment, with more leisure time to enjoy the many recreational activities available in this Orange County residential area, Warmington noted.

Among Smoke Tree's spacious and open-styled family townhome designs is the Plan 4, offering 1,578 square feet of living space in two separate levels devoted to the privacy and activity of the family lifestyle.

THE UPPER LEVEL is a secluded sleeping wing, available in two versions to suit family needs. Plan 4-A has four bedrooms and two full baths, including a comfortable master suite.

Plan 4-B features three bedrooms and two baths and the oversized master suite has twin walk-in closets and stretches the home's full width to provide a large adult privacy area.

The lower level of Plan 4 offers luxurious space for hospitality and a variety of family activities. A large living room is enhanced by a fireplace "conversation corner" and a huge family room/kitchen makes indoor/outdoor entertaining easy.

Deluxe built-in kitchen appliances and a first-floor powder room add to the convenience of this home. Plan 4 and other Smoke Tree models feature a private fenced patio, enclosed double garage and wood-trimmed exterior with shake roof.

There are five Smoke Tree floor Plans in one-and two-story designs with two, three or four bedrooms. Prices range from $42,990 to $53,500 with conventional financing at 7½ per cent interest (7¾ per cent annual percentage rate).

Landscaped greenbelts surround the townhomes and an oversized swimming pool, hydro-therapy pool and luxurious clubhouse are provided for Smoke Tree residents.

Seal Beach Chateau offers trips to East

As part of the Bicentennial celebration, the Chateau in Seal Beach is including a vacation for two to any, or all of the eastern colonial states.

A limited time offer will include scheduled round trip air transportation to the Bicentennial city of the buyer's choice, plus hotel accommodations for seven days.

Details are available at the sales center for the Chateau adult condominium.

FIFTY-SEVEN units, representing a sales volume of $3.2 million, have been sold, and 15 units remain at the development, which is adjacent to the Rossmoor shopping center. Furnished models are open daily from 10 a.m. at 12400 Montecito Road, between St. Cloud Drive and Bradbury Street.

The Chateau has two newly decorated model homes open for viewing. Immediate occupancy is available.

The models were decorated by professional co-ordinator Fanny Bollen, who is available to assist homeseekers who desire to customize their units.

The newly decorated models, featuring upgraded decorator carpeting, wall covering, draperies, hard surface flooring and mirror treatments, are also available for purchase. The models are decorated in the new vignette fashion, currently the popular decorating vogue nationally.

Prices for the two bedroom, two bath units range from $47,950 to $49,950. Visitors are invited to ask about a VA — no down program being considered at the Chateau.

"Lowest interest rates, excellent location, a current 10 per cent down plan, and quality product are cited by most viewers as their reasons for buying," said co-developer Bernie Solomon of National Mills Associates.

A SECURITY system of lobby television scanners has attracted particular attention to the unique security building features at the Chateau.

"We have installed a building security "lobbyvision" system, Solomon said. "It provides a combination of closed circuit television of both lobby areas and special monitor screens that are tied into a built-in intercom system," he added. Parking is safely underground, accessible through electrically controlled security gates.

The condominium concept of carefree, leisure living is made possible through the homeowners association, whereby exterior maintenance, landscaping, and care of the recreational facilities is handled for residents by a professional firm. No permanent residents under 16 may reside at the Chateau.

Recreational amenities include a heated swimming pool, sauna, swirlpool bath, a fully equipped gymnasium and outdoor barbecues.

INTERIOR appointments include a selection of nylon carpeting, central air conditioning, and luminous all electric kitchens that feature range, oven, disposal, dishwasher, cast iron terraced sinks and copper plumbing.

The development is located less than five minutes from the Old Ranch Golf and Tennis Club. Houses of worship, health care facilities and major shopping are within minutes of the project. Public transportation is close by.

Original design at 'Gardens'

An elegantly decorated, new model home now open at Country Club Gardens in Long Beach emphasizes the innovative design and spaciousness offered by the adult townhomes, according to the builder, Sterling Development Corp.

The new display model is "The Brookfield," largest of the split level townhomes available at the luxury development located in the prestigious Virginia Country Club neighborhood.

'House-of-the-Week' specials remain

La Mirada Landmark rebates to end

La Mirada Landmark sales counselor Frank Randak reports the $1,000 rebate/allowance program now in effect will end next Sunday.

The savings program, he said, has been successful in helping at least 90 families purchase La Mirada Landmark homes.

Randak advised homeseekers to visit quickly for a choice selection of units, adding that some "House-of-the-Week" specials, including draperies, are still available.

WITH PRICES still held at 1974 levels, substantial savings are possible at La Mirada Landmark, Ed Olson, Professional Community Management, sales director at the homesite, advises.

Prices have not been increased since the community opened phase two, Randak added.

The $1,000 customizing allowance program will allow purchasers in the second phase to receive an allowance of from $750 to $1,000.

The allowance may be used to upgrade carpeting, add draperies, wardrobe mirrors, or may be applied toward the closing cost requirement.

A moving allowance is also possible, the salesmen added. Details on this program are available at the information center.

The homes feature two or three bedrooms and two baths, plus large living and separate dining rooms, patios or balconies and enclosed garages.

Also included are central air conditioning, shag carpeting, vinyl kitchen flooring, individual utility rooms within each unit with an installed washer-dryer, deluxe equipped kitchens with range, oven, disposal, dishwasher and pantries.

Walk-in closets are available in two of the four plans. The privacy and security of residents is enhanced by a 24-hour-a-day security guard at the main entrance.

IN ADDITION to a close-in, energy-saving location, the all-adult community emphasizes its recreation facilities, Olson added.

The $1.5 million recreation complex, with approximately 14,000 square feet under roof, includes a clubhouse with kitchen, lounge, game rooms, and huge billiards room. A separate building features a wood shop, ceramic and art room, lapidary, sewing room, photo lab, multi-purpose room and gym.

Outdoor attractions include two regulation-size, night-lighted tennis courts, putting green, large swimming pool, hot water swirl pool bath, gas barbecues, gas fire ring, gazebo and spacious main patio area.

The entry is off Santa Gertrudes Street between Imperial Highway and Rosecrans Avenue. It may be reached from the Santa Ana Freeway by taking the Imperial Highway exit east to Santa Gertrudes and turning south.

The sales office and model complex are open daily from 10 a.m. For information phone (714) 521-2140 or (213) 947-2596.

SeaWind ideal for couples

SeaWind, just minutes from the beach and blue Pacific, is designed to meet the needs of couples who want spacious, yet carefree living in one of California's most desirable areas.

There sea breezes and the countryside atop Fire Mountain give residents a sense of being away from it all while still being close to the city and shopping areas.

Priced from $43,800, SeaWind two-bedroom condominium homes feature cedar shake roofs and exterior wood treatment to blend with their surroundings.

THE HOMES offer 2 or 2½ baths and a separate den/guest bedroom. Walls of glass open onto wooden patio decks from the living and dining rooms to capture the panoramic views.

High-vaulted ceilings extend from the living room into the dining area, enhancing the spacious atmosphere of the home.

Gas fireplaces have built-in logs and remote starter. SeaWind homes are carpeted with a thick plush pile throughout and feature cultured marble counters and solid brass fixtures in the baths.

The large master bedroom suite and second bedroom have large walk-in closets. Centrally located among the 30 residences is a paddle tennis court for SeaWind residents only.

THE ELECTRIC cooking center includes twin ovens and an electric range while the kitchen features sound-insulated dishwasher, disposal, double compartment cast-iron sink and refrigerator area plumbed for an automatic icemaker.

The decorator-selected resilient flooring, luminous ceiling lighting and stained hardwood cabinets lend the kitchen a custom-designed appearance.

SeaWind condominium homes are open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk. SeaWind is on Fire Mountain and can be reached by taking the Jefferson exit off Highway 78 and following Ivy Street to Ivy and Laurel.

La Linda homes visited by hundreds

Sales aides report more than 300 visitors toured the La Linda model area over the past weekend in Orange.

Opened just a few weeks, 15 of the 24 individual patio-style homes have been sold. The units are situated in a rural setting, yet are within walking distance of the Bullock-Fashion Square shopping and financial complex.

Almost all the one- and two-story homes feature a different exterior style that give the overall community a custom look, developer Richard Hall says.

Measuring 1,550 to approximately 2,100 square feet, the units are available in four floor-plan arrangements. They contain three to five bedrooms, and two or three baths.

ONE PLAN at La Linda receiving impressive comments from visitors, according to sales aides, is the big two-story, 18 plan. The four, or more bedroom plan features a recreation room, fourth bedroom and full bath on the upper level.

The lower floor contains three bedrooms, two full baths, formal dining room, spacious living room with fireplace, kitchen with informal dining area, and a generous utility room off the oversized two-car garage.

A walk-in closet and wet bar are also receiving favorable attention in this big plan.

Prices range from $56,950 to $71,950 with conventional financing. Occupancy is planned by month's end.

The $1.5 million dollar, six-acre, planned unit development is being built by Richard Hall, Orange County developer of quality new home communities.

ARCHITECT is Roy Kiter and Associates, Newport Beach.

The community is accessible via a single entrance off Palmyra Street, just west of Main Street. The homes are clustered architecturally in just two oversized cul-de-sac streets.

A decorative block wall along the Palmyra Street frontage will add privacy to the development. Perimeter wood fencing will enclose the site.

Hall says this La Linda community is the most complete family home he has ever built.

Features included in the purchase price are carpeting, draperies, central air conditioning, fireplaces, mirrored wardrobe doors, decorator wallpaper, rear- and side-yard fencing, front-yard landscaping with sprinklers, deluxe equipped kitchens with trash compactors and nutone food centers, sunken bath tubs and smoke detector systems.

This package of features will save the buyer thousands of dollars, and eliminate after move-in costs the builder added.

ALTHOUGH individual, detached homes, the patio-home concept will apply. All common properties are maintained by a professional firm through a homeowners association.

A leisure lifestyle will be provided residents in their own, huge 25 by 50 foot swimming pool, a recreation building, shuffleboard, court and two huge professionally maintained park areas.

Sales counselors add that the location is convenient to all of Orange County. Just five minutes away are the Santa Ana Freeway, Orange Freeway, Garden Grove Freeway and the Newport Freeway.

From the Santa Ana Freeway the project may be visited by exiting north on Main Street just beyond Bullock to Palmyra and west two blocks to the site.

For information phone 997-4765 (714).

The company reported pre-tax earnings of $11,785,000 and net income of $5,615,000 or $1.71 per share on gross revenues of $110,667,000 for the comparable period 1974.

Builder receives Assembly honor

Orange County builder William J. "Bill" Krueger, president of Showcase Homes, has received a certificate of commendation from the California State Assembly for his contributions to the homebuilding industry and to the community.

The citation followed a resolution to the Assembly by Paul B. Carpenter of the 71st Assembly District.

In the resolution, Carpenter said Krueger "in his capacity as master builder, has been at the forefront of the tremendous population expansion in Orange County, offering more than 3,800 various types of quality construction dwellings in order to fill the resident's needs since 1960."

He noted that Krueger served his nation during World War II in the United States Navy, retiring as a lieutenant commander, and is a former director of the Home Builders Association.

"Working with his son and daughter on his current project, Showcase Homes in Westminster, he continues to strive for 'customer satisfaction.'" (Steve Krueger, the builder's son, is project manager for the Westminster development and his daughter, Sally Hayden, is associated with the decorator).

The resolution continued: "Mr. Krueger is to be highly commended for his valuable contributions to the home building industry."

Mariner Village started

Site preparation began last week on 30 acres in San Juan Capistrano, breaking ground for Westport's Mariner Village, at Del Obispo and Blue Fin Drive, 1½ miles from the Dana Point Marina and the ocean.

Construction for the $12 million development is scheduled in phases, with 67 two and three-bedroom homes planned for Phase One. When completed, the new residential project will contain 199 homes.

Designed as a planned-unit development, the community will feature five floor plans with two and three bedrooms and separate dens, to contain from 1,270 to 1,650 square feet of interior space.

"PRICE FOR the ocean-close homes are anticipated to range from $55,000 to $65,000 in the private, maintenance-free community. An Olympic-size swimming pool, jacuzzi, two tennis courts, volleyball court and a clubhouse with gym and billiard room are planned for residents," said Merrill Pugmire, marketing director for Westport Home Builders, Inc.

Extensive greenbelts at Westport's Mariner Village also will contain a security storage yard for recreation vehicles as well as gardens and parklands.

The firm has pioneered residential developments in the Capistrano Valley through the planning and construction of Capistrano Villas, now sold out, and Las Brisas Garden Homes and Mission Village condominiums, currently being marketed in the area.

The communities have added 1,200 residential units.

Sales for Westport's Mariner Village have begun, with completion of Phase One predicted for early spring.

The Tennessean sells home a day

An exclusive North Tustin Avenue address in one of Santa Ana's best residential areas has contributed to impressive sales at The Tennessean," according to Warmington Development, builder of the new adult townhome community.

Sales are averaging one home per day and the development of park garden townhomes is now two-thirds sold, the Warmington spokesman said.

Outstanding value and the spaciousness of the contemporary residences are also cited as prime success factors at The Tennessean. Prices of the air conditioned, one and two-story townhomes begin at $29,990.

FOUR distinctive Tennessean models offer from 1,252 to 1,428 square feet of living area and feature one bedroom and den, two bedrooms or two bedrooms and den, with 1½ or 2 lavish baths.

Each townhome includes a long list of price-included quality features such as one or two fireplaces, carpeting, enclosed garage, fenced patio and deluxe kitchen complete with range, self-cleaning oven, dishwasher and disposal.

An abundance of glass adds to indoor/outdoor living enjoyment. There are generous linen and storage closets and master suites feature double wardrobes of walk-in closet. One home features a spiral staircase.

Luxuriously landscaped grounds surround the townhomes and the maintenance-free community includes a huge swimming pool, therapy whirlpool, sauna and clubhouse for residents.

THE PRIME location is within walking distance of shopping and community services including a medical center, banks, churches, parks and the Santa Ana and Newport Freeways for commuting to metropolitan and employment centers.

Three newly furnished Tennessean model homes are open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at 1404 North Tustin Ave. The development may be reached by taking the Newport Freeway to the 17th Street exit in Santa Ana, then west on 17th to Tustin Avenue. The first level of the "Brookfield" includes an oversized two-car garage with inside access and laundry area and the home also features an atrium-balcony and garden patio, ceramic tiling, plush wall-to-wall carpeting and deluxe Tappan appliances.

Another split-level plan with three bedrooms and two baths is also available among the limited number of homes remaining at Country Club Gardens where sales have passed the 75 per cent mark, according to the builder. Prices begin at $52,950.

Woman-built Malibu Estates homes ready

Construction of three houses in Malibu Country Estates has been completed under the supervision of German-born Lisa Smith for Continental Developers of California, a subsidiary of Southern California Savings and Loan Association.

Her European training is apparent in her construction styling, with detailing of stained glasses, plantons, picture tiles and crystal fixtures. The daughter of a German industrialist, she emigrated in 1955.

Malibu Country Estates, overlooking the ocean adjacent to Pepperdine University, has a limited supply of lots. The homes are in excess of 3,000 square feet with living room, dining room, four bedrooms, four baths with two or three fireplaces and numerous built-ins.

Mrs. Smith has plans for five additional homes.

She said she was particularly complimented when two of her prospective buyers for new homes were workmen on the job. One of the subcontractors told her she was a "grinder," but he respected her insistence on quality work.

Add a middle-man and you'll multiply misunderstanding

By DON CAMPBELL

A deal is a deal is a deal. Unfortunately, though, it takes two people to enter into a deal of any kind — in real estate, or in any other field — and the possibilities of misunderstanding are enormous.

Add a middle-man to this arrangement, in this case a real estate agent, and you multiply the likelihood of misunderstanding several times over.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

Early last fall we received a notice to vacate an apartment we had been living in for 15 years, and, for a couple of senior citizens, it was quite a jolt. I went to a nearby town to see if there might be something there to purchase. I contacted a real estate agent. He suggested a place to look at, and so, a few days later, I returned with my wife.

We were shown the property and liked it, so we put earnest money down and signed a purchase contract that was to run for five days. The seller wanted cash but the broker said he would see what he could do. A few days later we filled out a credit form and an application for a loan. The broker pointed out that the purchase contract was for only five days. I suggested inserting the figure "two" before the figure "five" so it would read 25 days instead of five. This he agreed to do and made the suggested change, which I initialed at his request.

A week went by with no action, and we had to start work finding another apartment. Finally, I managed to contact the broker's wife who told me that the property had been sold. She asked what I wanted to do about the return of the earnest money.

My wife was terribly upset by the news as she had wanted the place so badly. What if we had decided, during those 25 days, that we had seen something we liked better — do you believe they would have returned the earnest money to us? I am sure we would have forefeited the money. It would have been a breach of contract — or is it to be followed by just one of the parties and not the other? — C. H., Huntington Park, Calif.

ANSWER: Something sure got fouled up here! In the first place, I find nothing in your letter to suggest that the seller ever accepted your ORIGINAL offer (the five-day deal). And I certainly find no evidence that he indicated his approval of your moving the time limit from five days to 25 days — initials or no initials.

What baffles me is why the real estate agent was so non communicative with you. If the seller simply, and flatly, turned down your offer (which seems likely in view of his desire for cash) in the first place, why didn't the broker tell you this? It sounds to me like the deal was dead before you (admittedly, now, rather arbitrarily) hiked the duration of the contact another 20 days. But, why didn't the agent tell you THAT?

Yes, you're quite right. If you had found something that you liked better and had reneged on the deal (if it had been valid), you would have lost your earnest money, all right.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

I would like to know what is involved in buying a home and assuming the mortgage. We've been told that this is the easiest way to do it, but we don't know the details. — W. D. N., Allentown, Pa.

ANSWER: It's not all that complicated and, in nine out of 10 cases, the real estate brokers involved can handle the whole thing for you. The paper work and the cost of doing it this way are a fraction of what is involved in assuming a new mortgage.

Let's say the seller has his house on the market for $60,000 and still has a mortgage of $45,000 on it — in other words, he has an equity of $15,000 in the house. You assume his mortgage (as the name implies) simply by taking over where he is dropping it, and paying him for his equity — $15,000.

What stops most people from going this route is the fact that the longer a family has occupied its home, the more the value of it has depreciated and the bigger its equity has become. And so, between the two, a lot of assumable mortgages have simply got to the point where they require far more cash-out-of-pocket for the owner's equity than the average home buyer can swing.

But, if it's possible, it's still the easier and cheaper way to take on a mortgage.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

I own a 16-unit apartment complex that I have managed since my husband's death a couple of years ago. Fortunately, this is in a nice area where apartments are at something of a premium, so I have very little trouble keeping it filled.

What bothers me, however, and I'm not at all sure you can give me any guidance here, is that I had a very proper upbringing — which my husband and I tried to instill in our own children — and I have trouble accepting some tenants simply because I don't consider them "right."

This has led to some awkward situations and now a friend tells me that I might get into trouble with the law by simply refusing to rent to some people because of these feelings I have. Is this possible? — Mrs. P. K., Long Beach, Calif.

ANSWER: In an extreme situation, it's possible. If the point might be made, and proved, for instance, that you are refusing tenancy simply on the grounds of race, religion or national origin, it could get a little sticky.

I somehow sense, though, that this isn't the case with you and, in many respects, it makes it tougher for you. Times have changed — for better or for worse — and it's difficult to have standards that keep getting in the way of what should be cold, business judgments. I'm afraid that you are going to have to work hard at the tolerance bit.

Building boom in Anaheim

During the first 60 days of 1976, new construction in Anaheim has reached an unprecedented valuation of $25.8 million, Daniel Van Dorpe, chief building inspector, has reported.

The amount is three times greater than for the same period in 1975, when the total for the entire year was $99.5 million, the second highest annual total in the city's history. In 1973, $106.5 million was recorded for new building construction.

The February activity amounted to $17,762,002 on 375 permits for new buildings, signs, pools and mobile homes. In all, 1,361 permits were issued by the building division and a total of $155,729 was collected in fees.

This included 327 permits for plumbing, 230 for electrical and 330 for mechanical inspections and installations, Van Dorpe added.

LANDSCAPING, PATIO AT MONARCH SUMMIT II

Monarch Summit 'logic' cited

When people decide to buy a new home it is usually done for one of two basic reasons — it's logical or it's emotional — noted Frank Babcock, sales manager for Monarch Summit II in Laguna Niguel.

A decrease in the size of the family, taking on a new job or retirement are among the most logical reasons given for buying a new home, Babcock said. Seeking a better neighborhood, a new lifestyle or an improved social status top the emotional reasons for buying, he added.

"Whatever the reason," Babcock continued, "unless a new house answers all of a potential buyer's needs and requirements that buyer will continue looking elsewhere."

Babcock pointed out that "location, price, quality and the design of a home are overriding factors in the final decision to purchase. So the competition in today's market in these areas is keen. Styles, options and features are also extremely varied."

"Many prospective homeowners report that buying a home can be a traumatic experience," he added. "However, it needn't be. When a particular home development is a winner in all categories buyers quickly sense it and react positively."

"Monarch Summit II, a $23.7 million all-adult townhome neighborhood that looks more like single-family homes, is such a development," according to Babcock.

There are three distinctive floor plans, designed for comfortable adult living, and priced from $59,900 to $79,000. Homes have two bedrooms and two baths. And a den is included in the two larger models.

Each home has a brick fireplace with gas log lighter, cable TV outlets, prewired telephone outlets, brand name builtins including two continuous-cleaning General Electric ovens, dishwasher and disposal; old-fashioned kitchen pantries and ceramic tile kitchens, baths and showers.

Winding throughout the development are broad streets and a lush greenbelt. Mature landscaping is growing everywhere, and each home has a shaded, private rear patio. Enclosed entryways are part of each home, plus a two-car enclosed garage.

To reach the Monarch Summit II models at 22956 Solera Drive, take the San Diego Freeway to Crown Valley Parkway in Laguna Niguel, and turn west to Pacific Island Drive. Turn north up the hill and follow the signs with sea gull.

Privacy stressed at Captain's Hill

Privacy, location, and plans that appeal to the adult lifestyle are finding favor with buyers at Holstein Industries' Captain's Hill planned community in San Juan Capistrano.

Located on a hillside that overlooks the San Juan Capistrano valley, the development stresses private entry, boat and trailer storage, pool and open space all in a motif of a Mediterranean seacoast village.

"The floor plans, in a choice of two, three and three-and-a-den designs, are all adult-oriented with spacious master suites, open living rooms, luxury baths, built-in kitchens, privacy walls, iron gates and other luxury touches in the Spanish theme," relates Dan DeMille, Holstein vice president.

Priced from $60,000, some of the cluster homes are available for near immediate occupancy. A wide range of financing is also available, DeMille pointed out.

To visit the Captain's Hill hillside development, take the Pacific Coast Highway to Dana Point and turn at the Marina Entry (del Obispo). Or take the San Diego Freeway to the Ortega Highway off-ramp. Drive through San Juan Capistrano on Del Obispo and follow the curving street to the Captain's Hill entry.

Hunting for unsafe buildings

By JAMES M. LEAVY
Staff Writer

HAUNTED BY THE possibility that an earthquake will strike Long Beach again, Edward M. O'Conner is working to eliminate the city's substandard buildings. He believes it is possible to build a quake-proof structure. Staff photo by KENT HENDERSON

"How would you like to have this crummy job?"

Edward M. O'Connor, director of the Long Beach Building and Safety Department, just threw that question out, sort of an exchange for the half dozen or so questions he was asked about the collapse of the swimming pool ceiling at the YWCA.

It's a crummy job because nobody likes to have city officials poking around their buildings, finding things wrong with them, writing nasty letters, perhaps even condemning them.

It's a crummy job because the man who has it presides over an area described as "seismically active". That means there is a strong possibility the ground under the buildings the department inspects will someday begin to rumble, shake, make ungainly lateral movements and bring some of those buildings down.

It's a crummy job because many of the buildings in the city do not meet the earthquake standards defined in the building code.

It's even crummier than the tax assessor's job, O'Connor says, looking a bit vulnerable under the high ceiling in his first-floor office at City Hall.

DESPITE ALL THIS, O'Connor seems to like his crummy job. He's been at it 30 years and for the last 26 he's been department director. When he retires in a year or so he plans to keep right on working with his favorite problem . . . making buildings in Long Beach safe against the next earthquake.

Since 1971, the heart of his department's inspection and enforcement program has been an ordinance called "Subdivision 80 - Earthquake Hazard Regulations for Rehabilitation of Existing Structures Within the City."

It is a model law, perhaps the only one of its kind, and it puts Long Beach ahead of most other cities in the state. It is aimed at strengthening or eliminating buildings which might not withstand the force of a quake.

Armed with this and the general building code ordinance, the 58 members of the department have changed the face of the city.

Since 1952 O'Connor's office has issued 3,176 condemnation notices which resulted in the demolition of 2,582 buildings and the reconstruction of 393.

It is a record of performance which has produced a kind of knee-jerk defensiveness in O'Connor. "A lot of people are under the impression that when the building official is appointed and serves at the pleasure of the city manager, you can't get anything done."

"You can't get anything done," he explains "if the environment is hostile. It's hostile but not to the degree that it has burned me up."

THE ENVIRONMENT he is talking about includes his boss, the city manager; the city attorney who provides the legal clout for enforcing the codes, the Board of Examiners, Appeals and Condemnation to which building owners appeal their cases; and the city council which is the court of last resort for those who think they have been treated unfairly by the department.

O'Connor is apparently happy with his environment. "The only way you know if the board will support you is to crank them up. I've got a good board."

The city council has reversed only one department action and O'Connor has no complaint about the city manager or the city attorney. "I am satisfied with the ability of this department to enforce the ordinances," he says.

He is not, however, satisfied with the laws governing building inspection in Long Beach. There is no periodic inspection of buildings in the city, no systematic plan. And as a result it is possible for a building to escape inspection indefinitely.

The department acts on referrals from the city manager's office, the health department, the fire department or on complaints from individuals.

O'CONNOR THINKS top priority should be given to a law which would require an inspection each time a building is sold. The law might require that an escrow remain open until a report by the building department is available.

He says the department could charge a fee for each inspection and the program would pay for itself.

A buyer may request such an inspection at the present time, but O'Connor says the department obtains the seller's approval before it is done.

If such an ordinance were passed, a buyer would purchase a substandard building with the full knowledge of its condition and know he would have to fix it up.

A second O'Connor proposal would bring all buildings in the city under the scrutiny of his inspectors. He advocates a sweeping law which would develop a pattern of periodic inspections by providing for certificates of occupancy which would expire regularly (every five years, for example) and be renewed only after the building was inspected.

Laws like these, O'Connor says, would "do quite a bit to clean up the city."

UNFORTUNATELY, they would have done little to avert the tragedy which occurred at the Long Beach YWCA Feb. 27 when the ceiling over the swimming pool collapsed, killing one person and injuring several others.

The building had been inspected and a letter of excessive hazard sent to Y officials in early November. It gave the organization the option of vacating and demolishing the building or submitting a plan of action for its rehabilitation. A month later a plan of action was presented to the city. Before the city could rule on the plan the collapse occurred and last week Y authorities decided to abandon the 50-year-old building.

Rusting and corrosion of steel cable supports caused the ceiling to collapse, O'Connor said. He

Co-ops: an old concept spells new freedom

By LINDA ZINK
Staff Writer

The speaker summed up her feelings simply:

"I couldn't have survived without it."

Despite the regulations, the chart-keeping, the hours on the telephone, "it's worth it."

She'd recommend it to any mother with pre-school children. After weighing the pros and cons — and overcoming her initial opposition — she decided "it just made sense."

The speaker was Diane Yankelevitz, a six-year veteran of the Belmont Heights Babysitting Service, and the topic was child care cooperatives. Mrs. Yankelevitz is obviously a proponent. As a woman who's been there, she believes in the inalienable right of housewives to have time for themselves. At the same time, she's convinced that most women can't have that time without some kind of outside help — help like a babysitting co-op can offer.

"It works like this," said Ms. Yankelevitz, describing a co-op program. "If I leave my children with someone for five hours, I know I'm going to have to take care of someone else's children for five hours. It's an exchange of time, not money.

"I can get away by myself for half a day without worrying about either my children's well-being or the expense of a sitter. I know my children are in good hands and happy. And it's not costing me a cent."

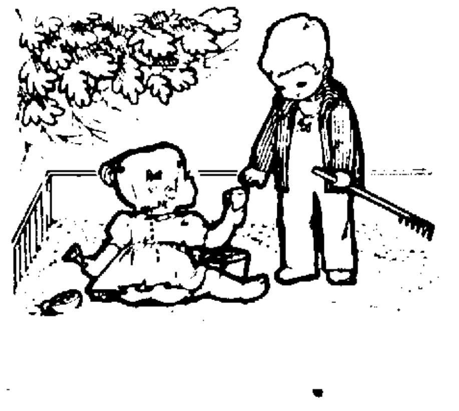
THE IDEA OF babysitting co-ops isn't new. Throughout history, women have banded together to care for their youngsters. Usually the organization was casual and the participants were relatives. But the idea was basically the same.

Recently, co-ops such as the Belmont Heights Babysitting Service have been gaining in popularity. Part of the explanation is the high cost of everything, including child care. Another factor has been the new-found cooperation among women stemming from the feminist movement.

Co-ops such as the one in Belmont Heights tend to be more formal than the traditional family-centered child care system. Like others of its kind, the Belmont Heights Babysitting Service has set rules and specific obligations. But the essential element is still trust — and the willingness of members to go along with the group.

"You'll find that the hardest thing is finding the right people," Ms. Yankelevitz told the dozen women who had gathered at the Women's Community Resources Center for her presentation on how to start a child care co-op. "You don't want anyone in the group you wouldn't trust your children with.

"If you find later that someone isn't working out, don't hesitate to tell the person that he or she can no longer participate. It isn't worth it if you have to worry about who your children are with."



FOUNDERS OF THE Belmont Heights Babysitting Service announced their intentions to form a babysitting cooperative on bulletin boards at laundromats and supermarkets, in church notices "and to total strangers just walking by." They talked to friends, neighbors, relatives "anyone who might know of anyone who might be interested in a co-op in the Belmont Heights area."

The founders also set geographical boundaries — Ocean Boulevard on the south, Fourth Street on the north, Cherry Avenue on the west and Bayshore Drive on the east.

"It's best to keep the boundaries small — about one square mile. You don't want to be running all over town just to drop your kids off so you can go to the supermarket.

"We have made exceptions — but only small ones," Ms. Yankelevitz continued. "The co-op doesn't work well if it's inconvenient to get to some members' homes."

Ms. Yankelevitz suggested setting a date for a planning session "about two months after you start publicizing the event." Fifteen members is enough to get the co-op started. She believes 30 is about the maximum any co-op can handle.

"You'll have to work out some rules, like whether people with swimming pools can participate, if you want to let children play in the front yard, what to do if a child is sick, what to do about disciplining a child, how many children a sitter can stay with at one time.

"Rules vary from co-op to co-op. We used another group's rules as a model for our own, but we changed them somewhat to reflect our particular needs and concerns."

GROUPS WITH which Ms. Yankelevitz is familiar have a chairperson and a secretary. Chairperson of the Belmont Heights service, who is elected for six months, interviews prospective members and serves as an arbitrator in disputes. Each person serves as secretary for a month.

"Being secretary is the big job," Ms. Yankelevich explained. "You have to find the sitters and keep track of all the hours.

"It's a headache," Ms. Yankelevitz added. "But it's worth it. And, after all, if you're in a group with 25 people, you only have to do it every two years."

In six years only two members have been asked to leave the Belmont Heights Babysitting Service, Ms. Yankelevitz said. And there have been few controversies, even over disciplining children.

"Most of our members are pretty conscientious. If someone says she'll

Glad you asked that!

Q: I'm curious. Does Marlon Brando have any unfulfilled ambition? — Eleanor D., Scranton, Pa.

A: Yes. "To pose for a Playboy centerfold wearing Mary Poppins shoes and holding an umbrella," says his Girl Friday, Saturday, Sunday, etc. — Alice Marchak.

On tour to publicize her book, "The Super Secs," Alice (who's worked for the temperamental actor for almost 20 years), came up with some choice conversation-making memos about Brando. He didn't even ask to read the manuscript before it was published, she tells us. And since she's still on the job, apparently he had no objection to anything she wrote.

Among other titillating trivia, she reveals that he wears ear plugs when he's making a film, to avoid noise and help concentration. Also that he refreshes his memory of a script by lettering key phrases of dialogue around the set to cue him into the scene. "Once in a love scene," she recalls, "he wrote words on his leading lady's forehead while the camera angles made it appear he was gazing into her eyes."

THE LATE comedian Buster Keaton — alcohol his nemesis despite long life.

TV'S Jimmie Walker — his life not always "Good Times."

Alice also writes about the practical jokes he pulls when on location and elsewhere. Such as the time the headlines reported he was thrown off a plane he boarded in Los Angeles. Sporting long, sun-bleached hair and a full beard he "humorously" asked a stewardess: "Are you sure this is the plane to Havana?" After the flight took off without him the captain was informed: "That was not a skyjacker! That was Marlon Brando!"

One of his favorite pastimes is to call people and disguise his voice. "If he wanted to," his faithful and favorite paid-fan told us, "he'd make a brilliant mimic. Though no threat to Rich Little."

She relates the inside story of how that attractive actress named Sacheen Littlefeather was asked to deliver a speech of refusal at the Academy Awards. Alice had to type the statement a few hours before it was delivered and Roger (the Saint) Moore lugged home the rejected Oscar.

Alice bristled like her boss when we asked how come he was an "Indian giver" — generously gifting the Indians with a piece of acreage not fully paid for. "The media certainly made hay with that incident," she said saucily. "But how come they never printed anything when Marion made good his gift and paid the several hundred thousand dollars needed for a clear title to all the land?"

Q: Didn't Jimmie Walker of "Good Times" have some bad times in a reform school? — Mrs. Lou Brown, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

A: No. Mr. Dyn-O-Mite dropped out of Manhattan's DeWitt Clinton High School to work as a delivery boy for a supermarket. He palled around with an East Bronx bunch of guys, but while they got into trouble, he kept in the clear. He recalled some of his playmates: "Poppo, a fantastic character; he wound up in jail for armed robbery. Then there were the Jackson Brothers. They could have been the black Marx Brothers. But Billy Jackson went to jail for assault with intent to kill."

Writing his own material, which included many racial jokes, Jimmie played many bistros such as The Bitter End, Improvisation, Champagne Gallery and the Apollo, a Harlem honky-tonk where Nipsey Russell matriculated into stardom. He also played the college circuit for eating money. Then he met producer Norman Lear and helped write TV history.

Q: Was famous funnyman Buster Keaton really an alcoholic? — B.R.M., Lansing, Mich.

A: Unhappily, yes. Though he lived to be 71, his addiction to drinking apparently shortened his career. One of his last comedy films was, ironically, titled "What, No Beer?"

Q: With her many soap-opera kind of marriages, I wonder if Elizabeth Taylor ever expressed her definition of love? — Gusti H., San Jose, Ca.

A: "I don't know how to express it," the recently separated Mrs. Richard Burton once said. "If you feel something so deeply and personally it's like advertising. You just can't capsulize love — you can't put it into a category. There's mother love, child love, man and woman love. It must encompass everything as well as things you're proud of."

Q: A couple of questions about Charo. Where did she come from before she became Mrs. Xaviar Cugat? And if they're still married how come they no longer work together? And when you see her regularly on TV's "Hollywood Squares" does she get the answers before she's asked the questions? — Mrs. L. Denture, Columbus, Ohio.

A: "Ohhh, ohhh, no," Charo chortles. "Sometimes they don't even brief me on the kind of questions I'll be asked. 'Don't think too much, just talk,' the producer tells me . . . and my — what you call it — batting record is pretty good."

Charo, who's got a mind as sharp as a scalpel, learned to play classical guitar in a convent home in Spain. She hasn't performed with Cugie since he was felled by a severe stroke several years ago. But they remain merrily married. While his wife makes personal appearances on TV and in nightclubs or theaters, Cugie relaxes elsewhere. For example, when we relayed your questions, Charo was performing in Miami while her showman-husband was enjoying a month's vacation in Tokyo.

Q: John Denver broke up Merv Griffin relating what happened to him on his honeymoon. Can you repeat the story? — Ms. Sally Balough, Oakland, Ca.

A: Yes. "In our enthusiasm the first night," he said, "I cracked one of Annie's ribs!"

ACTOR Marlon Brando and secretary Alice Marchak — her book tells ALL about the "real" Brando.

ACTRESS Elizabeth Taylor — after five husbands, she offers definition of love!

SINGER-dancer Charo — Mrs. Xaviar Cugat still Mrs.

SINGER John Denver — overenthusiastic on honeymoon.

Audrey Hepburn — a rarity among stars

She came and went, breezing softly through New York like the petal from a cabbage rose, carried aloft on a moonray. And for a short time, in her presence, the city went mad, touched by her magic.

Audrey Hepburn is still the kind of star marquees light up for.

She flew in a snowstorm from her country house in Switzerland, first to Hollywood to pay tribute to William Wyler, the director who made her a household name in her first big picture, "Roman Holiday," then to New York to open "Robin and Marian," her latest picture after an eight year absence from the screen.

"It's not a comeback," she blushed shyly. "I had no idea I would be away so long. It's just that I remarried, had a baby and found a new life. Those things take time, and you just have to decide what's important in life."

At the premiere, the photographers blinded her. Somebody stuck a fountain pen in her eye. And eager autograph hounds spilled ink all over her clothes. "It's not so funny when the clothes are by Givenchy," she grinned.

BUT AUDREY HEPBURN is that rarity among stars — unpretentious, unspoiled, realistic and wise, with her priorities in the right place. She's rare as a blue giraffe.

On the morning after the premiere, she met the press for breakfast, answered a thousand boring questions between muffins, and when it was over, she met me in a private suite at the St. Regis, breathless and exhausted, but still smiling in Technicolor.

She is more beautiful at 47 than any other star imaginable, and warm as a kitten's tongue.

In a long-sleeved silk blouse under a Renaissance jumper, her lithe body is fresh and slender as a new spring tendril popping through the ground for a look at the sun. It's the shape that made her the envy of a million women on a million diets, and there's nothing she can do about it. She eats plates of pasta every day and can't gain weight.

And the uncreased face gives no indication that there's ever been a day or an hour of unhappiness. It might be an illusion, but the illusion works.

To be truthful, she is going through an anxiety attack even as she kicks off her shoes and curls up on the sofa for a chat. Her husband, Dr. Andrea Dotti, was assaulted by kidnappers in broad daylight a few weeks ago in Rome. They forgot their chloroform, so he screamed until they ran away, but he was badly injured, requiring seven stitches in his head.

"I tell you, it's a very anguishing period in Rome. They're even kidnapping tourists for $50 apiece, ransacking apartments and breaking into cars. There are so many different groups — some do it for political reasons, some for money, and others are just delinquents who do it for kicks.

"If you're a famous person, it's especially worrying, but I can't let fear dominate my life. I get up in the morning, do everything like everyone else, and it's second nature, really."

SEAN, HER SON by Mel Ferrer, is 15, 6-foot-3 and away in college. Lucca, the baby, is 6 and in a very safe village school in Switzerland near the country house. "I worry less now. But two years ago, the joy of Rome was to walk around in the streets at night, enjoying the charm. Not anymore. The whole world has changed. Now I shuttle back and forth between my husband and his work in Rome and the children in Switzerland. It's not an ideal way to live, but it seems the best thing to do for the moment."

All of which has kept her away from the screen and the fans who love her. "It's all geography," she sighs. "I only work if I can combine my family's holiday with the shooting schedule. Acting is something I love to do and will do again, but I'm not having a career. Movies will always be an occasional thing now. It's hard to say this, but I am sincere when I tell you I really haven't wanted to work.

"For many years, ever since I was a child, and all through my first marriage to Mel, I was always traveling around making films. So I wanted and needed a rest. I hated the idea of leaving the children once they started school, and my husband must be near his clinic. I had to rearrange my life."

She's returning to Hollywood for the Academy Awards, and her husband and youngest son will accompany her. Givenchy has designed a knockout for her to wear, which will be a change from the blue jeans she wears at home.

But even then, she says, "there will be no movie star talk. I'm not a movie star to my family. Far from it. Not that I've hidden it from them. The children know what I do for a living.

"Lucca was with me in Spain during 'Robin and Marian,' and it was a grand experience for a little boy, watching Robin Hood come to life. He kept saying 'Why isn't Daddy playing Robin Hood?' I told him that was impossible and he said, 'I know why — because Daddy doesn't have the right suit.'

"Sean's friends know more about my career than I do, and they're always coming around for a photograph or something, but I think it amuses him. They don't think of it in terms of having a famous mother because I don't think of it that way. They're very natural children.

"I think I worry more about their future than they do. They'll take their period the way we took ours. All you can do is give them affection and what you hope is a background with the right values."

IF THERE'S any negative reaction to her appearance in the lushly romantic "Robin and Marian," it's seeing Audrey Hepburn playing her age. "Well, I AM 47, and I think it's silly to play younger parts. People have been youth worshippers too long. This is by far the happiest period of my life, even with all the tragic changes in the world. I'm less restless, and I no longer look for the wrong values. If I only knew then what I know now.

"I've had so much more than I ever dreamt of. It's not as though I've had great disappointments or unfulfilled hopes that didn't work out. So much more has happened than I ever thought possible. I didn't expect any of this. I am the most un-bitter person in the world.

"I decided ages ago to like life unconditionally. I've never expected life to do anything special for me, yet I've accomplished more than I ever hoped for, and most of the time it just happened without my even seeking it. I was asked to act when I couldn't act. I was asked to sing in 'Funny Face' when I couldn't sing, and dance with Fred Astaire when I couldn't dance, and do all kinds of things I was not expecting and was not prepared for. Then I tried like mad to cope with it.

"Now I make a real division — when I'm at home, I'm really at home, and I don't do anything. I haven't done any interviews in the past eight years. Of course, I can't do anything about the photographers who follow me around in the street and wait outside my door.

"I don't have a secretary. I don't have attack dogs. My dog is a gorgeous mutt my father-in-law picked up in the street, and she's madly sentimental and gushes all over everybody. I don't go to parties or official functions, and I answer my own telephone. I cope."

It seems impossible, for few stars have ever achieved the kind of supersonic international stardom Audrey Hepburn has. Yet she honestly does not view herself as anything special. (She must have removed all the mirrors from her house.)

"Truly, I've never been concerned with any public image. It would drive me around the bend if I worried about the pedestal others have put me on. And also I don't believe it. I've never thought of myself as glamorous or anything. I think Ava Gardner and Elizabeth Taylor are glamorous, but I don't fit into that category at all, at all.

"There's never been any question of my not being me. I'd be schizoprenic if I worried about

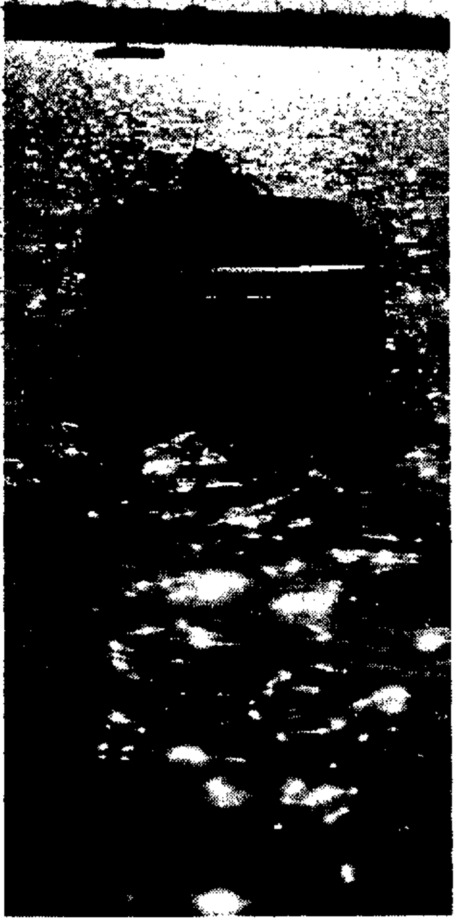
Remember when...



It's been called the sleepy lagoon, the vanishing lagoon, the dreary lagoon and, even more unkindly, the muddy lagoon, mud puddle and what lagoon?

But in its heyday it was proud Rainbow Lagoon, a semicircle ringed with lights of many colors that reflected at night in the twinkling water.

Rainbow Lagoon opened with as much pomp as Long Beach could muster in 1932 — a long motorcade led by motorcycle officers. They drove from Rainbow Pier's encircling arms, entering at the foot of Linden Avenue and exiting at Pine Avenue.

The water reached to the still new Municipal Auditorium which was demolished last year, giving way to Pacific Terrace progress.

Small electric boats plied the lagoon waters, carrying laughing children, sailors on leave escorting pretty girls, starry-eyed lovers. The little boats, riding in the moonlit water, heard their share of love talk and wooing and dreams.

THEN CAME PLANS for an auditorium annex, a huge one for large sports events, ice shows, circuses. A huge land-fill was necessary for the structure, now known as the Long Beach Arena, and the original Rainbow Lagoon was a casualty of this progress. Radical changes were ahead for the 120-acre Rainbow Lagoon-Auditorium project.

This was in the early 1950s. At Sunday midnight, September, 1954, the last electric boat was tied to its dock, leaving fun and gaiety and romance of the lagoon docked, too.

By 1955, tons of fill to repair subsidence and provide for the Annex site and parking lots were changing the character of the lagoon. First it shrank to a third of its original size, becoming a mere 6.8 acre still water lake. Some small bridges were constructed, Japanese style, but the Rainbow Lagoon and Pier were gone, part of the city's past.

You can see the lake — pond? — now, just barely, as you follow Shoreline Drive. Some seagulls settle on the water now and then, oblivious to the demolition and construction in the Pacific Terrace area.

Someday there may be a park-like area, picnic tables, a swimming lagoon, as once was suggested in a master plan. But for the present, the pond-lagoon belongs to the seagulls.

SOCIALLY SPEAKING

From Colonial times forward, all in costume

GOOD NEWS and bad news today.

The good news is that my flu went in to pneumonia and the doctors can cure pneumonia.

Bad news is that after weeks on fruit juice I didn't lose a pound.

ALSO LOST OUT on the Fine Arts Affilliates' Bicentennial Celebration at the Elks Club. I am told that it was THE party of the year and perhaps of the whole Bicentennial.

Nearly 200 ladies and gentlemen turned back the clock 200 years for the costume ball which was duly registered with the Bicentennial Committee in our nation's capitol.

I interviewed ball chairlady Peggy Jo Moore who told me she chose to represent Dolly Madison and her husband Perry went as General Rufus Putnam Howe, an ancestor of Perry's family.

Guests entered the ballroom through a corridor of massed flags from all 50 states and flags commemorating just about everything you could think of.

Each couple was formally announced by the Lord Chamberlin, Gilman Rankin of the Theater Arts Department at Long Beach University. If you thought his resonant voice sounded a bit familiar, he played the Lone Ranger on radio.

Everyone was in costume. The ball committee provided mop caps for the waitresses, red white and blue string ties for the bus boys and white wigs for John Prince and his Americana Orchestra from the University.

Jan Simonian, as president of the affilliates, couldn't quite liberate her role in today's culture s-o-o-o husband, Dr. Ralph, went as the first President of our country and Jan, in a pink and blue gown and powdered wig, went as his First Lady.

A couple of British generals crashed. One of them looked like Dr. Ed Cruchley who came with his wife, Bev. Bev had a little difficulty getting together a maternity Bicentennial gown but she looked authentically pregnant.

Other redcoat was Richard MacKay there with his wife, Dr. Nan.

Two Ben Franklins showed up although Don Gill had the edge since he brought along a kite. Dennis Murray was the other Ben.

It was fitting and proper that the learned head of our University, Dr. Steve Horn, dress as Thomas Jefferson. Wife Nini was in an elegant ball gown. Which is somewhat redundant as all of the ball gowns were elegant. Especially the pink one worn by honorary ball chairlady Isabel Patterson.

Someone commented that Assemblyman Fred Chel was made to wear knee breeches and Elizabeth was prettier than her gown.

Dr. Sel and Sheri Beebe were in matching blue brocade. If there had been prizes, the Huffstetlers, Forrest and Gertrude, should have won for the most authentic. Forrest even went off to the hairdresser to have his white wig combed on his head.

There were some peasants attending.

Councillady Renee Simon went as the mother of humorist Will Rogers. You have to know that Rogers' mother was a full blooded Indian. Husband Harry went as Will Rogers' father, naturally.

Jack and Connie Shainline dressed as an Amish couple. Jack having first hand knowledge as a Pennsylvania native.

Reed and Harriet Williams also chose buckskin outfits. Andy and Bonnie Heck were Pilgrims.

Dick Kussman was an authentically wounded (his leg is in a cast) soldier and wife Bunny was his nurse.

Do you suppose we will have to wait another 200 years for such a great costume party?

MEMBERS AND GUESTS of Dames Club slipped into something comfortable — glasses of wine provided by Brookside Winery.

After a suitable amount of wine was sampled, imbibers adjourned to Castillo Real Restaurant for dinner.

Adjourners included Frank and Joy Grand, Ewing and Gerrie Turner, Dick and Gloria McWilliams, Decatur and Linda Dilday and Paul and Faye Burrus.

More were Bill and June Seils, Howard and Inez Volen, George and Shirley Gre Green, Ken and Marilyn Johnson, J. B. and Mary Lou Dixon, Larry and Nancy Schlma and Dean and Betty Eastman.

A NEW HOUSE in Naples for Kirk and Mary Bannerman caused a party.

They termed the barbecue a "Going Into Debt" party.

Housewarmers included Marty and Carol Shober, Rich and Kay Howard, Bo and Tina Lang, Ron and Beverly Batson, Kathy Miller, Al and Inge Larson, Dennis Headrick, Mike Emrick, Ron Sainard, Chuck Lennox, Ed Muehl and Stephanie Ardist.

Let us know when you have the mortgage burning.

ANOTHER HOUSE warmed...

A new one in Belmont Heights for Bob and Dee Pellkofer.

On hand for buffet dinner and three — count them, three — desserts, were their sons, Bob and Mike, Dee's parents Glen and Lorraine Miller, Miles and Virginia Kingsley and Dee Lewbel all of San Diego.

Also Bob and Mary Ann Machan (Bob did a formal portrait of the Pellkofer's airdale, Jenny, as a house gift), George and Vicki Blake, Wayne and Linda Ebare, Donna Lipp, Rpm and Diane Hauser, Alex Ramirez and Pat Knee.

FLEA MARKET FINDS

Judge pewter by wear signs

Only age can give pewter a rich patina

Q. "Are there any guidelines for distinguishing old from new pewter? — Harry, Thomasville, Ga.

A. Pewter reproductions abound in sufficient numbers to furrow the brow of an expert. Marks found on antique pieces have been well documented, and as a general rule they can be found on the base of an object. Some modern English plates have the mark on the front of the piece. Any article bearing the word "Pewter" is a contemporary object.

A country of origin suggests a date of production subsequent to 1891. Old pieces invariably show dents, scratches and other sign of wear. The surface will feel rough to the touch when you run your hand over it. There is also the distinctive patina of antique pewter which can only be acquired with age.

Q. "What firm produced that fantastic Strawberry-Diamond and Fan cut glass design?" — Sybil, Little Rock, Ark.

A. This beautiful pattern was marketed by some of America's foremost glass companies during the so-called Brilliant period (1880-1915). A partial list would include such industry giants at T.G. Hawkes, Dorflinger, Sinclaire and the Mt. Washington Glass Company. Complete tableware settings of this beloved pattern graced table-tops around the turn-of-the century. Tip: Signed pieces are particularly prized. Strawberry-Diamond and Fan value guide: Cruet, original stopper, $100; master salt, $70; water pitcher, signed Hawkes, $250.

Q. "Do original Broadway cast albums excite flea market shoppers?" — Sarah, Spokane, Wash.

A. Some aware record collectors have posted profits in show albums that would make theatrical angels turn green with envy. They can often be purchased at discount prices, and should always be stored in their original cellophane wrappers. Original cast albums of "Saratoga" and "Golden Rainbow" currently fetch between $20 and $25. Flop shows frequently become box-office winners within collecting circles. A smaller pressing can result in a particular title becoming somewhat scarce. Converting discs into dollars can be a might profitable hobby.

Q. "I'm on the prowl for Coronation items pertaining to Elizabeth II. How are prices on these collectibles?" — Peg, Streeter, Ill.

A. Items issued to commemorate the crowning of Elizabeth II are still hovering in the affordable range. Many finds currently retail for under $10. However, please to not procrastinate as these items may suddenly attract a royal following and start escalating majestically. Elizabeth II value guide: China bowl, 7-inches diameter, $9; cup and saucer, $8.50; mug, crystal, $29; plaque, ceramic, $10; plate, 10-inches diameter, $14; scrapbook, $11.

Women are asking...

'I do exercises, but don't seem to see much benefit. Is there something I'm forgetting?'

By REBA and BONNIE CHURCHILL

"Test your technique!" That's the advice of a physical conditioner. As he explained, "It's not enough to go through the movements of exercise. For them to prove beneficial, add concentration.

"For instance, the waist trimmer, which begins by standing with feet apart, hands grasping yardstick in outstretched hands, and swinging upper torso, demands attention.

"TEST: Do you bend forward from the waist, with back flat, abdomen contracted? Do you feel muscles along the waist go to work as you swing from side-to-side? Do you breathe rhythmically instead of holding your breath? Are elbows flexed? Are you enjoying yourself? RESULT: If you answer, 'Yes', you're doing something right!"

Next, let's consider the conditioner's suggestion for a "body balance" routine. Again, he reminds it's the thought as well as the muscle power you put into the workout that is important. Stand tall, hands holding stick so the tip rests on floor between feet. (Or, grasp the back of a chair as an exercise aid.) Bend right knee and try to place sole of foot on ruler.

"TEST: Do you wobble? Can't you hold the pose for more than two seconds? RESULT: You need some help!"

The conditioner recommends, "If you learn to stand in a balanced condition, weight resting on feet evenly, with body weight directed toward the front of each foot, the routine will be easier to perform. Then, when you raise your knee, the weight should quickly shift and your equilibrium should be easier to maintain." Naturally, check with your doctor for advice on exercising, or if you have a special figure problem.

P.S. Like to eat it up, and still see the pounds go away? Check the new 12 page booklet on how to eat your way thin. Send 50 cents (in coin) and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Reba & Bonnie Churchill, "Eat and be Thin", Independent Press Telegram, P.O. Box 46-181, Hollywood, Ca. 90046.

MEDICINE AND YOU

Hypoglycemia latest fad

THE PRACTICE of diagnosing all sorts of ill-defined malaise as hypoglycemia (low blood sugar) has become practically a cult in the United States today, a doctor says.

Actually the condition is quite rare and is seldom a cause of the discomforts for which it is blamed, says Dr. Rachmiel Levine, executive medical director of City of Hope Medical Center, Duarte.

"Hypoglycemia has taken the place of much of the group of psychosomatic illnesses of 15 to 20 years ago" as a medical fad, says Dr. Levine.

In a report in the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. Levine says it is undoubtedly satisfying to believe in one plausible biological explanation for feelings of fatigue, weakness, dizzy spells and exhaustion.

The modern concept, he says, is to blame it all on low blood sugar levels.

Low blood sugar can cause these symptoms — but so can many other health problems.

In reality, he continues, low blood sugar as a cause of disability in the adult is rare.

THE PROCEDURE of amniocentesis is both safe and accurate, according to a major study conducted by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development.

Amniocentesis is needle puncture of the bag that encloses the developing fetus. The needle is inserted through the mother's abdomen. A sample of fluid is drawn off for testing.

The test is recommended for all pregnant women over the age of 35 years, those who have already had a child with a genetic defect, those with a family history of such defects and women known to be carriers of serious genetic diseases.

Dr. Theodore Cooper, assistant secretary for health, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, says that amniocentesis has moved from the realm of a research procedure "to a part of clinical practice."

A VACCINE for the prevention of gonorrhea has been developed by a team of scientists at the University of Pittsburgh.

Experiments on animals and human volunteers indicate the vaccine may well provide a degree of protection not available up to now.

Announcement of the vaccine's development was made by Dr. Charles C. Brinton Jr., professor of microbiology

ben zinser

Much work remains before the preparation can satisfy government efficacy and safety requirements and thus be released for general use.

In one experiment, Dr. Brinton and an associate were injected with the vaccine. Three other faculty members who joined in the experiment were not immunized.

All five were injected with gonorrhea organisms until all showed symptoms.

The two who received the vaccine showed a level of protection about 60 times as great as those who had not.

Then all five volunteers were cured with antibiotics.

Scientists estimate that the vaccine can reduce a person's chances of being infected with gonorrhea from the current rate of 30 per cent per contact to about one per cent.

WEARERS OF THE Earth Shoe walk no differently than wearers of tennis shoes or persons walking in bare feet, a California study reveals.

A study of the biomechanics of the Earth Shoe was made at the gait analysis laboratory, Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children, San Francisco.

Dr. Roger A. Mann, laboratory director and an Oakland orthopedic surgeon, says the study shows that an individual's gait pattern is not measureably affected or altered by the Earth Shoe.

The Earth Shoe has a "negative heel." That means the heel is lower than the toe. There is a wide toe box and an elevated arch.

A CONDITION once thought to be that only of elderly persons has been found to be not uncommon in young persons.

It is sigmoid volvulus — a twisting of the bowel upon itself.

Three doctors at Guy's Hospital in London, England, report that nine young persons suffered recurrent attacks of the disorder and that there was a long delay before correct diagnosis was made.

All were treated successfully by surgery, according to the British Medical Journal.

REGULAR consumption of salicylates has detrimental effects in pregnancy, a new study shows.

Salicylates have been widely used for the relief of pain and to reduce fever and inflammation for more than a century.

A study in Australia shows that among salicylate users there was an increased incidence of anemia, hemorrhage before and after birth, complicated deliveries and infant mortality.

The findings are reported by Drs. Edith Collins and Gillian Turner of Women's Hospital and Children's Medical Research Foundation in Sydney, Australia.

Details are in the journal Lancet.

TAMOXIFEN appears to be a promising drug in the treatment of women with advanced breast cancer, researchers say.

Women who are more than five years past menopause are more likely to respond to the drug, a New Orleans doctor says in Ob. Gyn. News, a medical newspaper keep your children, she does. Oh, some of our members are kind of picky — like they won't stay with a child who has a slight illness. But it all works out pretty well."

The drug is taken by mouth twice a day.

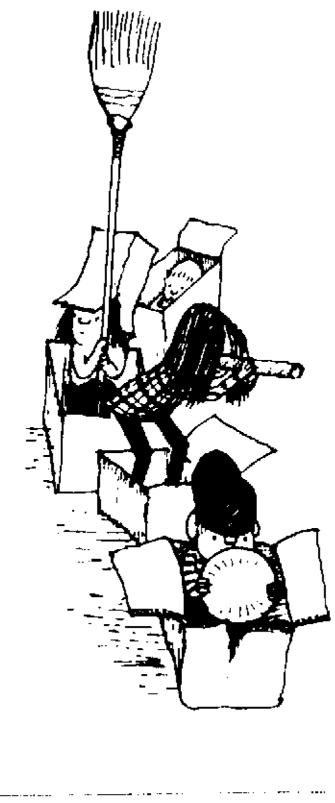
Babysitting co-ops are not practical for women with fulltime jobs, Ms. Yankelevitz admitted, "unless a group of working mothers got together and worked something out for evenings and weekends," and are probably not for women who are turned off by structure and regimentation.

Ms. Yankelevitz said that at first she had some problems "with all the charts and rules and things." But as she thought about it more, she explained, her reservations lessened.

"Among other benefits, participation in a co-op enables you to get to know people in your neighborhood that you might not otherwise get to know.

"You meet people who have the same concerns you do. The more I thought about it, the more sense it made."



ACCW sets quarterly meet

Lore of the seas is told in art

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

At this Bicentennial time when Americans are re-examining their history, Los Angeles County Museum of Art has borrowed from local collections paintings and sculpture that tell of the enormous influence the ocean has had. "Pertaining to the Sea" will open Tuesday and will continue through May 2 in the American Art Galleries.

Nancy Moure, assistant curator of American art, organized the exhibition of 50 works which range from approximately 1840 to 1920. In addition to these paintings there are carvings from wooden ships, such as figureheads and stern boards, and examples of scrimshaw, the art that bored sailors and whalers devised in the 19th century by scratching designs on the sides of sperm whale teeth.

Says Moure, "From the very first days of European settlement in North America, the sea has played an important role in the growth of the nation; consequently, paintings depicting activities and objects associated with the sea were produced. Because they portray contemporary environments, American paintings offer more than a study of art styles and motifs."

High lights of the show include a dramatic mid-19th century portrayal of a frigate in a storm by James Buttersworth, and detailed renderings of steamships by Antonio Jacobsen and of steamboats by James Bard. Bard's boats are exact scale recreations of the originals which he measured as carefully as though he were making architectural drawings.

Among other painters represented are John Frederick Kensett, Alfred Thompson Bricher, William S. Haseltine, Paul Dougherty and Emil Carlsen.

LONG BEACH Museum of Art will open an exhibition of photo-text and video work by Fred Lonidier and Phil Steinmetz next Sunday. With the rather cumbersome title "Lonidier/Steinmetz: Narrative Social Realism" subtitled Lonidier's "The Health and Safety Game" and Steinmetz' "Someone Made a Mistake," the exhibits make use of different techniques.

Lonidier uses photo-textual blow-ups and a video-taped set of interviews to investigate abuses of workers' rights to on-the-job safety as presented in a series of specific case studies. He documents health hazards in occupations that range from petro-chemical/atomic energy industries to white collar office jobs.

Steinmetz' work takes the form of 10 handmade books to be read while seated at desks rather than viewed hanging on a wall. Explains David Ross, deputy director of television/video, "Steinmetz assumes the role of participant observer, usually associated with anthropological study, to produce a sociological investigation of his own family. With the intent of exposing the archetypal qualities observable in his family, he has documented both his own life in the context of his family and the traits of his family that he feels establish their identity within the consumer class."

The museum is open Wednesdays through Sundays from noon to 5 p.m. Admission is free.

WMC to honor young musicians

Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the patio area of Ebell Clubhouse, 290 Cerritos Ave., Woman's Music Club will honor winners of its recent Student Musician's Scholarship Competition.

First place awardees who will be given $100 prizes are Cherry Coleman, violinist; Diane Orlando, mezzo-soprano; and Naomi Nagaya, pianist.

Miss Coleman, 17, Lakewood High School senior, recently won a scholarship to Curtis School of Music in Philadelphia and will leave in September for enrollment under the tutelage of Ivan Galamian. Wednesday, she will perform the first movement of Tchaikovsky's "Concerto in D Major."

Miss Orlando, 23, of Huntington Beach, will graduate from Long Beach State University this spring. For Family Night, she will sing "Adieu, Forets" from "Jeanne d'Arc" by Tchaikovsky.

NAOMI NAGAYA, 13, a straight A student at Dwyer Intermediate School in Huntington Beach and winner of a number of Southern California awards, will play Mozart's "Sonata in A Minor."

All winners of second, third and certificate prizes will perform with the exception of Virginia Lee and Karen Carlson who have conflicting commitments.

Family Night hosts will be Mrs. Katherine Langdon, club president; members of the executive board; and Mrs. Bruce Woods, scholarship chairperson. All winners will be honored at a reception after the recital. Guests of members and performers are invited to share the evening. Others who wish to attend may call Mrs. Woods, 3014 Nipomo Ave., for information.

Super Sherlock Holmes

Leonard Nimoy is the 110th professional actor to play super detective 'Sherlock Holmes' which will run at the Shubert Theater, Los Angeles, from Wednesday through May 2. This Royal Shakespeare production is the biggest theatrical venture ever to cross the Atlantic — it has more than 40 tons of scenery and costumes. Its five sets are shrouded in fog and special effects.

Shostakovich concert innovative, unique

A marathon program, the first Shostakovich Memorial Concert to be given in Southern California, will be presented next Sunday from 4 to 9 p.m. in the University Theater of Long Beach State University, 6101 E. Seventh St.

Creator and director of the event, Julien Musafia, says, "In addition to being the first Shostakovich Memorial Concert in Southern California, this concert is historic. It will be the only marathon Shostakovich concert ever given anywhere and we will use an original system of 'simultaneous translations' to heighten the dramatic effect and to give an instant comprehension of the Russian text during the vocal parts of 'Symphony No. 11' and song cycles 'From Jewish Folk Poetry.'

"This will be only the second time the symphony has been performed on the West Coast. Grace-Lynne Martin, soprano, and Roger Ardrey, bass-baritone, will be soloists."

The program will feature works ranging from Op. 1 through Op. 135 and will include piano music and chamber music. Other performing artists will be the LBSU Consortium Musicum, alumni and faculty.

IN ADDITION to the symphony and song cycles, the concert will include "Twenty-four Preludes for Piano," "Three Fantastic Dances," "Sonata for Cello and Piano," "Sonata Op.12," "Concertino for Two Pianos," and "Quintet, Op. 57."

The Quintet received the Stalin prize of $100,000, the largest amount of money ever awarded for a single composition. The "Sonata Op. 12" for piano has never before been performed in this area. A relay of pianists will play the 24 preludes.

Interspersed throughout the concert will be commentary by KPFK's critic, William Malloch.

The Shostakovich Memorial Concert is sponsored by the LBSU department of music, the Louise Carlson Cultural Fund and the LBSU Alumni Association.

General admission is $5; student tickets are $2. Tickets may be purchased at the fine arts ticket office Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. or on the afternoon of performance.

DURING intermissions, dinner will be available from the University Union catering service in the theater patio.

Philharmonic due in L.B.

Daniel Lewis will be on the podium at Millikan High School, 2800 Snowden Ave., Saturday at 8:15 p.m. to conduct the Los Angeles Philharmonic.

He has programmed Haydn's "Symphony No. 92" (Oxford), Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" and Nielsen's "Clarinet Concerto."

Michele Zukovsky, the orchestra's co-principal clarinetist, will be soloist in the Nielsen work.

This will be the second orchestral concert of the Philharmonic's current Long Beach season.

Lewis, who combines an active career as chairman of the conducting department of the USC School of Music with duties as music director of the Pasadena Symphony Orchestra, also has served on the faculties of California State University Fullerton, UC San Diego and Grossmont College.

'Small War' will begin

A double romance and a spy story in a Colonial setting, Robert Sherwood's "Small War on Murray Hill," will open Friday at Long Beach Community Playhouse, 5021 E. Anaheim St.

The plot concerns the efforts of Mary Murray, played by Susan Boster, to delay Gen. Howe, played by Terry Doyle, from reaching Gen. Washington's camp for 24 hours. In addition, young romantic leads Lt. Frederick (Michael Fiore) and Susan Lindley (Sharon Orange) are entangled in the spy drama which combines military conferences, romance and intrigue.

James Brittain directs the cast which includes Kay Shuman, Allan Ellison, Walter Orange, Homer Johnson, Owen Griffiths, David Hammond and John Vandemere.

Performances will be at 8:30 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays through May 8.

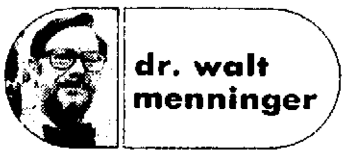
Prejudices buried too deep to ever eliminate



dr. walt menninger

After one of the recent presidential primary elections, a political pundit observed that prejudice is alive and well and as potent as ever in determining people's choices at the ballot box.

That reminded me of a visit with a high-level government official some years back. Discussing some of the problems of the large cities, he asked me, "How can we eliminate prejudice?"

Presumably he thought that because I am a psychiatrist, I had some magic answer to this question. (That's a mistaken assumption many people have.) My answer was simple and straight-forward and not what he expected: We aren't going to eliminate prejudice! Because the causes of prejudice lie too deep in the human personality.

Webster defines prejudice as a preconceived judgment or opinion, an opinion without just grounds or before sufficient knowledge, an unreasonable inclination or objection. While the term usually refers to feelings against someone or something, it can be positive as well as negative. We can be prejudiced toward certain foods or clothes or politics just as much as we may be prejudiced against some.

OUR PREJUDICES are a function of emotions — the eternal, complicating factors in life. They originate in early childhood from feelings we have about things we don't or can't understand. Indeed, as Webster notes, the roots of prejudice lie in feelings "before sufficient knowledge."

As adults, we may like to believe that all men and women are created equal. But it doesn't take the child long to realize it's really otherwise. There are real differences, and there are many imagined differences above and beyond the real differences. And many feelings are prompted by both the real and imagined differences.

One set of feelings comes from realizing that there are "haves" and "have-nots." The "haves," as they realize they have something others do not, fear the loss of what they have and try to protect themselves. The "have-nots," as they become aware of what they lack, resent the status of being without and strive to make up or compensate for their deficiency.

Being a "have" or a "have-not" relates to many conditions — sex, race, socio-economic status. There is even the basic "have-not" status which every child experiences, living in the land of the giants, being relatively helpless, not completely sure he will grow up to become a giant himself.

AS CHILDREN move out of the home into school, they become increasingly aware of differences and struggle to explain them. The basic difficulty is that a young child doesn't have the knowledge to explain the differences or understand them. But he feels them. Unable to justify the feelings in rational adult terms, he comes up with other formulations.

He may deny that differences really exist and rely on childish fantasies of magical power or hope that all will turn out equal in the end, when he is grown up (if that ever realy happens). Or he may displace feelings of inadequacy onto someone else who has "less," or who is felt to be less adequate; he thus elevates his self-esteem by putting someone else down.

Yet another complicating factor has been cited by the late Dr. Lawrence Kubie, a Baltimore psychoanalyst. The child has mixed feelings about his own body — on the one hand, he has a secret, guilty pride in it; on the other hand, he has hidden feelings of shame. And it is hard to come to grips with both good and bad in oneself. The psychological solution is to bury the inner "bad" feelings, deny their existence within, and instead to lay them onto others, putting all the "badness" outside.

How can we eliminate prejudice? We can't, any more than we can eliminate all disease or maladjustment. It is part of the human condition. We can attempt to understand our prejudices and to admit the biases we have, but we can't eliminate them.

In future columns, I will deal more specifically with several areas of prejudice — against long hair, against blacks, against busing. And I'll offer more specific thoughts of some things we can do.

(Dr. Menninger invites your comments and questions. Write to him care of the Independent Press Telegram. Because of the volume of mail, he cannot answer each individually but will handle questions of general interest in this column.)

Now here's a way to recycle egg shells and make them beautiful conversation pieces for year-round display. Simply adding baubles, bangles, beads — even fabric and small pictures — can give you exciting "boutique" eggs that will enhance any decor. Our plans call for glittery (but economical) spangels that are easily attached.

Over 100 pictures in our step-by-step patterns take you through the entire process from emptying the egg to mounting it — like those creations shown here with actress Susan Brown.

Along with a complete materials list, our pattern even shows you how to create Christmas ornaments — plus hot air balloon mobiles. So if you've always admired egg ornaments but felt they would take more time and talent than you possess, let us "egg" you on to try it. We've made it so easy!

To obtain the Egg Decorating and Ornaments Pattern, #524, send $2.50 (includes first class postage and handling) by cash, check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Independent Press Telegram, Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, Ca. 91409.

AT WIT'S END

Perfect all-occasion sentiment

erma bombeck

Greeting cards were originally born out of the need to say for people what they couldn't say for themselves.

I once gave my mother a card depicting a little girl in a hooped skirt knocking on the door of a cottage and saying, "You bask in the sunshine of sweetness and light...and make all my dreams come true...prithee reap the harvest of all my love...in everything you do. Happy birthday."

Mother smiled and said, "It sounds just like you."

"Prithee, mother," I said, "you've been basking in the sunshine too long. All I wanted to say was I'm not much, but I'm all you can afford."

Not so today. I've never seen so many cards for so many occasions saying greetings in so many ways in all my life.

SOME OF THEM you can even send through the mails.

If you put your foot in your mouth and are sorry, there's a card for it.

If you won a tennis tournament, a diploma in sheetmetal, a divorce, or passed your eye examination, there's a card for it.

I even saw one that said, "I love living with you because I've got a case on you."

When you open it up, it threatens, "Marry me or I'm taking you to court."

There are marriage proposals, business proposals, vacation proposals and some proposals that are just plain indecent.

I was picking out a Valentine for my husband when a salesperson asked if she could help. "I'd like something a little sentimental." "Here's one," she said, handing me a card. My ears turned red. "You wanta see my I.D.?"

"THAT ONE'S not so bad," she said. "We had one that was waterproof so you could read it under a cold shower. Just tell me what you want to say and how you want to say it."

"Maybe I'll just get a Mother's Day card."

"Unwed? Underage? Unwanted? Undone? Unsung? Unexpected? Underfoot?"

"Just something that will sound like me."

"Here's one that might fit you. It's a little strange. 'You bask in the sunshine of sweetness and light and make all my dreams in accord...prithee, mother, you know I'm not much...but face it, I'm all you can afford.'"

Good grief.

Dear Mother Earth:

By LYNN AND JOEL RAPP

DEAR MOTHER EARTH:

I have a problem with my Pothos plant. Its leaves are turning yellow, one by one, and some of them near the base of the stems are falling off. Help, please! I don't want to lose it as "Peter" and I have become very attached.

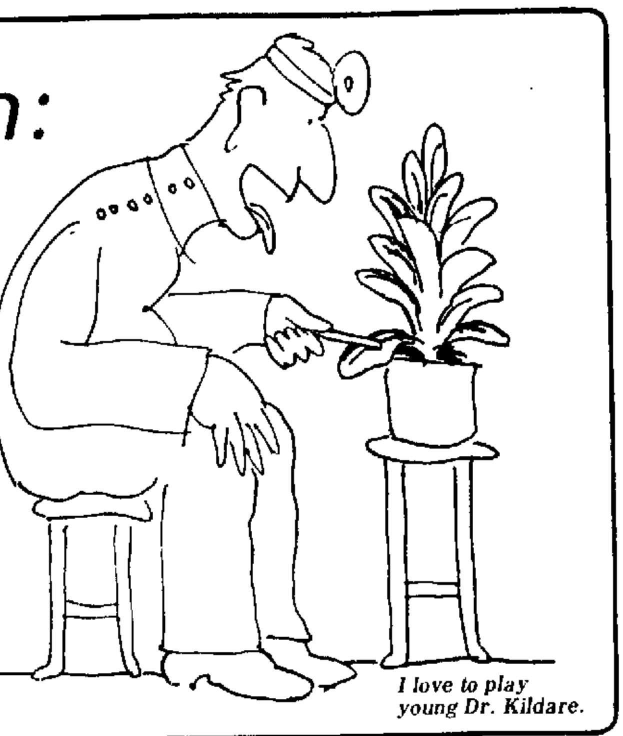
I have him hanging in front of an east window and water him every third day with about one-half Dixie cup of water. Maybe fertilizing will help, but I have no idea what kind of food to use or how often to serve it up. Please offer any advice you think might save Peter Pothos from an untimely demise.— L.D.

DEAR L.D.:

First of all, what's a "timely" death? Any time any living thing expires it must be considered untimely, so we'll do our best to help you resuscitate Peter. We've said it in previous columns, but it's such a common problem it bears repeating.

Yellowing leaves are usually the result of one of three conditions: lack of iron, corrected by adding an Iron Chelate (available at nurseries) to the soil; lack of light; and improper watering, usually overwatering as opposed to under. If it's not too late — and if most of the leaves have turned or are turning yellow it probably is — we'd suggest you cut down on the watering as a first try at remedy. Let Peter dry out thoroughly and then establish a pattern of watering him thoroughly only after his soil is completely dry to the touch.

If you want to try adding a little Iron Chelate to the soil, go ahead, but never fertilize Peter or any other sick plant for that matter. No matter how organic the food you choose, it can only harm, not help, the weakened root system. If all fails, cut him all the way back and perhaps he'll grow again. Good luck and happy growing.



I love to play young Dr. Kildare.

Systematic inspections plan needed

called it a "freak accident" because the deterioration of the ceiling supports was concealed. There was no way of inspecting it and O'Connor says that had the building been brought up to earthquake standards, the ceiling might have collapsed anyway.

The earthquake ordinance opens the door to enforcement of other codes. "If an owner chooses to repair his building rather than demolish it, we request that all other substandard conditions be corrected."

In the case of the Y, however, the portion which collapsed was suspended from the original ceiling and could not have been inspected without dismantling a portion of the building.

In general, O'Connor feels the final responsibility for the condition of a building lies with its owner.

While his office is currently moving on type three buildings - those built of unreinforced masonry bearing walls and exhibiting poor quality mortar, O'Connor thinks the poor condition of buildings in some parts of the city, particularly in the downtown area, is caused by other conditions.

"Many buildings end up being condemned because of the hostile environment in the area where they are located."

He is talking about the spiral of decay which results when an owner is reluctant to repair a building because his tenants cannot afford to pay the rent required for rehabilitation.

This is something over which the building and safety department has no control. "I would like to see private industry come in and solve the problem," O'Connor says.

He's not shirking his duty. He feels a keen sense of responsibility. "I have a moral obligation to the community...taxpayers have spent a lot of money on me."

That's why he plans to focus his 30 years experience on what he considers to be the major hazard in Long Beach, another major earthquake. "No one knows how much time we have before another major earthquake occurs."

O'Connor is dogged by the specter of a quake striking a city of substandard buildings.

What he wants, whether or not he's on the city payroll, is to close the books on the earthquake hazard program. It would be suuccessful, he says, if on the day before the quake occurs , the last substandard building in the city is either rehabilitated or destroyed.

ADVICE TO THE TAXLORN

When capital's at zero

DEAR MR. SMITH: I am in partnership in the motel business. Over the past five years we have been taking out drawings for ourselves and about breaking even on the profit because of the depreciation. My problem is that our capital accounts are about to go into the red for 1975. How do you account for this tax wise? Do you ignore it, or treat it as income leaving your capital account at zero, or do you treat it as a capital gain? -- R.E.

Capital accounts that are in the red are entered on Federal Form 1065 with the amounts in brackets. Assuming that a partner's proper share of the firm's liabilities is at least equal to his capital balance that is in the red, there is no special income or gain to be reported. Otherwise, you may need professional assistance to determine whether the excess drawings resulted in capital gain, or a reduction in ordinary loss, or if any other treatment is indicated.

jacob smith

DEAR MR. SMITH: Internal Revenue Code Section 103(a)(1) excludes from gross income interest on the obligations of a state. It does not say that the state has to be one of the United States of America. Could it be one of the states of Mexico? — L.D.

No! You misinterpret the section. The Code provision you mention refers to "The obligations of a State, a Territory, or a possession of the United States..."

DEAR MR. SMITH: We have just leased a business lot we own, and the lessee has agreed to pay the property taxes. Do we have to report to IRS the amount of the taxes that the lessee pays on the property? If so how? — W.T.Mc.

The preferred way is to add the lessee's tax payments to your rent income and also to your tax expense. It has no overall effect on your tax.

DEAR MR. SMITH: My 1975 income was $1,530 and federal income tax of $124.80 was withheld. Someone at IRS aid I owed no tax and I shouldn't file. They said if I filed I would owe $124.80, even though I am over 72. Are they right? — B.L.S.

Of course not! You may have misunderstood. File your 1040 for 1975 in order to get your $124.80 refunded.

DEAR MR. SMITH: How much can I deduct for licenses on a double mobile home? They cost $200 last year. Also, the insurance company that carried our homeowner's insurance on the home, went bankrupt and we are out $500. Is this deductible if we don't recover it? -- R.K.

Property taxes are deductible, but license fees are not. If part, or all, of the $200 you paid is based on the value of your mobile home, deduct that part.

If you can compute with reasonable accuracy, the loss caused by the insurance company's bankruptcy, report it in the earliest year such determination is possible as a short-term capital loss, and refer to it as a non-business bad debt.

DEAR MR. SMITH: I have a small amount of oil royalties each year and my question is: Does the IRS continue to allow the small property owner to take 22 per cent depletion on the federal income tax forms? -- F.H.

Yes. But just to make certain you and I similarly interpret the word "small," under current federal tax law, the rate of percentage depletion on oil royalties depends on the size of your oil interest. If you are not in the petroleum business, and by purchase or gift after Dec. 31, 1974, have not acquired the interest in a proven field, and your royalty interests represent an average daily production of not more than 2,000 barrels of domestic crude oil, you may claim a deduction for percentage depletion on your 1975 federal income tax return of 22 per cent of the royalties received, but not to exceed 65 per cent of your taxable income from all sources, generally computed without regard to such depletion. If your interests represent a greater average daily production you are not entitled to a deduction for percentage depletion. Different rules pertain to gas royalties.

Do you have an income tax problem? Write to "Advice To The Taxlorn," P.O. Box 49081, Tucson, Ariz. 85717, with a self-addressed stamped envelope, for information that may help you. Your identity will not be disclosed.

Dear Mr. Corn:

How should we have bid these hands? Can you also give an alternate sequence?

Waterbury, Ct.

Answer: There are several ways to reach six or seven diamonds depending upon system. The grand slam is not ironclad, but I think it has excellent chances and should be reached.

Here are two possible sequences:

Dear Mr. Corn:

I am confused by the new laws of duplicate bridge regarding revokes. Can you please clarify?

Sticky Cards
Watertown, N.Y.

Answer: The new laws apply only to duplicate bridge and the revoke law has been changed as follows:

If the offending side wins the revoke trick and at least one other subsequent trick, the penalty is two tricks.

If only the revoke trick is won, the penalty is one trick.

If the revoke trick is not won, a one trick penalty is invoked if the offenders win a subsequent trick. If not, there is no penalty.

Dear Mr. Corn:

Whenever we have an irregularity, our games goes to pot. We have a book on laws, but unfortunately we also have a self styled "guardhouse lawyer". By the time the arguing is over, the hand is ancient history and it's time for dinner. Any suggestions?

Long Filibusters,
Erie, Penn.

Answer: Eliminate the debates. Appoint one player the director of the day to read the applicable law and apply it.

In this connection, Abraham Lincoln was once quoted as describing a lawyer. "He can compress the most words into the smallest ideas better than any man I ever met."

Dear Mr. Corn:

We stopped at five spades after this bidding. Was it our fault or should we charge it up to aggressive interference?

[illegible], Tex.

Answer: I cannot fault the bidding up to East's bid of five hearts. The five heart cue bid was a good effort to investigate a grand slam. However, over West's five spades, East should continue on and bid six clubs.

West would correct to spades and that would be it. East gets most of the blame since East is looking at first round control of three side suits and a good five card major that has been supported voluntarily.

However, West could well have bid six spades over five hearts since he had no wasted values.

Audrey Hepburn

makeup or evening gowns. Maybe that's why I suffer double when I do have to do something like the Willie Wyler tribute or the New York premier of 'Robin and Marian.' My knees were shaking, my hands were clammy, it was terrifying.

"I'm an introvert. You'd think after all these years I'd be accustomed to all the fuss, but it never gets any easier."

AS FOR THE FUTURE, she says, "You're going to think I'm so corny, but my wish is not to be lonely. And to have my garden. I grow everything -- flowers, herbs, vegetables. I'm not a city person.

"That's the basic and only disagreement between Andrea and me. He's gregarious, and he loves the noise and hubbub of a city. I love the country, dogs, flowers and nature, and I'm very bored by cement and skyscrapers.

"Don't get me wrong. I've enjoyed the klieg lights, the soundstages, the camera and the hard work making films. But if you ask me what I want from life, it's not glamour or money.

"I don't know what I would've done in the movies during the past eight years, anyway. It's all sex and violence. I don't like guns, and I can't strip because I don't have the body for it. I'm too scrawny. So I don't know what the future holds. We've have to wait and see what happens to Rome. Will there be a new election or will there be a revolution? Will we move to Switzerland or to Timbucktoo? We're playing it by ear.

"But whatever happens, the most important thing is growing old gracefully. And you can't do that on the cover of a fan magazine."

Then she put her shoes back on those dainty feet, and was off to the airport, clutching and sniffing a bouquet of spring flowers. And for a brief moment, I knew what spring was like in the middle of March.

Audrey Hepburn's radiance and spirit are contagious fevers for which there are not known or desirable cures. If they ever discover an antidote, God help us and the movies.

THE FORMULA

Eliminate those creepy crawlies

By NORMAN STARK

The breathtaking beauty of many moths and butterflies results from white, black, red and yellow pigments in the scales found on the wings. But don't be lulled into false security by all this beauty. When they lay eggs, all h— breaks loose. From the eggs larvae, such as caterpillars, hatch with a full-blown appetite for tender green things such as tiny new leaves on trees and shrubs. So if you're looking forward to shade from big leaves in the summer, it's wise to protect the little ones in the spring. This can be easily and inexpensively done by painting caterpillar tree bands around the trunks. You can make them yourself. Here's how you do it.

You'll need one and one-half cups (12 ounces) of POWDERED ROSIN (you can get this from an athletic supply store), one cup (eight ounces) of LINSEED OIL, and one tablespoon of ordinary PARAFFIN CANNING WAX. Put all three ingredients together in the top of a double boiler, heat and stir until melted and mixed. When cooled, transfer to a metal, plastic or glass container. To use, paint a band about three inches wide around the trunk of the tree to be protected.

RAY JOHNSON
Chicken and dumplings every Sunday

YOU KNOW what happiness is?

Happiness is a slice of tender round of roast beef at Arnold's Family Restaurant, 3925 Atlantic Ave. That's the best roast beef, medium-rare or well-done, just the way you like it.

Happiness is also the stewed chicken and dumplings featured every Sunday and Wednesday at Arnold's. That's home-style cooking with a delicious white sauce, the kind grandma used to make back on the farm. Also featured on Sundays is prime rib au jus, $4.25 on the big dinner.

Happiness is also these entrees at Arnold's: roast premium turkey with cranberry sauce, sugar-cured baked ham, Swiss steak with rich brown gravy and splendid seafood choices. From time to time there are also such entrees as sirloin tips in gravy with cornfritters, beef Cantonese with rice, fried chicken, stuffed bell pepper, liver with onions, old-fashioned beef stew, grilled Salisbury steak, roast lamb with dressing, braised shortribs of beef, sauteed chicken livers, baked meatloaf or roast pork with apple sauce.

Arnold's is one of the most beautiful cafeterias in Long Beach, luxuriously furnished, but with prices that are non-luxurious. The majority of complete dinners are less than $3. It is owned by Ray Johnson who grew up in the towns of Windy Summit and Essex, Iowa. He is a former schoolteacher and athletic coach. His approach to dining out is simple: He believes in quality food and quality service at all times and gives the credit for his success to his staff and general manager, Tim McMillan.

Ray also owns the large Queen Cafeteria, 101 Alamitos Ave. It has the same quality food and quality service as Arnold's, practically the same menu and the same sensible family prices. Tim is overall supervisor for both restaurants.

One of the nice things about dining at Arnold's or the Queen is the fact that the guest chooses exactly what he wishes. He or she is never served anything simply because "it's included." The dinners include three salads per person from a glassed display of many varieties. The guest chooses exactly which salads he wants. He also chooses two hot vegetables and is given a choice of bread or rolls or muffins and also a choice of beverage.

The Queen and Arnold's are closed Mondays but open the rest of the week from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. The daily luncheons go from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. and offer a variety of specials as well as fresh hot sandwiches and such combinations as the four-salad plate or the soup-sandwich combo. The Queen resembles a garden because it is decorated with so many live plants. It has a banquet room seating up to 75. Arnold's Family Restaurant has parking under a roof, a convenience on rainy or superhot days.

CARE TO KNOW how to keep your life serene?

Don't argue with a lobster devotee.

Don't argue with a crab devotee.

Don't argue with a halibut devotee or an abalone devotee.

You can't win an argument with any of those people. Each believes that his particular variety of seafood is better than all the rest.

So I shall state very quietly, without setting off a controversy (I hope), that I think swordfish steak leads all the rest. I'm talking about the best swordfish steak, the kind that's served at Cigo's, the famous seafood speciality house in San Pedro on Ninth Street at Pacific Avenue. It's owned by a connoisseur of ocean delicacies, Emmett Parsons, who has the knowledge, friendliness and other qualities needed to make a restaurant outstanding — and to keep it that way.

Emmett is a graduate of Banning High School, Wilmington. He has lived in the harbor and Long Beach areas since 1927. He's been a Southern Californian so long that he knows people will drive any distance to find a restaurant that features the finest seafoods. From the 1920s through the mid 1960s, swordfish steak was consistently among the most popular restaurant entrees. Then it went into decline for quite a few years because the best kind was no longer available.

In the past year or so, Cigo's has again been able to serve the finest swordfish steak — the firm, rich kind that was so popular decades ago. That swordfish comes from waters far away, free of the contamination worries that troubled swordfish suppliers. Emmett serves his steak for $4.50 on his huge dinner. That dinner is so large that many people skip their lunch so they can enjoy all the courses without restraint. Included are antipasto of salami, cheese and marinated garbanzoes; delectable creamy-style Boston clam chowder AND salad; baked potato with plenty of melted butter or mostaccioli pasta or French fries or rice; hot cheesebread, coffee or tea.

Cigo's serves Sundays from 4 to 10 p.m. The luncheons are Mondays through Saturdays, 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., offering a variety of seafoods, chowder, fancy ocean salads and rich beef dishes, including hot sandwiches. The facilities include a banquet room and cocktail lounge. On Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays there is rollicking entertainment by strolling accordionist Jack Valdez. On Sundays he entertains early in the evening.

P.S. — Cigo's also delights devotees of lobster, crab, halibut or abalone, because it offers premium quality of each plus such beauties as red snapper or white sea bass (both are $3.95 on the dinner). Also served are steaks, prime rib au jus, sand dabs, shrimp, broiled squid, scallops and steamed clams.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Good judge of compote

It's apparent from the photograph he hasn't overlooked any of the ingredients for his recipe. You can rest assured the same thoroughness applies to his profession, as well.

Today's chef of the week, Judge Charles S. Litwin, Jan. 16 was appointed to the Superior Court, Los Angeles County, sitting in Long Beach. Prior to the new appointment, he was a municipal court judge, serving as presiding judge in 1969. He again was elected presiding judge for 1976, before being advanced to Superior Court.

The name "Brown" has a real meaning for Judge Litwin. In 1966, former Gov. Pat Brown appointed him to the Long Beach Municipal Court; and just 10 years later, he was appointed to the Superior Court by Gov. Jerry Brown.

Litwin started out in Buffalo, N.Y., and lived in Detroit, Mich., before arriving in Los Angeles in 1931.

He was graduated from Los Angeles High School in 1932, and enrolled in Southwestern University Law School, graduating J.D. (cum laude) in 1938, the same year he was admitted to the Bar. He also took his undergraduate work at Southwestern.

LITWIN STARTED law practice in Los Angeles that same year, before coming to Long Beach in 1941. His law practice continued into 1966, except for a period in the U.S. Navy during World War II. He is a member of the law firms of Shibley, Wanzer & Litwin, and the firm of Wisot & Litwin.

A past president of the Long Beach Jewish Community Federation, Litwin serves on the board of directors of the National Conference of Christians and Jews. He has served on the board of governors for Long Beach Bar Association and Long Beach Jewish Family Service.

Litwin has received the Brotherhood Award, National Conference of Christians and Jews, and the Human Relations Award from the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

Litwin's wife, Helen, is a marriage counselor with the Conciliation Department of the Los Angeles County Superior Court.

JUDGE CHARLES S. LITWIN

Solution to puzzle is on L S-7

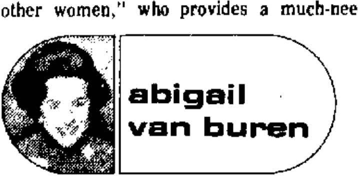
DEAR ABBY

Plea falls on deaf ears

DEAR ABBY: I am amazed at your chauvinistic put-down of women who accept attentions from married men. You fail to mention the men who pester married women, often without any encouragement.

And what about the wife who treats her husband like a second-class citizen and refuses sex, but is hurt and martyred when he finds another women with whom to share love and companionship?

Many unhappy marriages have been saved by the "other women," who provides a much-needed oasis for the unhappily married man and sends him back to his wife refreshed and renewed.



It's time wives assumed some of the responsibility for the reason their husbands stray. It's also time that we face the horrible truth that wives also stray with "cruel, inconsiderate, stupid and short-sighted" MALES. — FOR EQUALITY

DEAR FOR EQUALITY: If a marriage must be "saved" by the "other woman" (or the "other man") who provides a "much-needed oasis" and sends the lover home "refreshed and renewed," I think all concerned should take a good, hard look at the marriage. Such marriages are for masochists.

DEAR ABBY: I am in a terrible quandary. We are having a formal affair for my son's bar mitzvah. My brother and his wife recently separated and are living apart. I don't know whether they will eventually patch up their differences or go through with the divorce.

Should I invite my sister-in-law? We always got along well, and I am very fond of her. Should I send her and my brother separate invitations at their respective addresses? And how about her parents? I like them, too. — IN A QUANDARY

DEAR IN: Send a separate invitation to your sister-in-law and also one to her parents, and let them decide whether or not to accept.

DEAR ABBY: A waitress signed WANTS TO PLEASE wrote a long list of complaints against customers. The one that irritated me the most was, "Please do not summon the waitress by snapping your fingers, whistling or hollering 'Hey, Girlie!'"

Now I have a question, I eat in restaurants often, and I have a terrible time getting the attention of my waitress.

What is the correct procedure? I have tried the following: Signaling silently to any waitress whose eye I catch, hoping she will fill my water glass or coffee cup, or bring me my check. She gives me a stony look and says, "This isn't my station!"

Then I ask, "Will you please tell the waitress whose station this IS that I would like some attention?"

She doesn't say yes, no or go jump in the lake. She just walks away.

I have waited so long for my waitress that I have actually gotten up from my chair and have gone looking for her!

If you have any suggestions for getting a waitress' attention when she is busy making eyes at the bartender or in the kitchen gabbing with the help back there, please let me have it. I have even become so disgusted that I have started for the door. THEN someone runs after me with my check. Perhaps that is the way to get attention. — DISGUSTED IN CHICAGO

DEAR DISGUSTED: Perhaps! (P.S. Meanwhile, easy, man. You sound like a candidate for a coronary.)

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, Los Angeles, Ca. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

FASCINATING FABRICS

New crochet excitement

What does Viola Sylbert, sophisticated New Yorker and winner of a Coty award for fashion design, have in common with the history of a French noblewoman, who fled to England following the French revolution?

The answer is advancement of the art of crochet, the creation of patterns, and production of instruction books.

Mlle. Eleanore de la Branchardiere taught crochet to the British Royal family, wrote 100 books on the subject and a monthly journal, The Needle, from 1852 to 1854. Ms. Sylbert has brought her modern talents to Columbia-Minerva, one of this country's oldest suppliers of yarn, needles and instruction books. She provides a fresh look in styling.

It's hard to realize that fine crochet was little known until it was popularized by Mlle. Eleanore. True, centuries before there was a chain stitch called the "shepherd's stitch," created with a hard-carved hook and wool to make hats and shawls. Many, many years later, this chain stitch embellished fabric; a form of embroidery done with a hooked needle.

Then, in the confines of convents, nuns carried the evolution one step further by using the chain stitch and hooked needle to make lacy needlework without a fabric base. It was not lace. The French called it "crochet en air"; crochet being French for hooked needle and the effect is certainly one of stitches in the air.

IN TALKING with Viola Sylbert recently, she explained that her modern mission is bringing excitement back to crochet and knitting patterns. Judging from the lively conversation around a display of Sylbert designs, that feat has been accomplished.

Ms. Sylbert, whose fashion design background includes furs, sweaters, raincoats and sportswear, has taken color and styling concepts from contemporary ready-to-wear and home furnishings and interpreted them into hand-knitting and crocheting. She said: "That's why it looks different from a lot of other knit and crochet designs."

Part of the "difference" is in the blend of different types of yarn in one item and the melding of off-beat colors that provide a great total look. There is also a sparkling combination of techniques. For example, a crocheted filet base was interwoven with four strands of colored yarn through each row of spaces for a startling effect. The fillip of interest in a rich-looking pillow top is a double strand of yarn wrapped around loose strands to create bow knots.

A series of shawls is romantic enough to have pleased the 19th century crochet artist, Mlle. Eleanore; yet meet 20th century fashion precepts. Tanktops, cardigans, camisoles, halters and pullovers could have been designed only for a modern miss and exemplify Ms. Sylbert's unique approach.

MS. SYLBERT has traveled extensively in Europe, keeping abreast of fashion developments. In Italy, France and the Scandinavian countries there is a longer history of technical skill, which has developed as a result of tradition and through apprenticeship. But, in this country, crochet and hand-knitting styling are becoming more innovative.

Del Pett Felman, who has developed crochet into dimensional art-forms, puts her finger on a very basic point for all women in her book, The Crocheter's Art: "The techniques of crochet are accessible to anyone and are endlessly applicable. Crochet is the manipulation of fiber with a hook. This is true, whether the result is a simple garment or a highly imaginative art form, or something in between. Emphasis on embellishment and simplicity of form are the two basic elements used to achieve different effects."

DESIGNER PATTERN

Draping hides under big bow

A lovely "moves-with-you" fluidity is seamed right into this bias design by master of shapery, Charles Kleibacker. Amazingly, there are only three main pattern parts — no sewing complications to Printed Pattern M303. There are no side seams — the fabric is swept gracefully to the back and gathered beneath the soft bow detail. See how the deep V-yoke extends to form tiny cap sleeves. Notice also, the square shape of the neckline in back. Sew it long or short for spring dinners and vacation dances in drapeable knits, crepe or shantung.

Printed Pattern M303 is available in misses sizes 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18. Size 12 (bust 34) requires 3 yards 60-inch fabric.

Please send $1.25 for Printed Pattern M303 to Independent Press Telegram, Pattern Department, P. O. Box 59, Old Chelsea Station, New York, N.Y. 10011. Slow pace of Denmark attractive

Fun-loving Denmark, so popular with tourists of all ages, extends a special welcome to senior citizens visiting Wonderful Copenhagen and the rest of the Fairytale Country.

It is no secret that too many Americans visiting Europe insist on seeing too many countries in too short a period of time. A better way is to concentrate on fewer countries and spend more time in each. You will get to know them all better and have more fun yourself.

The easy way is the right way to enjoy Denmark. Don't rush. Don't plan for more than one sightseeing tour a day. You can take a tour before lunch, and in the afternoon, sit at a sidewalk cafe and watch an exciting panorama of mothers and children on bicycles, red-coated mailmen and handsome Danish boys and girls as they saunter by.

IN TIVOLI GARDENS, you can stroll at leisure or sit on a bench while you watch pantomimes, ballets, concerts, variety acts and the beautiful garden scenery. Here is gaiety and excitement at a pace you can enjoy and the Danes want you to enjoy it as they do.

Scandinavian travel
Special

Seniors will find the whole pace of travel in Denmark a welcome change. For example, shopping for renowned Danish silver, china, furniture, textiles and furs is less rigorous.

You can get a comfortable shopper's eye-view of all the best in arts and crafts at Den Permanente and you can explore Copenhagen's main shopping street, Stroget, without being interrupted by vehicular traffic. No place on earth offers more possibilities for finding wonderful gifts for children and grandchildren than Copenhagen and at all price levels.

Copenhagen has become a very popular place for parking grandchildren while taking the long-wanted trip through Europe Grandpa and Grandma can come with children and grandchildren without the fear of being relegated to babysitting for the little ones. Plenty of competent, English-speaking babysitters are available.

SENIOR CITIZENS ENJOY PEACEFUL OLD TOWNS OF DENMARK

Good food is essential for true travel pleasure, whether you are on a diet or not. Denmark is one of the top food countries of the world with delightful restaurants from super de luxe to sandwich places and pastry shops where the delicacies make you hear the angels sing.

IF YOU LIKE to drive through a peaceful and beautiful countryside, Denmark is the place for you. The roads are excellent, the distances are short, and the scenery so picturesque and gentle that you never get tired from driving through the land that inspired Hans Christian Andersen to write his famous fairytales.

Denmark's excellent railways offer special reduced rates for senior citizens which give a great opportunity to see more of Denmark's lively provincial towns and lovely countryside.

Senior citizens feel at home in Denmark, a country that appeals to anyone who is young in spirit — young at heart.

DOWNTOWN Helsinki presents a busy scene of neat streets for trolley tour making loop in less than an hour. Tourist information is provided in four languages by tape recordings on board trolleys from May to September.

Finn summer brings early morning after

By STUART D. BYKOFSKY
Ridder News Service

HELSINKI — Finland counts 44 wars with Russia within memory. The Finns lost every one.

You might conclude Finland is easily defeated. Through Finnish eyes, history's misery proves instead Finland is not easily discouraged. Discouraging a Finn is like trying to burn down an igloo.

Finns have a word for their disposition — sisu, meaning an indomitable spirit; true grit.

Squeezed between Sweden to the west and Russia to the east, Finland's area is equal to Japan's, but its population — 4.6 million -- is less than half of Tokyo's.

Since one-third of the nation lies within the frozen wasteland of the Arctic Circle, Finns bunch like birch trees in the south of the country.

UNLIKE THEIR Nordic neighbors of Sweden, Denmark and Norway, Finns are not descended from Vikings. Their language has its roots in Finnougrian and is as distinctive as their delicacy of reindeer meat.

Some 580,000 people live in Helsinki, a capital of straight lines and clean angles bowing to the functionalism of Finnish design. The city is surrounded on three sides by the gulf of Finland, beyond which lies the Baltic.

Helsinki is not the most beautiful city in Europe, but it has a sense of scale. The city pulls together neatly, its lines free of skyseraping blisters. A $3 cab ride will get you anywhere in the downtown area, although it is more fun to walk.

There are few monuments or landmarks except for the downtown Senate Square — which is quite an exception. Built between 1852-55, the square is two-block plaza rimmed by yellowfaced government buildings and an impressive Lutheran Cathedral.

THE CHEAPEST sightseeing tour you can take costs 1 Finnmark, 20 pennis (less than 50 cents). It's a trolley that makes a large and complex loop of the downtown district in less than an hour.

There is a recorded "guide" that mentions points of interest along the way in four language, including English, from May 1 through Sept. 15.

Just a few blocks east of the trolley stop at Finlandia Hall there's the Trivallahti church, a breathtaking building literally sculpted out of rock in 1969 as if by God's hand. The sanctuary is slightly below ground level and is surrounded by rough rock walls 20 feet high. The ceiling is an enormous dome of copper, which is abundant in Finland.

Don't expect to find a single room in a first-class hotel for less than $20 a night. A better room will run $30, no meals included.

The budget traveler coming during the summer can get a good break by staying in university dorms vacated by Finnish students. (For more information about hotel and budget accommodations, write Harry Jarvinen & Associates, 500 Fifth Ave., New York City 10017.)

Meals are not cheap either. At the local equivalent of a snack shop, a small pizza of four slices costs about $4. Dinner prices are steeper still.

Perhaps if you're lucky you can win back some of what you spend on meals at the roulette wheels you find in some restaurants and night clubs.

NIGHT CLUBS are a must. They, too, are expensive. One of the best, the Aquarius in the Hesperia Hotel, charges a $5 cover, but once inside it's nonstop action — music, lights and companionship — until 2 a.m. As a matter of fact, Helsinki seems to have more swinging night spots than either Stockholm or Copenhagen.

There is something eerie about leaving a night club at 2 a.m. and getting back to your hotel in time to see light streaking the horizon. At the peak of summer, night lasts only five hours in Finland.

The temperature poked into the 70s when I was there in May — a heat wave for the Finns. Normally in the peak tourist months of June through September, temperatures range from the high 50s to the low 70s.

Only one thing remains — the Finns' beloved institution of the sauna. It's fun, it's healthy, but use it at your own risk.

If you spend enough time in its suffocating heat, you might have an attendant stroll in, see you slippery with sweat and joke:

"Ah, the sauna! When you're finished, you're Finnish!"

Linkers show Nordic films

World travelers Hal and Halla Linker of the television series "Three Passports to Adventure" will present a film on Halla's native Iceland at the Travel Festival sponsored by Freeman Travel Service in South Gate Municipal Auditorium, Saturday, April 10.

In traditional costume, Halla will introduce the Iceland film, to be followed by another Linker production covering the other Viking countries of Denmark, Sweden and Norway.

The festival will be held in three segments, beginning with a travel fair from 2 to 5 p.m. featuring exhibits by airline, cruise and tour companies, followed by a spaghetti buffet dinner until 7 p.m. when the Linkers will headline a program of films, music and dancing by a Maori group from New Zealand.

Reservations at $3 each are required for the buffet supper and must be ordered by April 1. Tickets will be available at $2 each for the evening performance only, or $4 for the commbination dinner and show.

Reservation forms and further information may be obtained by writing Freeman Travel Service, 8959 California Ave., P.O. Box 1906, South Gate, 90280.

Danish dishes take cake in Copenhagen

Copenhagen

Rainy days and a chill hint of winter. Copenhagen had an unusually long summer last year.

They left the famous Tivoli Gardens open past mid-September closing date. When we left they closed the gates. They won't open again until May 1.

Smorgasbord is what you come to Scandinavia for. In Denmark it's called Smorrebrod. There's more to it than being caught in a deli with a fork. The choice is staggering. Little pink shrimp. Lobsers, Crabs. Mussels. Caviar. Eels. Herring. Sardines.

All kinds of roast meats. Eggs deviled or curried. Horseradish and mustard in graduating strengths. Every kind of cheese. Fruit. Pastries and on and on.

You begin with fish. Danes are insistent about this. You get the idea you could be fined if you took anything else for openers

VERY IMPORTANT that you discard the fish dish and take a new one for followups. You take a fresh dish for each course. They can tell how you're doing by counting the dish stacks.

No doggie bags.

Danes think the best smorrebrod is served in the Central Railroad Station in Copenhagen. Crystal and silver gleaming on crisp white linen. Fresh flowers. Crusty antique waiters.

They tell you that 200 million people have gone through Tivoli Gardens' fairyland since it opened in 1843. It's a street fair feeling.

stan delaplane

Beer halls full of song and raised steins. Sidewalk cafes. Dance halls. Jugglers. Clowns.

Swans glide on the lake. Dance band music floats across the water. Fine restaurants blazing with great chandeliers. A wonderful old carousel spins slowly to the music of an antique calliope.

It's a music box world

THIS WAS a press weekend and the Danes pushed everything they could into three days and nights

The Scandinavian airline SAS has worked out an all included week in Denmark that is reasonable. Around $400 to $600.

But if you get off the package and go on your own, prices are stiff. The young group who adored wonderful, wonderful Copenhage, is being priced out.

Norway fjord tours

De luxe motorcoach tours of the Norwegian fjord country give passengers a picture of Norway 1,000 years ago. Modern villages now dot the fjord district, but the mountains and glaciers have changed little since the Viking days.

GOURMET menus provide food for thought on Royal Viking Sea.

SAIL THE VIKING WAY

To Canada and Alaska

By HERB SHANNON
I.P-T Travel Editor

Scandinavian smorgasbord will be one specialty among many on the menus of 2,400 meals served daily aboard the Royal Viking Sea on its 14-day Alaska-Canada cruise co-sponsored by Long Beach area travel agents and the Independent Press-Telegram.

Although the Norwegian-flag vessel will carry a maximum of only 500 passengers when it departs Los Angeles harbor on June 14, dining will be an around-the-clock adventure in international and American fare. From breakfast to midnight buffet the choice is virtually limitless.

On this journey to the unspoiled Pacific Northwest, IP-T readers will raise hearty appetites cruising the placid waters of Canada's Inside Passage and the spectacular beauty of Alaska's Glacier Bay. Extra meals can be squeezed in ashore during port stops at Victoria, Juneau, Skagway, Sitka, Prince Rupert Island, Vancouver and San Francisco before returning to Los Angeles June 28.

TWO LUCKY readers will win first class free passage aboard the Royal Viking Sea by claiming the Sweepstake Prize in the IP-T Grand Prix Race Game Contest. Winners will be named in mid-April, following 13 weekly drawings for a total of $7,800 in additional cash prizes.

Entry forms and details of the contest for 12 weekly $50 cash awards and the grand prize drawing will be found elsewhere in this edition.

Cost of the two-week IP-T cruise starts at $1,330 per person for an outside double stateroom. Full details and reservations may be obtained from any of the following participating travel agents:

In Long Beach: Brown's Travel, Aquarius Travel, Atlas Travel, Bixby Knolls Travel, Thomas Cook, Fenwick Travel, Martha Ford Travel, International City Travel, ITT Tours & Travel, Jack Kirkwood Travel, Los Altos Travel Service, Pierre Manon Travel, Nance Tours and Travel, Mr. Travel and Heller Travel.

Other area agencies include Bellflower Travel Service, Acme Travel, Dykema Travel, Holiday Travel Service, Alpha Beta Travel, World of Leisure Travel, Stevenson Travel Service, Cerritos Travel and Los Alamitos Travel.

Swedish American to operate Explorer ship

Lars Eric Lindblad and Swedish American Line have signed a new five-year contract for continued operation of the go-anywhere cruise ship M.S. Lindblad Explorer.

The former owners of the world cruisers Kungsholm and Gripsholm have been operators of the 92-passenger exploration cruise ship since 1972. Capt. Hasse Nilsson will remain in command as Senior Captain. The Lindblad Explorer has a 1976 schedule of 20 cruises.

Included this year are voyages to the Antarctic, Alaska and the Galapagos Islands. The ship already has made two trips to the Galapagos this season.

Scandinavian scene wealthy in culture

Besides a wealth of artistic treasures housed in conventional museum settings, besides programs of opera, ballet and symphony concerts performed in traditional halls, Scandinavia offers numerous opportunities for visitors to experience a truly intimate view of its cultural scene.

How often does one have a chance to hear the works of a great composer played on the piano on which they were composed, attend a performance of a Shakespearean tragedy on the very site on which it was laid, or listen to ageless fairytales read at the author's desk where they were first penned?

In Denmark, Finland, Norway and Sweden, with a little advance planning, you can be invited to these and other happenings which add a "you are there" quality to cultural experiences.

A few miles ride out of Bergen, Norway, for example, will bring you to Trollhaugen, the charming white and green frame house of composer Edvard Grieg. Beautifully situated on a knoll at the edge of Lake Nordas, the home is now a museum of furnishings and personal effects of Grief and his wife Nina, both of whom are buried on the grounds.

TROLLHAUGEN'S special treat during the summer months is the weekly schedule of piano concerts of Grieg's music played on the master's own piano. At other times of the year it's possible to arrange through Scandinavian Airlines for small groups to enjoy the same type of Grieg concert at the attractive old homestead.

In Denmark the fairytale village of Odense, home of famous storyteller Hans Christian Andersen, has paid tribute to its native son by carefully preserving the house where he was born and the humble cottage where he spent his childhood.

Andersen's desk, his manuscripts, notebooks and other possessions are displayed in the adjoining Hans Christian Andersen museum.

For a really dramatic Danish evening think about asking SAS to have a special performance of Shakespear's "Hamlet" staged for you and your friends at Kronborg Castle in Elsinore, just 25 miles from Copenhagen.

NEVER MIND that Kronborg was built some 600 years after the historical Hamlet lived; the Renaissance castle with its magnificent towers, porticoes and ramparts is indeed the one in which Shakespeare placed his Hamlet and is an impressive setting for a performance of the immortal drama.

The home of Finland's noted composer Jean Sibelius is another Scandinavian setting where visitors can immerse themselves in the romantic past. "Ainola," the homestead where Sibelius lived and worked during his adult years, is located less than 25 miles from Helsinki in peaceful, birch-forested countryside

Furnished with the same personal belongings as when Sibelius lived there in the early 1900s with his wife Aino and their three daughters, the home provided a serene background for renditions of Sibelius compositions on the piano at which he composed

For years summer visitors to Sweden have enjoyed performances of the Royal Opera and Ballet at intimate Drottningholm Court Theater located in Stockholm's archipelago. Built in 1766 as an annex to the Swedish Royal Summer Palace, the theater was the center of theatrical and musical life in Sweden during the late 18th century under Gustaf III, whose death marked the end of its most splendorous era.

REALTOR OF THE WEEK

BILL WATILO

Bill Watilo is a product of Long Beach Schools having been born in the area. He has his BA (1958) and MA (1959) from Cal State University at Long Beach, with graduate work at Occidental College and Univ. of So. Calif. Bill was a professional musician from 1949-52, playing with the Portland, Oregon and Utah Symphonies and he spent many years with the Long Beach Symphony. He taught public school music for 12 years in Bellflower, Long Beach, South Bay, and La Canada. In Long Beach he taught at Hamilton, Washington and Poly.

Bill entered into full time real estate in April, 1972 with J. J. Hunter Associates concentrating in residential sales and specifically in the Plaza area. He acquired his broker's license in April '74 and opened the doors of Watilo Real Estate in November, 1974.

The S.W. corner of Palo Verde & Willow has been purchased for the future construction of a one-man office. This location is the exact center of an area he services with newsletters and other materials (copies of which are now on file in the Consumer's corner of the El Dorado Library). Watilo Real Estate is at present in a temporary office at 3118 Los Coyotes Diagonal.

Bill's wife, Myrtle teaches 1st grade in the Long Beach District. His sons, Eric and Kirk attend City College and daughter, Elaine, attends Millikan High School.

Bill is a member of the local, state and national Realtor Associations. He serves on the Planning & Zoning committee and Education committee of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors.

IP-T GRAND PRIX RACE GAME RULES — READ CAREFULLY

SAVE THESE RULES FOR HANDY REFERENCE THROUGHOUT THE CONTEST

1. The contest will consist of 13 weekly games beginning Sunday, January 4, 1976. Participants will be required to determine the finishing order of ten race cars. Official entry blanks will be published on successive Sundays for each week's contest.

Each Sunday, contestants will be given the names and numbers of 30 race cars, plus an entry form. Then, on Monday thru Friday, puzzles will appear in these newspapers which, when solved, will show which cars finished in the first thru tenth place.

TO SOLVE THE PUZZLES: Each day, Monday thru Friday, two puzzles will indicate the finishing place of two race cars, the number of letters in the cars' names, plus the correct positioning of at least one letter in each name (e.g. T —). From the list of 30 cars, entrants must then properly determine the car's name that fits that particular blank. On any given day, more than one car name may fit a puzzle, but when all ten puzzles for the week are completed, there will be only one proper solution. It may be necessary at times to have the entire set of ten puzzles before the winning solution is apparent. No car's name will be used more than once in each set of weekly puzzles.

When all ten puzzles are completed, only one solution will give you the correct finishing order of the ten cars. Entrants will then place the correct car number on the cars shown on the entry form, to indicate which car finished first, second, and so on through 10th place.

2. HOW TO ENTER: Mail your completed race entry form, neatly trimmed, to:

Independent Press-Telegram
Grand Prix Race Game
P.O. Box 420
Long Beach, CA 90801

or hand deliver your entry form, enclosed in an envelope, to the Independent Press-Telegram main offices at 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach.

IMPORTANT: Across the end of the envelope, you MUST indicate the race number you are entering as shown in the sample to the right.

Each race course entry form will show the weekly contest deadline. All entries must be in the possession of the Independent Press-Telegram on or before that date. The Independent Press-Telegram cannot be held responsible for entries delayed or lost in the mails.

Individual contestants are limited to one entry per week. Only one entry may be enclosed in an envelope.

Do not mail in the Monday thru Friday puzzles. Only mail the Sunday race entry form.

It is not necessary to subscribe to or buy the Independent Press-Telegram to enter. Contestants may make hand-drawn copies of the official race entry form to enter. These must be legible and of the same size and style as those appearing in the newspapers. Entry forms reproduced by any mechanical or photographic means will not be accepted.

3. PRIZES: Weekly Cash Awards: The Independent Press-Telegram will award twelve cash prizes of $50.00 each week. The twelve weekly cash winners will be drawn at random from the total number of correct entries received for that week's contest.

Grand Prize: The Grand Prize winner will receive a Royal Viking 14-day Alaska Canada cruise for two aboard the Royal Viking Sea commencing June 24, 1976. The Grand Prize drawing will be held the week following the close of the weekly contests.

All weekly winners become eligible for the Grand Prize Drawing. In addition to all weekly winners, an additional 200 correct entries will be drawn from each week's contest to be included in the Grand Prize Drawing. No notification will be made of those drawn.

No substitute prizes will be awarded. Applicable federal, state, and other taxes imposed on any prize will be the sole responsibility of the prize winner.

All prize winners will be contacted by mail. When weekly cash winners' names are published in these newspapers, they will appear on the Wednesday following each contest deadline.

4. WHO MAY ENTER: The contest is open to anyone 18 years of age or older, except employees of the Independent Press-Telegram and members of their immediate families; employees of Knight-Ridder Newspapers, Inc., any of its affiliated companies and members of their immediate families, and Independent Press-Telegram distributors, and members of their immediate families.

5. JUDGING: The decisions of the contest judges will be final in all cases. Upon entering the contest, entrants agree to abide by all rules set forth here. Entrants not conforming to all rules shall be automatically disqualified.

6. The Independent Press-Telegram reserves the right to alter the contest rules or discontinue the contest at any time.

7. NO TELEPHONE INFORMATION REGARDING THE PUZZLES WILL BE GIVEN.

TRY THIS SAMPLE PUZZLE OF THE IP-T GRAND PRIX RACE GAME

From the list of car names, determine which name fits each blank. While more than one name may appear to fit some blanks, when completed there is only one possible solution. Each name can only be used once. Not all car names will be used.

34 EAGLE
95 TIGER	_ A _ _ _	1st place
23 DOVE	_ O _ _	2nd place
14 RAVEN	_ _ V _ _	3rd place
77 BOLD	_ _ _ D	4th place

Once you've determined which car finished in which place, all you must do is transfer that car's number to the entry form from the previous Sunday. The correct answers for this sample would be: 1st, Car # 34; 2nd place, Car # 23; 3rd place, Car # 14; 4th place, Car # 77.

Since, EAGLE, car # 34, was first place finisher, place # 34 in the white space of the first place car.

HOW TO ADDRESS YOUR ENTRY

Your entry must be in the possession of the Independent Press-Telegram no later than the deadline shown on the entry form. It must be enclosed in an envelope addressed as the example below. YOU MUST INDICATE WHICH RACE # YOU ARE ENTERING ON THE OUTSIDE OF THE ENVELOPE.

YOUR ENVELOPE SHOULD LOOK LIKE THIS:

TELEVISION LOG OF THE INDEPENDENT-PRESS-TELEGRAM AND THE EVENING NEWS

Role of Manson girl challenge to actress

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

NANCY WOLFE

Nancy Wolfe, a dark-haired young actress, majored in psychology at New York University, but she doesn't claim to understand the character she portrays in the upcoming TV movie "Helter Skelter."

She plays Susan Atkins, who was convicted with Charles Manson and other members of his "family" in the murders of seven persons on two successive nights in August 1969.

Nancy could study psychology for 50 more years and she still might not fully understand what makes such killers tick.

"I don't think anyone really understands such people," she told me at lunch the other day at the Scandia in Hollywood.

"Susan was amoral And she got sensual pleasure from the act of killing -- she said this, herself. But I couldn't explain how she got that way."

CBS will televise the four-hour movie in two parts, on the nights of Thursday, April 1, and Friday, April 2. For a while, there loomed the possibility that KNXT (Channel 2), the CBS station in Los Angeles, wouldn't carry the film, but the latest word is that it will.

The movie is based on the best-selling book "Helter Skelter: The True Story of the Manson Murders," by Vincent Bugliosi and Curt Gentry. Bugliosi was special prosecutor in the 1970 trial of the Sharon Tate-La Bianca murderers, and it's because he is now running for district attorney of Los Angeles County that a blackout of the film in this area was considered.

Bugliosi is portrayed by George Di Cenzo, and Manson is played by Steve Railsback.

Miss Wolfe's part as Susan Atkins is the biggest role she has ever had, but she told me she was reluctant at first to take it.

"Yes, I was afraid of possible reprisal from the Manson kooks," she said. "There's no telling what they might do."

Threats were received by several persons involved in the Lorimar Productions movie.

It was because she so admired the work of producer-director Tom Gries ("QB VII," "The Migrants," "The Glass House") that she finally decided to take the part, after more than a week of deliberating. One reading for the role was enough to convince Gries and casting director Bert Remsen that she was the one to play Susan Atkins.

Does Miss Atkins come across in the film as at all likable?

Replied Nancy: "I don't think the viewers will have much sympathy for her."

One of her most important scenes, she pointed out, is when Susan tells a jail cellmate about the Tate-La Bianca murders.

"The case might never have been solved if she hadn't talked about it." Nancy said. "She was in jail on another matter."

In the scene at the Hollywood Hills home of actress Sharon Tate, where Sharon and four others were killed. I am shown chasing a man named Frykowski with a knife in my hand, but I'm not shown stabbing him," the actress told me

"Susan is supposed to have been the one who cut up Sharon Tate, too, but it doesn't show that."

A second version of the movie was made for showing in theaters in Europe — a version with obscene language, some nudity and gore, according to reports. However, Miss Wolfe said she didn't participate in any scenes of violence or nudity.

"I didn't even have to shave my head, although some of the girls did," she said. "I just wore a skullcap."

What will the role in "Helter Skelter" mean to her career?

"I don't have the slightest idea," replied Nancy.

At 24, her only TV exposure to date has come in small parts in two dramas — "Journey From Darkness," which aired as a two-hour NBC movie in February 1975, and "Eric," a Hallmark Hall of Fame drama which was telecast on NBC last November.

In the former, she played the sister of a blind student (portrayed by Marc Singer) who is admitted to medical school, and in "Eric," which starred John Savage as a young man terminally ill with cancer, she played a nurse.

"I also have done a small part in a 'Baretta' episode that hasn't aired yet," Nancy said

The slender brunette, who is single and lives in Hollywood, grew up in New York City Her father is a doctor and her mother used to be a professional ballet dancer Nancy learned ballet as a youngster and has given dance concerts.

After graduating from a private high school in the Bronx (her family lived in the woodsy area of Fieldston in the Riverdale section of the Bronx), Nancy entered Mills College, in Oakland, at 16, and studied there for two years before transferring to NYU, where she earned a degree in psychology

She was active in drama at college and she studied with the noted Sandy Meisner at the Neighborhood Playhouse in New York for a couple of years.

Her father, for the past three years, has been working for the Jamaican government as a general practitioner, traveling around the country to serve the people's health needs. "I go down there once in a while and work with him in the clinics," said Nancy.

At the time of the Tate-La Bianca murders, Miss Wolfe recalled, she was on a tour of Europe. "It was a big story over there," she said.

"Just think, the Manson people come up for possible parole in a couple of years," she reminded me.

She appeared to shudder a bit as she said it

GEORGE DI CENZO plays prosecutor Vincent Bugliosi, and Steve Railsback portrays Charles Manson.

Fairy tales and baseball keep Danny Kaye busy

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

When Danny Kaye was in England to conduct the London Symphony Orchestra, a reporter asked him why didn't he make some more comedy films. His reply:

"Because movies are not like they used to be, times are not like they used to be, and, most of all, I am not like I used to be."

For the same reason, Kaye rejected the notion of a return to the London Palladium, where his postwar appearances made him something of a national hero.

"Sure, I could probably go back there and do the same routines and get a fine reaction," he said. "But it wouldn't be the same. There was something about that era that made it just right, and I would never be able to recapture what happened 20-25 years ago. It would be walking backwards.

"Likewise I don't want to go to Las Vegas; I've done that. Another television series? Those four years I did on CBS were among the most enjoyable of my life. But I wouldn't want to repeat. Nowadays I just want to do the things I want to do."

RIGHT NOW he is on a fairy tale kick. He recently taped a new version of "Peter Pan" in London, playing Captain Hook to Mia Farrow's Peter, with a score by Leslie Bricusse and Anthony Newley. The special has appeared in England and will be seen here at Christmas on NBC.

Kaye has been taping "Pinocchio" in Hollywood, not the gospel according to Walt Disney but a new interpretation from the Colladi classic. Danny is Gepetto, Sandy Duncan is the boy-puppet with the expanding nose. Also in the cast: Flip Wilson, Clive Revill, Liz Torres. CBS will telecast the special Saturday night, March 27.

"Who knows, this might start a series of fairy tales for me," Kaye speculated.

Baseball plays an important part in Kaye's future plans. He is part owner of an American League expansion team which will start playing in Seattle's new Kingdome in the spring of 1977. It's a natural adjunct to his ownership in radio stations in Seattle, Spokane and Portland and an outgrowth of his long-time devotion to baseball.

"THINK OF it," he marveled, "a guy who spent his youth watching the Dodgers play at Ebbets Field now owns his own baseball club. It's Walter Mitty time."

He's hoping to call the new club the Rainiers and he has his own ideas about what the operation should be: "Seattle is a major league city and this will be a major league team, but I would like the stadium to have a small-town feeling.

"I'd like to build up a family atmosphere at the games, and whoever dreamed up ladies' night and free bats for the kids had the right idea. I'd also like to see more cross-playing between the leagues. Fans miss a lot seeing only one kind of play. I'd like to bring the Los Angeles Dodgers and the Cincinnati Reds to Seattle for games."

KAYE'S other interests:

Conducting — "I've raised $4½ million for musicians' retirement funds, appearing with every major American symphony orchestra except Cleveland, and I think I'm scheduled there. And I can't read a note of music."

Flying — "I always remember what they told me in flight school: There are old pilots and there are bold pilots, but there are no old bold pilots."

Cooking — "Recently I cooked for three of the greatest chefs of France. How did I dare? They may know everything about French cookery but they don't know Chinese. So I made them a Chinese dinner."

UNICEF — "I still devote a great deal of my time to the United Nations children's fund. I just learned that I've been accepted by the Guinness Book of Records for my Halloween trip last year. I flew my own jet to 65 cities in five days, traveling 17,000 miles and speaking at each stop."

SANDY DUNCAN plays the title role and Danny Kaye plays the kindly woodcarver Gepetto in "Pinocchio," new musical version of the classic tale, which airs at 8 p.m. Saturday on Ch. 2.

DANNY KAYE ... as Gepetto in "Pinocchio."

The BIBLE Says

J. T. Smith

GOD'S SCHEME OF REDEMPTION NO. 12

As we discovered last week, the only way to have a New Testament church is to build it according to the apostolic model. But what is the apostolic model for the church? How may we be sure the church where we are worshipping is built according to the apostolic model?

The only way to know anything about the church in the days of the apostles is to go to the New Testament and read what they did in establishing congregations of God's people.

Elders, Deacons, and Members

Every local congregation of God's people is to have a plurality of elders, deacons, and members. At least, this is what they had in the church at Philippi, Phil.1:1. In the days of the apostles, congregations met without elders and deacons until men were scripturally qualified. Then when they were, there was a plurality of both elders and deacons in every congregation (Acts 14:23; 1 Timothy 3, and Titus 1). Qualifications are set forth in these passages that one must attain before he can be ordained as an elder or deacon. But notice also in these passages that every church had a plurality when men were qualified. There is nothing in the Bible about a preacher being the pastor or bishop. Unless the preacher meets the qualifications set forth in the above passages, he cannot even be one of the plurality that is to oversee the congregation — much less the only one.

God has authorized the elders to oversee the flock which is among them (1 Pet 5:2-3). However, they do not make laws for the people of God. They just see that the instructions God has given us in His word are carried out (Titus 1:9).

New Testament churches did not have earthly headquarters. In fact, the word "headquarters" is a combination of two words, "head" and "quarters" which signifies "the place where the head resides." But Christ is the head of His church (Col 1:18,23), and he resides in heaven. So, if you are a member of a church with an earthly headquarters, you are not a part of a church that is built according to the apostolic model.

Old Congressmen Never Die—They Just Become Lobbyists

WALTER SCOTT'S

Personality Parade

Want the facts? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Want informed opinion? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

Q. I have heard the rumor in Washington, D.C., that at one time or another the Gulf Oil Corp. bought up the entire U.S. Congress via illegal campaign contributions. Is that true? And if it is, why hasn't the Senate ethics committee done anything about it?—Michael Brown, Philadelphia, Pa.

A. A Gulf lobbyist for years made cash contributions, laundered through a Bahamas bank, to many Senators and Congressmen. Allegedly Sen. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington, former Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma, every member on the Senate Watergate committee except former Sen. Sam Ervin, and many other legislators were the recipients of Gulf Oil largesse. The Senate ethics committee, chaired by Sen. Howard Cannon of Nevada, claims to be "conducting an in-depth investigation of these allegations." Gulf did not buy up "the entire U.S. Congress." That's an exaggeration. But the corporation surely made illegal contributions to many.

Q. Benny Goodman has been married to the sister of John Hammond, the man who discovered Billie Holiday, Bob Dylan and other musicians, since 1942. My question: To whom was Alice Hammond married before she married Benny Goodman?—Ed Halper, Greenwich, Conn.

A. Alice Hammond was previously married to Arthur Duckworth, a Conservative member of the British Parliament.

WIFE ALICE HAMMOND AND BENNY GOODMAN

Q. Can you tell me, please, how old Bess Truman and the Duchess of Windsor are?—Charlotte Cohen, Buffalo, N.Y.

A. Bess Truman is 91; the Duchess of Windsor is 80.

Q. Was Richard Nixon ever blackmailed by J. Edgar Hoover over an alleged love affair he had with a Chinese beauty in Hong Kong? I read about it in a Jack Anderson column.—R.E., Escondido, Cal.

A. Hoover tacitly blackmailed many Congressmen and Senators with scandalous or derogatory information picked up by his agents, which in a sense he held over the legislators, but there is no evidence about Nixon and any Chinese beauty. Richard Nixon was never a ladies' man.

COPPOLA

McQUEEN

Q. It is difficult for me to believe, but I read recently that Francis Ford Coppola, director of "Godfather I and II," offered Steve McQueen $3 million for three weeks of work in his new film, "Apocalypse Now." Can this be so?—Nancy Warren, Chevy Chase, Md.

A. It is not so. Coppola offered McQueen $1.5 million to star in the film which has a 16-week production schedule in the Philippines. McQueen countered with a demand for $1.5 million in salary and an additional $1.5 million after the film was released. On second thought McQueen decided that he did not want to stay on location in the Philippines for four months and would prefer a lesser role, one that would call for only three weeks on location. According to Coppola, "Steve still wanted the same money."

Coppola, mindful of the fact that McQueen had received $2 million for his work in "Papillon," decided that no actor was worth $3 million for three weeks of work and called a halt to the negotiations.

Since the Hollywood studios stopped signing young players and developing them into stars, those actors who have reached the top rung can pretty much call their own salaries and profit percentages. Actors like Jack Nicholson, Marlon Brando, Paul Newman, Steve McQueen, Gene Hackman, Charles Bronson, even James Caan, now demand and get a minimum of $1 million a film.

Q. Actress Glenda Jackson, who won two Oscar film awards, was recently divorced by her husband, film director Roy Hodges. Why?—L. F., Jamaica, N.Y.

A. Because of her adultery with a stage lighter, Andy Phillips. Miss Jackson, 39, agreed to pay the costs of the divorce hearing, which lasted three minutes. She and her ex-husband were granted joint custody of their six-year-old son, Daniel.

Q. Robert Foster Bennett, son of Wallace Bennett, Republican Senator from Utah—is he really the "Deep Throat" character in "All the President's Men"?—F.L. Peterson, Salt Lake City, Utah.

CANDIDATE BIRCH BAYH AND WIFE MARVELLA

Q. Is it true that Presidential hopeful Birch Bayh was the only member of his law school class to flunk the Indiana bar exam? And isn't Senator Bayh regarded in the Congressional cloakrooms as an intellectual lightweight and womanizer?—Donald H. Crosby, Mansfield Center, Conn.

A. Senator Bayh flunked the bar exam on his first try, then passed it, not an unusual sequence of events. As to how he is regarded by his fellow Senators—beauty lies in the eyes of the beholder.

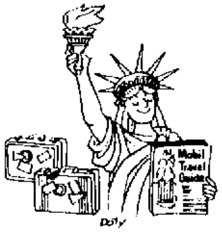
Observations



Itchy feet. Warmer weather and the Bicentennial year are making for an America on the move. Philadelphia, for example, is expecting 19 million visitors. Washington expects 17 million or so, with Colonial Williamsburg and Boston also ready for big crowds. Disney World and Miami Beach are among more traditional vacation spots anticipating a heavy influx.

The moral? Plan ahead, reserve early, and, this year more than ever, pick up a copy of the Mobil Travel Guide. It includes special listings of Bicentennial events, with the usual tips on rooms and restaurants.

Ouch! In the first nine months of 1975, the worldwide income tax bill of the 29 largest oil companies exceeded $30 billion—almost double the amount paid two years ago, according to the Chase Bank. In fact, more than three-quarters of their pre-tax income went to pay income taxes. On the other hand, the companies invested more than $2 for every $1 in profits for capital expenditures and the search for new oil. That took some sizable borrowing—which will have to be repaid out of future earnings. Those earnings, of course, will be taxed . . . oh well, you get the idea by now.

Spring in your step: key in your pocket. With spring in the air and spirits rising, auto thieves are also beginning to stir. That's the word from the National Automobile Theft Bureau, which offers an easy way to reverse the trend. About 14 percent of the million or so cars stolen each year have the keys in their ignitions. So put the keys in your pocket, and let the thief do the walking.

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

LIBBY HOWIE

Female Auctioneer

An attractive 24-year-old, Libby Howie, has become the first woman auctioneer in Sotheby's 232-year history. Sotheby's is one of England's oldest and most respected art auction houses.

A few weeks ago, in her debut, Libby auctioned off $35,000 worth of prints in two hours. As the sale drew to a close, the customers broke into spontaneous applause for Libby. She had controlled the bidding in friendly but expert fashion, opening up in the process a whole new field for members of her sex, including possibly Caroline Kennedy who is taking an art course of sorts at Sotheby's.

Sex Education Needed

A survey of sex and birth control knowledge and practices among high school students in a large Northeastern city reveals that "at last intercourse, 55 percent of the boys used no contraceptive, or relied on withdrawal or their partner's douching. Half of the sexually experienced boys had begun sexual activity before the age of 13. . . .

"Clearly sex education programs offered in high school come too late for these youths. Sex education should be offered in junior high schools, and birth control programs should reach out to the younger male as well as female adolescents."

The survey was reported on by Madelon and David Finkel in an article, "Sexual and Contraceptive Knowledge, Attitudes and Behavior of Male Adolescents," in the November/December 1975 issue of "Family Planning Perspectives."

Flying Geography

Traditional high school geography courses have taken a nosedive in popularity during the last 15 years. But one Northern California school has come up with a novel way to stimulate student interest in the subject.

In a six-week course, "Flying Geography," students of Woodland High School in Woodland, Cal., take hour-long flights over the Sacramento area. During the flights, kids are quizzed by a teacher on natural land formations, Lake Tahoe, the San Andreas fault, and on patterns of land use, including agriculture and urbanization along the Sacramento River.

The course, given for the past two summers, is so popular that the kids' parents requested that it be given in adult education last spring, says Vice Principal Howard Delp.

"The kids told us the course put a lot of meaning into maps," Delp explains.

Although many colleges have used aerial field trips to bolster geography studies, only "a handful" of high schools have tried this approach, says William Elam, executive director of the National Council for Geographic Education.

But, says Elam, creative courses like Woodland's and a renewed interest in the environment may give a spurt to the study of geography in the next few years.

Increasingly, he says, high schools are discovering that geography involves more than just reading flat maps and reciting the names of state capitals. "Problems of pollution and land use are all part of geography," he says. The subject "encompasses anything man does to alter the environment."

Stop Killing Each Other

How do most Americans between the ages of 15 and 25 die? They die in automobile crashes, with at least half the deaths alcohol-related.

Do not drink or smoke pot and drive anywhere. Spend the night at a friend's home and sleep it off.

If you are hosting a party and a guest has had too much to drink, insist that the guest spend the night rather than drive drunk.

The Youths Highway Safety Advisory Committee, Box 1969, Washington, D.C. 20013, has begun advertising in college newspapers. "Stop Driving Drunk," the ad implores, "Stop Killing Each Other."

Up and Out

In Great Britain there are 150 young people each earning $300,000 a year or more in the pop music industry.

The single biggest earner is Elton John, whose records and concerts have grossed $60 million in the past 15 months.

Following John in popularity are Paul McCartney, Led Zeppelin, Pink Floyd, The Who and The Rolling Stones.

As soon as a young Briton strikes it rich, a lawyer or investment adviser suggests that he or she establish residence in some country other than Britain.

The top tax rates in Great Britain have become astronomical--83% on earned income, 98% on unearned income.

The result is a growing army of young tax exiles: Ringo Starr, Mick Jagger, writer Frederick Forsyth, heavyweight boxer Joe Bugner—practically every leading young achiever in music, athletics, drama and literature.

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

by LLOYD SHEARER

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN

THE LISTS George Bush, new director of the Central Intelligence Agency, is problem-laden. One of his major problems concerns the exposure of CIA agents throughout the world.

In the past few months lists of alleged CIA agents, in many cases with their addresses, phone numbers, and cover titles, have been published in France, England, Spain, The Netherlands, Italy, Germany, Sweden, Norway and Finland.

In Bonn, a little-known weekly newspaper, "Information Service," published the names of 15 persons it said are CIA agents. In Athens, it was the publication of the name of Richard Welch, CIA station chief at the American Embassy, that led to his senseless assassination. In Italy, "Expresso," the newsmagazine, listed 28 names, including nine women. In The Hague, the weekly "Vrij Nederland" printed seven names, including one woman. In France, "Liberation," the left-wing daily founded by Jean-Paul Sartre, blew the cover of the CIA station chief and others. In London, CIA personnel at the U.S. Embassy have been widely publicized for some time.

Why are so many people in so many countries against the CIA?

Largely because for years the CIA has interfered in their governments. Take Italy. Since 1948 the CIA has paid approximately $74 million to Italian politicians, most of it to Premier Aldo Moro's Christian Democrats. All Italian premiers have been Christian Democrats since 1945. In the 1972 general election, the CIA paid out $9 million to various Italian center-left parties on the insistence of Graham Martin, U.S. Ambassador to Rome, although the then CIA station chief in Rome strongly objected.

NEW CIA DIRECTOR GEORGE BUSH AND WIFE BARBARA

In short, one job of the CIA has been to support governments the U.S. liked and help destroy governments the U.S. did not.

What right has the CIA got to do this? How would we like it if the Shah of Iran contributed millions of dollars to elect Ronald Reagan President of the U.S. and additional millions to defeat Gerald Ford or vice versa?

The CIA is absolutely necessary to collect intelligence, but bribing politicians in a foreign country in order to negate the will of the voters -- that may very well be classified as dirty pool, a game prompting anger, revenge and exposure by the victims.

George Bush is going to find it tough to restructure the cover apparatus of his CIA agents. How many will have to be transferred, how many will have to be given new identities, how many will have to be "buried" in corporations--all of these are his problems.

Most of all, how is he going to prevent terrorists, patriots, Socialists, Communists, nationalists, friends as well as enemies from publishing future lists of CIA agents abroad?

GAMBLING FAILURE One of the most plush gambling casinos in the world is the Metro Club on the 26th floor of the Grand Hotel in Las Vegas.

Equipped with a French gourmet restaurant, a cocktail lounge, a special band, it is designed as a gambling retreat for the super-rich. Membership is by invitation only. The minimum bet at the roulette and dice tables is $50, the maximum $2000.

The Metro Club is the pet project of Kirk Kerkorian, majority stockholder of MGM, which owns the Grand.

The club was opened Dec. 28, 1975, attracted some of the country's highest rollers and half a dozen Arab sheiks. When word of the sheiks leaked out, the hotel fired Harvey Diederich, its public relations chief and one of the most widely admired hotel executives in Las Vegas. Kerkorian wanted everything about the Metro Club to remain super-secret.

Apparently people who gamble for high stakes want publicity as much as they do privacy. Because now the Metro Club is closed. Hotel officials say the closing is only temporary, but in Vegas the word is that it's permanent. The Kerkorian concept of super-secret gambling for the super-rich is not operative, particularly in Las Vegas, to which people come not for snob appeal but to be seen and partake in the ambiance of excitement and anything-goes.

TOURIST ATTRACTION Skorpios, the Greek island purchased by the late Aristotle Onassis, on which he was married to Jackie Kennedy and where he now lies buried, has become a tourist attraction.

The Ionian fishermen are charging a pretty drachma to ferry tourists to Skorpios where they point out the Onassis burial site. The tourists who are most curious are the Americans.

NAVAL OFFICER JOHN F. KENNEDY

CLUSTER ON KENNEDY

"I didn't know anything about Jack Kennedy's sex life," says Alvin Cluster. "In fact, for the seven months I knew him out in the South Pacific, he had no sex life. But I do know plenty about his seamanship. And I can tell you, Jack Kennedy was a damn good Naval officer. He was a good navigator. He was an excellent leader. He was a good boat-handler. His men liked and respected him. And he was courageous.

"I remember one time when the Japanese were shooting us up pretty good. I decided to convert some of our patrol boats into gunboats. Kennedy literally worked around the clock with his crew, armoring his boat. And then he started running that boat up through the Northern Solomons. And he took plenty of enemy fire; so much fire, in fact, that some of his men came to me and said, 'This guy Kennedy is too damn courageous.'

"I'm not going to get into any arguments," says Cluster, a tall, husky, handsome, gray-haired personnel expert who was commander of Motor Torpedo Squadrons 2 and 3 out in the Solomon Islands in World War II, "with writers who want to comment on Kennedy's seamanship or lack of courage. But I knew him firsthand, saw him in action, knew him under fire. I know how his men felt about him, and I can tell you he had guts and heart and humor.

"In August, 1943, after his PT-109 was sunk, he insisted upon staying out in the Pacific. There was an unofficial rule back then--if your boat got sunk you got a transfer back to the States. We transferred some of Kennedy's crew. But he wouldn't go.

"Don't let anybody sell you short on Lt. (jg) John F. Kennedy. He was as good an officer as we had in the U.S. Navy. I was his commanding officer, and we had plenty of political arguments, because I was a Republican. But he saved my bacon one night on PT-48 when we damned near sunk, and for my money, a more courageous guy never lived."

CHINESE LAUNDRYMEN

There are approximately 150 Chinese laundrymen in the British Navy. They are recruited in Hong Kong. They live aboard the British ships, sleep in bunks over their washing machines, prepare their own food in the ships' galleys.

These Chinese workers launder shirts for 20 cents each and trousers for 15 cents. They also repair clothes, press suits, and do other odd jobs such as barbering and shirt-making.

They are recruited through agencies in Hong Kong, spend up to 30 months on any one ship.

The practice of employing Chinese laundrymen began in the British Far East fleet many decades ago and spread as the Far East fleet was eventually transferred to the Atlantic and Mediterranean.

NON-ALCOHOLIC BEER

The Moslem religion prohibits its believers from drinking alcohol, which of course rules out beer.

But now the Moslems of Saudi Arabia are about to get their daily ration of beer--only it's a non-alcoholic beer especially brewed for them by a Yorkshire brewery.

Several months ago a Saudi businessman approached Dr. Richard Theakston of the well-known British brewery of the same name at a trade fair in Cologne, Germany. Saudi Arabia, he suggested, was interested in importing a non-alcoholic beer. "At the moment," he explained, "our people drink fruit juices, lemonade, colas, mineral water, soft drinks of all types. But what they want is a drink with a taste of hops."

Beer is traditionally made from a mixture of hops and malt which is fermented with yeast. The non-alcoholic beer brewed for the Saudis will be made without the yeast. Instead the mixture of malt and hops will be pasteurized.

COOK ANGELA BADDELEY AND BUTLER GORDON JACKSON IN 'UPSTAIRS, DOWNSTAIRS'

THE PERFECT BUTLER

Gordon Jackson, 52-year-old Scottish actor, son of a Glasgow printer, has become one of the most recognized celebrities in London.

And with good reason. Jackson is the actor who plays Hudson, the perfect butler in "Upstairs, Downstairs," one of the most popular TV series ever released in Great Britain and the U.S. Last year the Royal TV Society voted him the best actor of 1975.

For an actor, Jackson is a surprisingly modest man. "Having worked in a well-received television program," he says in his soft Scottish accent, "doesn't mean I'm a star or a great actor. I'm just an ordinary bloke who has to keep acting to support a wife, two teen-aged sons, and a house in Hampstead.

"One of my worries is that the Hudson part will typecast me as the perennial butler. I hope not. Another constant worry which plagues me is that I'll forget my lines. I spend hours in my back bedroom going over and over them. I'm what they call a nervous performer. I don't mind the rehearsing and the preparation, but the actual performance truly terrifies me.

"The late Angela Baddeley [Mrs. Bridges], on the other hand, relished the shooting days. I fear them. It's like going to my own execution."

Members of the "Upstairs, Downstairs" cast claim that Jackson on camera is a perfectionist but that in real life he's not at all the pompous, pious Hudson he plays. They say he's a down-to-earth, mild-mannered man who suffers from a nervous stomach.

"When I think," Jackson says, "that 'Upstairs, Downstairs' is being watched by some 300 million people throughout the world--that makes me more nervous than ever."

Old Congressmen Never Die—They Just Become Lobbyists

by Jack Anderson

William Minshall, who served 10 terms as a Representative from Cleveland, is one of the many Congressmen and Senators who leave office only to return to Capitol Hill as lobbyists

WASHINGTON, D.C

It happened last year. The House was engaged in solemn debate over which contractor would build America's fighter plane of the future. For the victorious manufacturer, the vote would be worth billions.

The speeches, nevertheless, were humdrum. Congressmen shuffled in and out. Some barged off with harried looks. Others lingered, listening.

Outside, silver-haired William Minshall waylaid the Congressional commuters as they arrived or departed. He would reach for each Congressman's hand, throw a friendly arm around his shoulder and whisper urgently into his ear.

Minshall had a message from the Northrop Corp. Apparently, members were impressed with his pitch, for when the two-bell alarm summoned them for the final roll call, they gave Northrop an unexpected 60-vote victory.

Minshall is one of those rare birds called Lame Ducks Emeritus. They are former Congressmen who do not fly home after their defeat but stay to feather their nests on Capitol Hill.

More dignity as lawyers

Most roost in the law firms around Washington. There is more dignity influencing votes as lawyers than as lobbyists.

But whether they call themselves attorneys, consultants, public relations people or Washington representatives, a growing number of ex-Congressmen remain in Washington. Sadly, if not surprisingly, they can earn more serving the private interests than the public interest.

A term or two in Congress is great training for the pressure business. Former members of Congress speak the raucous language of Capitol Hill and understand the intricacies of political dealing; they share the legislators' distrust of reform.

More important, their past membership gives them easy access to their former colleagues. They may buttonhole legislators directly on the Senate and House floors, unless they have special interest in a specific bill being debated. They are admitted, too, to the exclusive dining areas where the members eat.

Gardening is a matter of good sense and good seed.

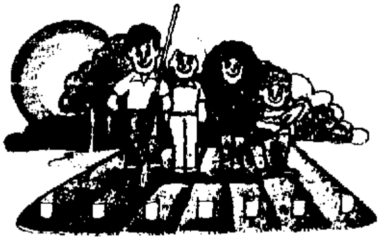
Ferry-Morse will help you with both.

There's a lot of you between seeding and eating. A lot of digging. Watching. Watering. Weeding. It takes some good common sense and good seed to turn your labors into crisp lettuce, fresh carrots, radishes and juicy cucumbers.

We at Ferry-Morse supply more seeds to professional and amateur growers than anyone else in America. We'd like to help show you how you can grow a better garden by using your good sense and our good seed.

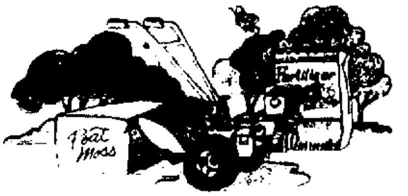
Read your yard

It has something to tell you. Look for the spot where things grow best. Grass. Weeds. Anything. If it's not in shade and not in a soggy drainage area, it's probably a good spot for your garden. Because things are already growing there naturally. Remember, your house or shrubs can make a good windbreak.



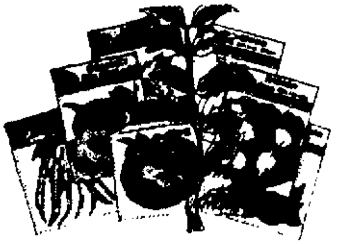
Make it family size

Small families don't need large gardens. Plan the size to fit your family. Keep a record of the amounts you harvest. You'll have a better idea next year of what it will take to keep your family supplied.



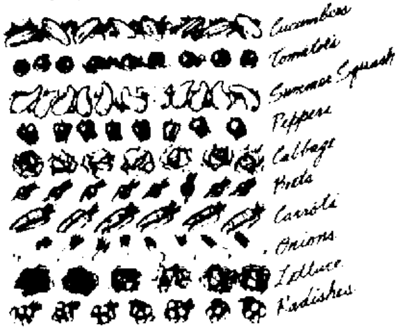
How to spread it on

Make sure your seeds have a good nourishing start in life. Mix peat moss or mulch with the soil. Use a 5-10-5 fertilizer. Four pounds to 100 sq. ft. is a good measure.



Mighty plants do not from weak seeds grow

Seeds are sort of like people. Strong, healthy parents have strong, healthy children. We at Ferry-Morse have spent years developing strains of hearty seeds, resulting in delicious vegetables and beautiful flowers. Follow our instructions carefully, always planting your seeds by hand.



What should go where

Here's a guide showing how a lot of vegetables can get along together in a 10x15 area. It's arranged so that tall plants don't shade shorter plants. Always plant vine crops at the edge of the garden so they can spread into your yard. Plant perennial crops together so they won't interfere with cultivation of annual crops.

Put a watch on the water

One inch of water is a good soaking for a garden. The first time you water, set out a container marked at one inch. Time how long it takes to reach the mark. Then, water for that length of time after that. One good watering every week should be sufficient.

Be cruel to weak plants

If a plant looks sick, don't nurse it. Pull it out. It may be diseased. It could affect the plants around it. It's best to get rid of it before it does any damage.

Blast those bugs

If you see bugs on your plants, don't wait until you've selected the proper insecticide. Knock 'em off. Pick 'em off. Spray 'em off with water. Be careful not to damage the plants, but don't give bugs another day or two of dining on your hard work.

Read it...and reap

Here's the top to the Ferry-Morse seed display. A display that's in thousands of food, hardware, variety, department, and garden supply stores across America. Look for it when you buy your seeds. You'll be starting your garden with Ferry-Morse. Good seed to go with your good gardening sense.

It's all in the book

Our new Home Garden Guide has all the helpful details to get you started and carry you successfully through the gardening season. Get the 48-page, lavishly illustrated guide wherever Ferry-Morse seeds are sold. Only 98¢.

Legislators who stayed to lobby

ROGER ZION

WAYNE ASPINALL

JOSEPH TYDINGS

CHARLES GUBSER

ANDREW BIEMILLER

FRANK IKARD

CRAIG HOSMER

LOBBYISTS CONTINUED

The legislators-turned-lobbyists often specialize in influencing the committees upon which they formerly served. This brings us back to William Minshall, a proper, well-tailored Republican who represented the Cleveland suburbs for 20 years.

He became the No. 1 Republican on the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee, which gave him insight into Pentagon spending and contracting. He learned to shake the military money tree into corporate coffers.

This is a talent worth a lot to those in the great corporate scramble for defense dollars. When Minshall retired from the House in 1974, therefore, he did not return home to Lakewood, Ohio. Instead, he joined the latest flock of Lame Ducks Emeritus and formed a consulting firm, Congressional Associates. Northrop eagerly retained him.

High tolerance

Members of Congress, perhaps because they foresee the day when they, too, might want to capitalize on their connections, are outrageously tolerant of former colleagues who now lobby. The last time any objections were raised about ex-Congressmen lobbying on the House floor was back in 1945. Then Speaker Sam Rayburn barred them from the floor and cloakrooms when the House was considering legislation affecting their clients.

Thirty years later, the corridors of Congress literally swarm with former members shamelessly plumping for clients. Frequently, the erstwhile legislators ignore the few rules that are supposed to regulate their lobbying.

Few are as blatant as ex-Rep. Roger Zion (R., Ind.), who, after a drubbing at the polls in 1974, used his official stationery to offer his services for hire. For the right price, he notified prospective clients, they could buy entrée to Capitol Hill.

Promising his contacts

"Since I will continue to be active in the Congressional prayer breakfast group, in the House gym, the members' dining room and on the House floor," he wrote, "I will maintain contact with my good friends who affect legislation."

He had the right connections, he promised, to "unravel red tape, open doors, make appointments, work with the Administration or government agencies, influence legislation and assist in any other consulting service."

Several clients rushed to retain the bald, brash Zion, including Credithrift Financial, a $300-million-a-year installment financing operation.

Former House Interior Chairman Wayne Aspinall (D., Colo.), whose antipathy to environmental legislation cost him his House seat in 1972, returned afterward for the stripmining debate. He appeared in the reduced status of a representative for AMAX, Inc., a large mining firm, but he had not lost his imperious manner. With extraordinary gall, he summoned a page to deliver a message to Speaker Carl Albert.

It was against even the relaxed rules for Aspinall, as a mining representative, to hobnob on the House floor during the stripmining debate. He assured my associate Jack Cloherty that he was not lobbying, merely paying a friendly visit.

He dispatched the page to explain this to the Speaker, said Aspinall. But other Congressmen on the floor had the impression that Aspinall was quietly pushing AMAX's views on stripmining.

Ex-Sen. Joseph Tydings (D., Md.) pulled strings for a law client who had a problem with the General Services Administration; he got a former colleague, Sen. John Tunney (D., Cal.), to fire off a hot letter to the GSA.

"You have refused recently on several occasions," complained Tunney, "to even see Mr. Tydings personally or talk to him on the telephone." Tunney solved the problem, therefore, by asking all of Tydings' questions in the four-page letter. The case is now in litigation, Tydings told my associate, Bob Owens.

Another who adroitly changed to influencer, ex-Rep. Charles Gubser (R., Cal.), recently appeared before a House Banking Subcommittee to call for the gutting of the Renegotiation Board, a government instrument that tried to prevent defense profiteering.

It turned out that the board had sought to retrieve some excess profits from an electronics firm that then hired Gubser to intervene with his former colleagues. He assured them solemnly that the public needed no protection from the kindly weapons makers but rather that the defense contractors needed protection from cumbersome bureaucracy. Of course, Gubser had more friends on the subcommittee than did the Renegotiation Board.

A question of power

From legislator to lobbyist might seem a step down. But many ex-Congressmen wield more power as behind-the-scenes manipulators. Ex-Rep. Andrew Biemiller (D., Wis.), for example, was merely a liberal Democratic voice from the back row during his two House terms. But as the AFL-CIO's chief lobbyist, he became a power.

Fifteen years ago, Rep. Frank Ikard (D., Tex.) was a low-ranking member of the House Ways and Means Committee, a small voice for oil privileges. Then he resigned to head the American Petroleum Institute. Now he is a big voice for oil privileges.

Rep. Craig Hosmer (R., Cal.) was an obscure member of the House who once called on the Air Force to drop voodoo dolls on the North Vietnamese to spook them into unconditional surrender. Now, as a lobbyist for the Nuclear Energy Council, he is organizing a formidable lobby of utility company executives throughout the country, instructing them in the fine art of influencing legislation. When a key vote comes on nuclear energy, he will pass the word to the executives to put their training to use.

It is the financial lure, however, that attracts most Congressional retreads into the influence trade.

Sen. George Smathers (D., Fla.) put it bluntly. "A person with my background," he said, "can make more money in 30 days [as a lobbyist] than he can in 15 years as a Senator."

Smathers, heeding his own counsel, quit the Senate to become a lobbyist now representing the Association of American Railroads, Pennzoil, the Chicago Board of Trade and the American Horse Council.

He is effective. Retained by a Washington real estate firm, Smathers got the legislative branch to do what the executive branch would not do—rent office space for $2 a square foot above the going rate.

Personal stake

Congress is loath to discipline the men who once served in it. Most members have an interest in keeping lobbying wide open—when the voters toss them out, they can always make a comfortable living as Potomac pitchmen.

Meanwhile, legislation continues to be shaped as much by the hidden influences as by the public debates. Occasionally, a conscientious Congressman, like the late Joseph Resnick (D., N.Y.), cries out in frustration: "Who runs Congress, the people or the lobbyists?" It is an interesting but perhaps foolish question.

Something for smokers to think about.

There are cigarettes and there are cigarettes. And if you're a smoker you certainly know by now which brand you really enjoy smoking.

So what makes us think we'll ever get a crack at switching you?

Well, we're going to try.

A lot of cigarette smokers smoke menthol. But they're probably just as concerned about the 'tar' and nicotine stories that all cigarette smokers have been hearing these days.

Frankly, if a cigarette is going to bring you flavor, it's also going to bring you smoke. And where there's smoke, there has to be 'tar.' In fact, in most cigarettes, the more flavor, the more 'tar.' Except for Vantage.

You must know that Vantage cigarettes have a special filter which reduces 'tar' and nicotine without destroying flavor.

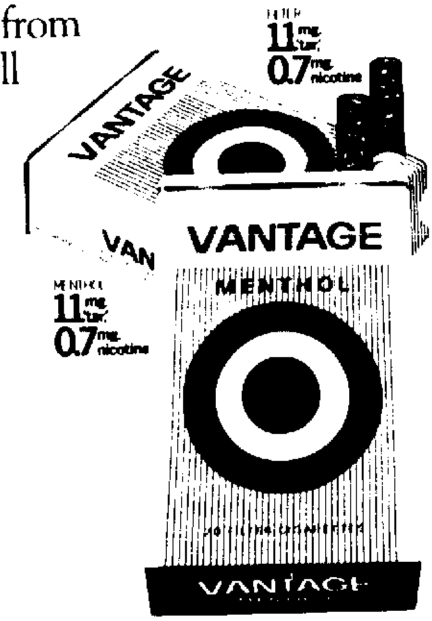
What you may not know is that Vantage is also available in menthol.

Not surprisingly, what separates Vantage Menthol from ordinary menthols is that Vantage Menthol gives you all the flavor you want, with a lot less of the 'tar' and the nicotine that you probably don't want.

Now Vantage Menthol is not the lowest 'tar' and nicotine menthol you'll find. It may well be the lowest one you'll enjoy smoking.

Since you're the best judge of what you like about menthol cigarettes, don't just take our word for it.

Try a pack of Vantage Menthol and then you'll know for sure.



Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

STERLING SILVER CAMEOS ILLUSTRATED ACTUAL SIZE

Issued on the occasion of the 20th anniversary of John F. Kennedy's Pulitzer Prize winning book "Profiles in Courage."

A STRICTLY LIMITED EDITION.
LIMIT: ONE PROOF SET PER PERSON.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MUST BE POSTMARKED
BY MARCH 31, 1976.

Twenty years ago, a young U.S. Senator named John F. Kennedy wrote a book which he called "Profiles in Courage." In this book, he spoke eloquently of the courage and patriotism of a handful of Americans who–in the face of disastrous consequences to their lives and careers–stood firm in their convictions to do what was right for their country.

John F. Kennedy's "Profiles in Courage" inspired millions of men, women and children, and was so highly regarded in the literary world that it was awarded the coveted Pulitzer Prize.

Now, on the occasion of the 20th anniversary of publication of this extraordinary book, The Franklin Mint–America's largest and foremost private mint–is proud to announce the issuance of a very special commemorative. The Profiles in Courage Cameo Collection.

A unique tribute to the ideals of courage

This commemorative collection will take the form of nine finely sculptured portrait cameos, to be minted both in solid sterling silver and in 24 karat gold.

Each cameo will portray one of the great men of courage singled out by John F. Kennedy in his prize-winning book. Among them: John Quincy Adams, whose support of the embargo against Great Britain branded him a "deserter" by members of his own Federalist party in Massachusetts. Daniel Webster, who abandoned his only hope of becoming President of the United States by his stand on the extension of slavery. Thomas Hart Benton, who broke with his own party and his closest friends to support the Union. Edmund G. Ross, who sacrificed a brilliant political career to save President Andrew Johnson from certain impeachment. Robert A. Taft, who incurred the wrath of politicians and the public alike for his determined stand on the Nuremberg Trials.

The collection will also include a cameo portrait of John F. Kennedy himself, a man whose own courage in battle and in political life was demonstrated many times over during his brief lifetime.

Nine portrait cameos depicting men of remarkable dedication and personal courage–permanently commemorated in the enduring strength and beauty of precious metal.

Exquisitely detailed cameos

Each of the cameos in this collection will be totally faithful to the personality and character of the figure portrayed. The profile portrait will be created in bas-relief with meticulous attention to detail. Moreover, the cameo itself will be dome-shaped, adding to its beauty and uniqueness.

The master craftsmen of The Franklin Mint will strike these authentic portrait cameos in precious metal. Each finely sculptured cameo will be struck with the mint's distinctive Proof finish, so that the raised design stands out in bold frosted relief against a brilliantly polished background.

Minted in sterling silver and 24kt gold

The Profiles in Courage Cameo Collection will be minted in the subscriber's choice of either solid sterling silver or pure 24 karat gold. Each portrait cameo will measure 1¾ inches in height. The sterling silver Proof cameo will weigh 500 grains and is priced at $25. The 24 karat gold Proof cameo, because of the greater density of gold, will weigh at least 1,000 grains and is priced at $525. Each subscriber will receive, at no additional charge, a walnut-framed display plaque to protect and display the nine portrait cameos.

In addition, a special 20th anniversary edition of John F. Kennedy's prize winning book "Profiles in Courage" will be privately printed exclusively for individual subscribers to the collection. This volume, to be custom-bound in genuine leather and ornamented in gold, will carry a foreword written expressly for this 20th anniversary edition by Mrs. Rose Kennedy, the much-admired mother of the late President.

Issued in limited edition

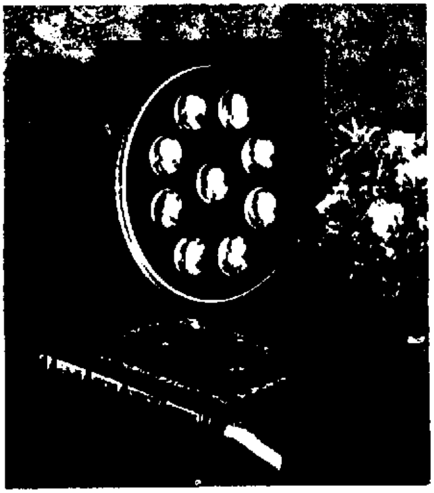
The collection will be issued in strictly limited edition–expressly for advance subscribers. Moreover, there is a limit of one collection per person. Thus, the total edition will be permanently limited to the exact number of subscribers whose applications are postmarked by the subscription deadline of March 31, 1976, plus one additional set for Mrs. Rose Kennedy.

To assure the rarity of this limited edition, the dies used to create the cameos will be destroyed when all Proof Sets have been sent to subscribers–and this collection will never be issued again.

Subscription Deadline: March 31, 1976

Because it is an official issue, an important historical commemorative for all Americans, and a medallic series of exceptional distinction–The Profiles in Courage Cameo Collection is certain to become a highly prized family treasure in years to come. One that you will gain great enjoyment and satisfaction from now, and later pass along with pride to your children and grandchildren.

Please remember that there will be only one edition of this official commemorative collection and that this is the only time you have the opportunity to acquire it. Mail the application below directly to The Franklin Mint, Franklin Center, Pennsylvania–and be sure it is postmarked by the subscription deadline of March 31, 1976.



A walnut-framed display plaque will be provided for protection and display of the complete collection. In addition, each subscriber will receive a special leather-bound 20th Anniversary Edition of "Profiles in Courage," with an introduction by Mrs. Rose Kennedy written expressly for this edition which will be privately published exclusively for subscribers to the collection.

How to Get (and Beat) the Odds on Your Life

by Lawrence Galton

SUMMIT, N.J.

No matter where in the U.S. you live, you can now walk into your doctor's office and get something you couldn't get before: the odds on your life—your specific odds.

After checking you over, your physician can dial a toll-free telephone number to which he is privy and reach a special computer operator in Summit, N.J. Quickly, he can tick off such vital facts about you as age, sex, blood pressure and blood cholesterol level. Within seconds, he'll have a report of just how much you risk a stroke or heart attack within the next eight years.

Say, for example, you're a 40-year-old man, in apparent good health, free of symptoms, yet with a systolic blood pressure of 165 (somewhat high) and a blood cholesterol of 285 (also high).

Back from the computer will come this evaluation: You have 2.1 times the average risk of other men of your age of having a stroke or heart attack. In the next 8 years, your chances of facing such an episode are 9 out of 100, compared with 4 out of 100 for the average American man of 40.

And if the computer is asked, it can also instantly calculate how the odds would change if you lower your cholesterol or your blood pressure or do both. By lowering your blood pressure, you could reduce your risk almost in half—to 5 chances out of 100. By lowering your cholesterol, you could do the same. By doing both, you could cut your risk to 3 chances out of 100—less than average.

Our No. 1 problem

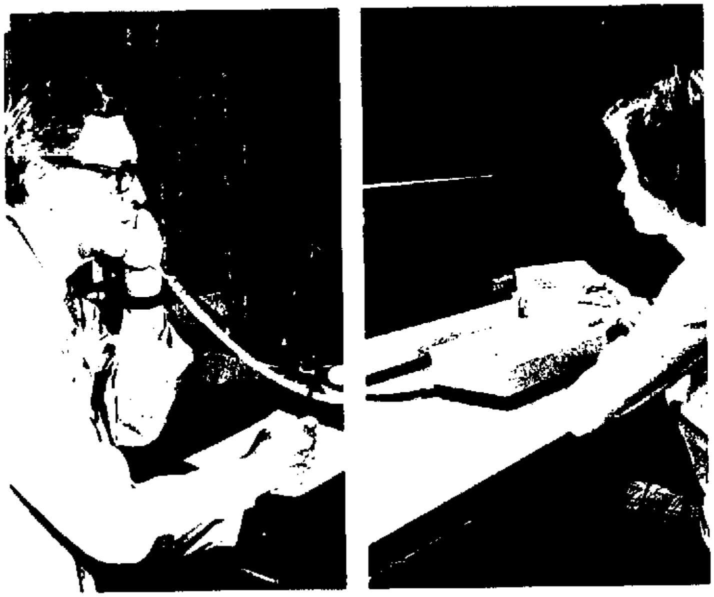
The system, called "CARDIO-DIAL," developed and made available by the CIBA Pharmaceutical Co. in cooperation with the National Heart and Lung Institute, is expected to be of major importance in cutting the death and invalidism toll of our No. 1 health problem: cardiovascular disease.

Each year, more than a million heart attacks and over 600,000 coronary heart disease deaths are recorded in the U.S. Not only is coronary disease the most important cause of death; it's also the most important cause of disability in the prime of life.

Stroke, too, is both killer and crippler. It causes 200,000 deaths a year and many of its 1.75 million living victims have been left partly paralyzed or otherwise handicapped.

What's needed is an attack on the risk factors — the influences clearly shown to promote heart disease and stroke.

The basis for the CARDIO-DIAL system is the government's famed Framingham Study. Ever since the late 1940's, scientists have been following more than 5000 residents of this Massachusetts community. Healthy to begin with, some have experienced heart attacks or strokes.



Thanks to a new program, a doctor (l) can call a computer operator who uses blood pressure, cholesterol level and other factors to calculate his patient's chances of suffering a stroke or heart attack, thus underlining the need for medical treatment.

The study has determined just what factors influenced the development of the serious, often deadly incidents.

The risk analyses supplied by CARDIO-DIAL are based on the masses of data from the Framingham Study. Using those data, the computer system can generate almost 9 million individual risk combinations.

But can risk really be predicted?

Yes. Heart attacks build over many years. The family physician, authorities say, should be able to pick out a high-risk heart attack population from his practice five to 10 years ahead.

How valid are the analyses offered by CARDIO-DIAL?

Testing the system

Before being made available nationally, the system was tested for several months by doctors in six states—Florida, Georgia, North and South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia. More than 2500 individual patient analyses were made.

Many doctors, rightfully skeptical at first, checked on the system by calling in facts about patients who had actually had heart attacks. A North Carolina physician, for example, called in the data on a 39 year-old man with very high blood pressure and an extremely elevated cholesterol level. To the satisfaction of the physician, the system indicated a risk 20 times greater than average, with great likelihood of an attack; the man had, indeed, died of an attack the week before.

In Virginia, when one physician was introduced to the system, he decided to put similar data about himself through, and the analysis indicated very high risk. Two weeks later, the doctor experienced a coronary.

The value of the CARDIO-DIAL system is expected to extend beyond prediction alone.

Because the factors that influence development of heart disease and stroke commonly operate silently, producing no symptoms, they very often get little or no attention and care.

Among the risk factors, high blood pressure has been shown by the Framingham Study and other studies to be especially important—the most common and most potent contributor to death. It affects at least 23 million Americans of all ages. But repeated studies have shown that half of those affected don't know they are, half of those who do know aren't getting treatment, and half of those getting treatment aren't getting adequate treatment, often for failure to continue treatment.

As things stand now, a recent analysis indicates, there will be almost 2 million excess deaths in the next 10 years in people aged 35 to 64 with untreated high blood pressure.

Yet CARDIO-DIAL, with its direct, individualized calculations of risk, could well help where booklets, pamphlets, lectures and other general educational efforts have failed.

Surprises specialists

Even knowledgeable physicians have been surprised by what the computer analyses show. During the early testing stages of the system, one of the country's most noted heart specialists, well aware of the effects of various risk factors, confessed that he was astonished when he got back CARDIO-DIAL analyses for some of his patients with two or more risk factors. Even when blood pressure elevation was only mild and blood cholesterol only slightly high, the total risk when the factors were combined was far greater than the specialist had realized.

Not only can a computer analysis, to begin with, bring home to a patient the importance of controlling whatever risk factors he may have. Repeated analyses can show how his chances of developing cardiovascular complications are being lowered as he works on the risk factors.

As one physician puts it: "The computer analyses back me up. Patients are impressed and motivated by the figures in black and white. And they're impressed and further motivated as the figures begin to change for the better with treatment."

The change in the odds when even a single risk factor is controlled can be striking.

Consider, for example, a 39-year-old woman, otherwise normal but with a systolic blood pressure of 170, giving her twice the average risk of a heart attack or stroke. Within a few weeks, as treatment brings the pressure down to 140, her risk is halved, reduced to normal average risk.

Time for a checkup

If you haven't had a physical checkup recently, you might well get one now and have your physician, while you're there, dial in for a computer analysis. Or if you know that your blood pressure or cholesterol is elevated or another risk factor is at work and you haven't done anything about it, you might well have your physician get such an analysis for you.

You'll have something more specific than ever before to go by—and, with repeated analyses as you take your medicine or do whatever else may be necessary, you're likely to be highly motivated to keep on because of your continuing sense of achievement.

SKIER'S CRUNCHY CEREAL

by BETH MERRIMAN

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Lyndall Heyer, 19, of Stowe, Vt., has been a member of the U.S. Ski Team since 1973. Among her triumphs was the coveted U.S. Junior National Slalom Championship at Whitefish, Mont., in 1975.

Health-conscious Lyndall has toured extensively with the women's slalom team and always travels with a supply of homemade bread and granola. "Proper nutrition is essential for the competitive skier," she says.

"It's important not to feel weighted down when racing," says Lyndall, "so I eat small amounts of dried and fresh fruit between runs." But off the slopes, Lyndall's favorite health food is her own crunchy granola, and here's her recipe:

LYNDALL HEYER'S GRANOLA

1/2 cup vegetable oil, butter or margarine
1/2 cup honey or maple syrup
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups rolled oats (quick or old-fashioned), uncooked
2 cups ready-to-serve whole wheat cereal flakes
1 cup sunflower seeds
3/4 cup sesame seeds
1 cup raisins
1/2 cup chopped walnuts
1/2 cup flaked coconut

Heat oil, honey and vanilla in large saucepan or Dutch oven. Remove from heat. Add remaining ingredients; mix well. Spread in greased 13" x 9" baking pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 15 to 20 minutes or until golden. Cool and remove from pan. Makes about eight cups of granola-type cereal.

Helps Shrink Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues Due To Inflammation. Relieves Pain & Itch...

Gives prompt temporary relief in many cases from hemorrhoidal pain and burning itch in such tissues.

There's an exclusive formulation which actually helps shrink the painful swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by infection. In many cases the first applications give prompt, temporary relief from itching and pain in hemorrhoidal tissues.

The sufferer first notices relief from such painful discomfort. Then this medication helps to gently reduce swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues. Tests conducted by doctors on hundreds of patients in New York City, Washington, D.C., and at a Midwest Medical Center showed this to be true in many cases.

The medication used by doctors in these tests was Preparation H®—the same exclusive formula you can buy at any drug counter without a prescription. Preparation H also lubricates the affected area to protect the inflamed, irritated surface and so helps make regularity more comfortable.

There is no other formula like Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

MY FAVORITE JOKES

by ELAYNE BOOSLER

EDITOR'S NOTE: Elayne Boosler recalls some of the landmarks in her life. "I started talking really late, 2 years old. I walked even later. When I finally spoke, though, it was a full sentence. I said: 'Somebody teach me how to walk.' I suffered my first disappointment at the age of 4 when someone told me that a moth wasn't a butterfly."

Elayne has entertained at New York's Improvisation, Catch A Rising Star, and Pip's in Brooklyn, and she's appeared on the Griffin, Douglas and Cosell shows. About the Cosell show she says, "It was really exciting doing a live TV show. As a gift they gave me an album of Howard singing. I play it when I'm vacuuming." Despite the glamour of the show business world, Elayne says: "Tell them my goal is to own land."

Here is some more of Elayne Boosler's comic world:

There's a park across the street and I jog around it. Bums live in the park and they don't know what jogging is. The other day I was on my third lap and this drunk stood up and yelled: "Come over here, we'll hide ya!"

I've never had luck with pets. I once bought a discount cat, it was 10 percent off because it only came with five lives.

We took my dog to a dog psychiatrist because he was very depressed. All week the only thing he would do was play dead. The psychiatrist said the dog was insecure because he didn't know who his parents were. I said: "No dog knows who his parents are." He said: "I know, I make a fortune."

In New York, now that the phone company is charging for information, they give you more information. I called the operator for a phone number and after she gave it to me she told me she's going out with my boyfriend.

As I mature, my idols change. I used to be in love with Fred Flintstone, but the magic is gone. I found out he uses a stunt man.

Sometimes it's hard living up to your parents' expectations. My parents wanted twins. I didn't want to let them down so I dressed alike. I went everywhere together.

My uncle was the ultimate loser. He committed suicide, got reincarnated and came back as himself.

I never know how to break up with people. I broke up with someone at a Halloween party. He was dressed as a turtle—I didn't know how to tell him—so I turned him on his back and left.

I think I went out with a married man once. He told me he was going to take me out for this big candlelight dinner and dancing—said he'd pick me up at noon.

I get insecure when I go to the beach with a guy and he takes off his shirt and he has 95 names tattooed inside a heart. He showed me the space he was saving for my name. It was outside the heart with a little asterisk.

Sometimes you meet crazy people on the beach. This guy came up and offered to spread suntan lotion on my back with a floor polisher.

I once read an article, "How to Fool Him and Look 10 Pounds Thinner Through Optical Illusion." No. 1: Wear clothes that blend into your environment. If you have a red velvet couch, wear a red velvet dress so he won't know where you start and the couch ends. I almost killed myself, I have wicker furniture! No. 2: If you're size 20, buy a size 7 bikini and hang it up where he can see it. My date looked at it and said: "Where's your sister?"

Taxes for single people are unbelievable. Last year was the first time I came out ahead. I kept what I would have paid in taxes and sent them my salary.

Filters Fall Short.

Researchers create 'Enriched Flavor'™ for taste of new low tar MERIT after disappointing results with special filters.

After countless efforts at designing special "low tar, good taste" filters, Philip Morris—like most others—had achieved only marginal results.

Filters are good for filtering, not for giving taste to a cigarette.

Tobacco gives taste to a cigarette.

And the more tobacco taste that's filtered out in the form of tar, the less taste a cigarette will deliver.

That's the conclusion that led us to the business end of smoking. The tobacco end. And a remarkable new flavor discovery called 'Enriched Flavor.'

The new cigarette with 'Enriched Flavor' is MERIT.

It delivers only 9 mg. of tar—less than 98% of all cigarettes being sold today.

Yet 'Enriched Flavor' MERIT delivers the taste of cigarettes having more tar. Up to 60% more tar.

If you smoke, you'll be interested.

Smokers Report MERIT Delivers More Taste

9 mg. tar MERIT was taste-tested against five current leading low tar cigarette brands ranging from 11 mg. to 15 mg. tar.

Thousands of filter smokers were involved, smokers like yourself, all tested at home.*

Even if the cigarette tested had 60% more tar, a significant majority of all smokers tested reported new 'Enriched Flavor' MERIT delivered more taste.

Repeat: delivered more taste.

In similar tests against 11 mg. to 15 mg. menthol brands, 9 mg. tar MERIT MENTHOL performed strongly too, delivering as much—or more—taste than the higher tar brands tested.

You've been smoking "low tar, good taste" claims long enough. Now you've got the cigarette.

MERIT. Unprecedented flavor at 9 mg. tar.

The Soviet supersonic transport, designed by Aleksei Tupolev, is much like the Anglo-French Concorde that was granted limited landing rights in the U.S., unleashing vocal opposition from environmentalists. So far the Russians fly the plane only domestically but hope to fly it here. It is 213 feet long with a 91-foot wingspan.

Airplane Designer Aleksei Tupolev
Russia's Supersonic Man

by George Michaelson

Tupolev and stewardess: He says the supersonic transports will find greater acceptance in time but will never replace all other commercial airplanes.

DOMODEDOVO AIRPORT, USSR.

Aleksei Tupolev would like to travel to America—in 3½ hours.

The stout, buoyant Russian is chief designer of the new Soviet supersonic jet, the TU-144 (TU for Tupolev). And now that the Franco-British Concorde has been granted limited landing rights in the U.S., he is hopeful that his own creation, nicknamed the "Konkordski," will be allowed to make the 3½-hour trip from Moscow to New York.

"The world is getting smaller and our two countries are getting friendlier," said Tupolev as we sat in the cabin of a TU-144 drinking vodka. "So who knows? Maybe someday I'll have the pleasure of making a trip to your country!" With that, he drank a toast to his future visit.

Just how long it will take for the "Konkordski" to get landing rights in the U.S. remains to be seen. But what has now become likely is that a new era of jet travel may be upon us. And for all his camaraderie, Comrade Tupolev is well aware that his TU-144 is in hot competition with the capitalist-made Concorde. (The Soviets are also aware that in the U.S., Boeing has never fully stopped its program to develop a supersonic aircraft, despite Congress' 1971 decision to cut off federal support.)

At present, it is a point of pride for the Russians that while work on the TU-144 began a year or two later than work on the Concorde, they undertook the first regular commercial flights—a weekly freight route that began this past December between Moscow and Alma-Ata, a city near the Chinese border. Thus, they nosed out the Concorde, which began regular passenger flights in January.

His father's footsteps

For the 50-year-old Tupolev—whose father, Andrei, designed the first Soviet jet, the TU-104—competition between the two supersonics has its beneficial aspects, apart from propaganda value. "It keeps us both on our toes," he said. "We need to learn from each other. You see, this era of the supersonics is just beginning. You might say that both of us are in the position of new parents, each with our supersonic babes, and they are very pesky, excitable new babes. So it is important that we watch each other, even openly exchange notes, as we now do. This way, we make sure that we each raise our young ones properly; maybe a little different, but both quite proper, we hope."

At this point, both of the "new babes" do look and behave rather alike. They are both sleek, pointy-beaked and fan-winged, they cruise at about the same speed (1400 mph) and altitude (10-12 miles), the Concorde's range is 3500 miles, the Konkordski's 4000; the Concorde carries 100 passengers, the Konkordski 140, and both can be flown economically for long distances only (at least 1500 miles).

There are, though, some important design differences: For example, the TU-144 has small forewings or "moustaches" not present on the Concorde, and its engines are mounted centrally, not on the wings. "Such features," said Tupolev, "make the TU-144 behave slightly different from its cousin."

Parent and child

Which behaves better? we asked. "A tough question, very tough . . .," answered Tupolev, pausing as he stared out of the cabin window at a TU-104 which was just taking off on the adjacent runway. "Well, my friend, let me put it this way. There is a Russian expression which, freely translated, says: 'Every parent is bound to favor his own child.' But, in this case, as the parent, I want to add that I am also very fond of our Concorde nephew."

One group, however, that has no particular affection for the Konkordski, or for the Concorde either, is the Soviet "environmentalist" critics (generally, scientists). And while far less vocal than their counterparts in the West, they nonetheless have raised similar fears about noise pollution and about the TU-144's effect on the ozone layer that screens the earth from an excess of the sun's ultraviolet rays.

Pilot Ivan Vedernikov (l) and test pilot Eduard Elyan in the cockpit of Soviet SST: Crew is two pilots, a flight engineer and an auxiliary pilot.

Asked about such criticism, Tupolev responded: "Frankly, there is some truth to our critics' arguments. The supersonic requires a more powerful engine, which makes it somewhat noisier than subsonic jets; and there is an effect on the ozone layer, though this also, to some degree, is true of the subsonics.

"So what do we do about it? In our desire not to harm the environment do we, as some critics suggest, abandon the supersonic? I don't think so. Look, in order to preserve nature, we do not need to stop technological progress. We do not need to give up our machines and go back to being cavemen, or climb trees to pluck bananas; or better yet, in order not to disturb the trees, wait until the bananas fall.

Needed: time and patience

"No, the way we have to cope with this," he continued, "is to improve our machines. And in the case of the supersonic, the answer lies in improving the engine design. I am sure we can do it. But to work out all the so-called 'bugs,' it will take time and a little patience —hopefully, on the part of our critics, too—because in this field, there is simply no way of coming up with a finished product overnight."

Evidently not, for it has now been about a dozen years since work on the Konkordski began. And as with the Concorde, the Soviets have test-flown their supersonic literally thousands of hours in preparation for their commercial flights.

According to Tupolev, the real heroes in the development of the supersonic are the test pilots who have had the hazardous job of figuring out the aircraft's "bugs"—in the air. Several of these men, who began testing the plane back in 1968, are no longer alive. And Tupolev, himself, was present at the 1973 Paris Air Show, when a TU-144 crashed and cost the lives of all the crew members.

A few brave men

"Today we finally have an airworthy plane," said Tupolev. "And we have it largely as a result of these brave men, men like Eduard Elyan . . ." Pausing, Tupolev called down the aisle to a squat, middle-aged test pilot who wears on his lapel the red-star, "Hero-of-the-Soviet-Union" medallion — an honor which, in this case, is given to pilots who have survived three or more crashes or near-misses. "This man was the first to take the TU-144 up," announced Tupolev, lifting a glass of vodka in the pilot's direction. "And he is still at it today, still helping us improve our aircraft."

Elyan smiled broadly and then went on to explain to his "guest from America" that the TU-144 was truly a safe aircraft. "I tell you this not simply because I am in love with this plane, which I am," said Elyan, "but because it is now a demonstrated fact that this is one of the easiest-to-handle, safest aircrafts around. And how does it fly? Smooth as butter, with very few bumps and turbulence. So, actually, the passenger is not even aware that he is in such a swift, powerful plane. . . ."

"Except during take-off," interrupted Tupolev. "Then you feel that you are in something a little different." The pilot nodded, and Tupolev continued, winking at us as if he were about to tell a joke: "This take-off with such sudden acceleration is the kind of experience that, well, I should think women will probably love it: it sort of pushes you tightly back in the seat, and you feel the power of the plane and its terrific strength. But then you are off, and it is like being in any other plane, though smoother, more relaxing, and a hell of a lot quicker and more convenient."

Passenger flights planned

As things now stand, the Russians expect to open their first passenger routes later this year—an occasion that evidently is eagerly awaited by some. As Ivan Vedernikov, the Soviet pilot who currently flies the 1930-mile freight route between Moscow and Alma-Ata, told us: "People in Alma-Ata come up to me in the street and ask, 'How much longer is it going to be before we get to try this one out?' They can't quite believe how fast the supersonic flies, and really when you think of it, it is an amazing thing: after all, we leave Alma-Ata at 4 p.m. local time and arrive in Moscow at 3 p.m. local time—in other words, an hour before we left!"

Besides the Alma-Ata run, Tupolev said the Soviets are planning to begin a number of other domestic routes. And given the vastness of the Soviet Union (6000 miles across), the TU-144 is expected to be used primarily as a domestic aircraft; for the time being, some 10 Konkordskis will do the job.

And what about the future? "Very hard to predict . . .," said Tupolev. "In life, it seldom happens that the new completely takes the place of the old. Look, it is now 20 years since my father's TU-104 first began our jet service, and still we find ourselves using propeller planes; it's the same in your country, too. So, even if we develop a supersonic jet that can be flown economically on short as well as long routes, I do not expect them to replace subsonic jets—never.

What the future holds

"Still, I think our new supersonic babes have a good and interesting future. Maybe they'll be a little slow to grow in the beginning, but they should have a lusty adolescence and even fuller adulthood: the same for our TU-144, the Concorde, and — who knows? — perhaps even an American supersonic before long, also."

Then, smiling broadly and putting on his heavy Russian coat so that we could go outside and take a photo of him in front of his TU-144, he concluded: "Yes, someday perhaps we'll all be in this business together. And then, I hope, I'll finally get to come to your country . . . yes, of course, in 3½ hours."

PAINFUL ELIMINATION?

Many people have experienced painful elimination. And many have come to accept this as if it were natural. But there's nothing natural about it.

No matter what your age, you should have comfortable elimination.

And SERUTAN makes this possible.

SERUTAN is the effective laxative that forms a smooth gel in the lower digestive tract, where it combines with intestinal waste to give you comfortable relief.

There's no strain, and no cramps. That's because SERUTAN, with its natural ingredients, adds the necessary moisture and bulk to work with your system for smooth, easy results.

Fowl with carcinogenic drug left on market

FDA chose to save face on tainted turkeys

By JOHN STOWELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the U.S. Department of Agriculture found illegal residues of a suspected cancer-causing drug in turkeys last summer, it mistakenly impounded thousands of clean birds while the contaminated meat was processed into turkey rolls and sold to consumers.

But the Food and Drug Administration, rejecting the recommendation of one of its inspectors, decided not to recall the meat or prosecute the turkey grower because those actions might embarrass USDA.

The chain of events was outlined in an internal government memo that surfaced Friday afternoon in a hearing before the Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. The story was flushed out through interviews with officials from FDA and USDA who were knowledgeable about the incident.

The memo, dated July 22, 1975, and signed by Dr. C. D. Van Houweling, director of the FDA's Bureau of Veterinary Medicine, was written after a meeting between the two agencies.

It disclosed that USDA scientists, during routine sampling of turkey flocks, found up to 48 parts of the drug Ipronidazole for each billion parts of turkey tissue in certain birds. Marilyn Perez, special assistant to the director of the FDA's Bureau of Foods, said the disease-fighting drug is presumed to be a carcinogen, or cancer-causing compound, although no long-term studies on that potential danger have ever been conducted.

Scientists can detect illegal residues of the drug in edible tissue down to 2 parts per billion, she said, and levels higher than that would indicate that a turkey grower had violated the law by ignoring the label directions on how long birds should be withdrawn from the medication before they are slaughtered.

Federal law prohibits the use of any cancer-causing drug in animals if detectable levels are found in meat.

The Van Houweling memo said that subsequent discussions with officials of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service "disclosed that initially they had inadvertently obtained the wrong grower name and that the lot of turkeys which they were holding

Jury finds Patty Hearst guilty

Chel bill for doctors best hope

Other liability plans hung up

By MOLLY BURRELL
Staff Writer

Assemblyman Fred Chel, D-Long Beach, is girding for a fight in Sacramento starting Thursday over a bill whose thrust is cooperative effort to answer the medical malpractice insurance dilemma.

And if there is to be any legislative answer this year, observers feel, his is the only one that has a fighting chance. It contains an urgency clause: If passed, it would go into effect as soon as the governor signs it.

Two other medical malpractice bills appear to be stalled in committee and—unless drastically amended—without hope of passage this session.

Chel's AB 2780 would create the authority for doctors to form cooperatives and raise a defense fund to hire legal counsel to defend them, fight nuisance suits, settle well-founded claims, pay court judgments. It also provides for careful selection, screening and discipline of members.

It is a new approach to the malpractice problem, but it is an old principle: agricultural cooperatives have existed in this state and throughout the nation for a century and the co-op movement had thriving colonies in Eastern United States before the turn of the century. Consumer cooperatives are active in many cities today and the national cooperative movement headquarters is in Chicago.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.'s malpractice crisis solution, the Berman bill (calling for mandatory service to the needy and reduced but escalating insurance premiums) is stalled in committee hearings. The doctors' preference, the Song bill (no mandatory service, reduced premiums, and a state fund to pay judgments when the insurance fund runs out) is stalled, period.

By contrast, Chel's bill sailed through committee 11-3 Wednesday.

"But not without a heck of a fight," he admits.

And the struggle to get it through the Assembly, through Senate committee and onto the Senate floor will be another heavy one, Chel says.

Chel has the 41 votes necessary for a majority vote. The measure also has the support of the California and Los Angeles County Medical Associations, the president of the Long Beach Medical Association, and the Cooperative American

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The guilty verdict returned against Patricia Hearst was "entirely proper, and I'm very pleased with it," her prosecutor said Saturday.

U.S. Atty. James L. Browning Jr. said the verdict shows "that our criminal justice system works well."

Browning praised his courtroom opponent, F. Lee Bailey, for providing a "fine defense," and he thanked his own staff.

Browning said he was not surprised that the jury handed down its decision in only 12 hours. "I believed the jury would return a guilty verdict, but it could have gone either way," he said.

Browning said at a news conference he did not believe the trial had been a political one. "I see it as a bank robbery trial," he said.

BAILEY: PATTY DISAPPOINTED

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst's defense attorney said Saturday the newspaper heiress had "wondered if she ever had a chance" at acquittal.

F. Lee Bailey sat puffing on a cigarette as he faced reporters with fellow defense lawyer Albert Johnson following Miss Hearst's conviction on a federal bank robbery charge.

"She was quite disappointed," Bailey said. "She wondered if she ever had a chance ... I'm surprised at the combination of a quick verdict and a guilty verdict."

Asked if there was anything he would have done differently, Bailey said, "I can't think of anything offhand. Both (U.S. Atty. James L.) Browning and I went all out."

He said Miss Hearst was hurt most by some of the judge's rulings to allow admission of certain documents and testimony about her "missing year," especially the time spent in Sacramento during the last year of her 19 months underground.

Sentencing set for heiress on April 19

By LINDA DEUTSCH

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Patricia Hearst, a kidnaping victim who swore tearfully that she committed crimes only to avoid death, was found guilty of armed bank robbery Saturday by jurors who did not believe her story.

Now a convicted bank robber, the 22-year-old heiress to a vast publishing fortune could be sentenced to a maximum of 35 years in prison.

The minimum sentence could be as little as simple probation. She was impassive as the verdict was read in a hushed courtroom.

"Oh, my God!" gasped Catherine Hearst, who had begged so often for her daughter's return from the terrorist underground and took the witness stand to defend her as a "warm and loving girl."

Miss Hearst's sisters wept openly, but the auburn-haired, pale Miss Hearst remained dry-eyed.

U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter, the white-haired jurist who said at the outset it would be the most widely covered trial in the country, set sentencing for April 19, and pronounced the verdict "well within the evidence."

The jury, rated by both sides as among the most attentive ever seen in a courtroom, had accepted the calm, methodical presentation of U.S. Atty. James L. Browning Jr., who insisted from the start that this was a simple bank robbery trial.

"I think any bank robber is a danger to society ..." he said after the verdict.

Of the Hearst family, Browning said: "I have nothing but sympathy for them. I have children of my own. I think Patricia Hearst can still straighten her life out. I hope she does so."

For the slim, young Miss Hearst the verdict brought the end of one trial but was only the beginning of more legal entanglements as she faces other charges in Los Angeles. She is charged there with kidnaping, assault and robbery—a combination that could bring her a life sentence if she were found guilty.

Miss Hearst was to spend Saturday night at San Mateo County Jail, where she has been kept since her arrest in a San Francisco hideout apartment six months ago. It was not immediately known how soon she would be taken to Los Angeles for arrainment.

Bailey had said earlier that with acquittal here, it would be easy to win a reduction of the $500,000 bail on the state charges. But her conviction raised doubts whether the bail would be lowered.

Browning said Miss Hearst would not be turned over to the authorities in Los Angeles until after her sentencing, and perhaps not even then. The state charges stem from a shooting incident one month after the bank robbery while Miss Hearst was in the company of Symbionese Liberation Army soldiers William and Emily Harris.

The jury's verdict was read at 4:30 p.m. in a locked courtroom. The case went to the panel Friday, eight weeks after the trial began, and the decision was arrived at with stunning swiftness.

With their verdict, the jurors accepted the theory posed by many government witnesses that Miss Hearst was a willing and eager bank robber, "a rebel in search of a cause"—who identified fully with

TRIAL ENDS WITH BANG

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An explosion set off by bomb squad investigators to blast open a suspicious briefcase Saturday rocked a hallway near the courtroom where Patricia Hearst was found guilty of bank robbery only 90 minutes earlier.

No explosives were found in the briefcase, which a Federal Protective Service guard said contained some news reels and papers. There were no injuries reported.

The small explosion on the 19th floor of the city's federal building took place about 25 feet from the courtroom where Miss Hearst's trial came to an end with a guilty verdict.

Ford says Reagan could divide GOP

By HOWARD BENEDICT

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — President Ford said Saturday he does not care whether Ronald Reagan withdraws from the Republican presidential race because he foresees no forces that can stop him from winning the GOP nomination.

But, he added again that Reagan's continued candidacy could have a divisive effect on the party.

The President also denied that he had personally suggested or authorized anyone on his staff to "suggest to my opponent that he ought to get out of the race."

Ford predicted yet another primary victory over Reagan in Tuesday's North Carolina contest, a win he said will catapult him on to the nomination at the Republican convention in August.

Backers of Ford hope that a victory in North Carolina will deliver a knockout blow to the aspirations of the former California governor.

"I think we have the momentum on our own to win the nomination and I have no apprehension that it will be stopped by any forces that I see at all," said Ford.

Later, Ford received an enthusiastic reception from an overflow crowd of 13,500 at an Asheville shopping mall when he attacked the spending habits of the Democratic-controlled Congress.

"With your help and support I'll stay in the saddle four more years and while there I'll be riding herd on that Congress to do things right for a change."

As Ford tried to leave Asheville for Spruce Pine, his helicopter was turned back by heavy rain and fog

SPRING COMES IN HOT, SUNNY

The first day of spring brought sunny skies and a high temperature of 83 to Long Beach Saturday, and forecasters expect more warm, sunny weather today. (If you think today is the first day of spring, you are wrong. According to the World Almanac, the Vernal Equinox occurred Saturday at 6.50 a.m. EST.)

A high temperature of 74 is forecast for today, after an overnight low near 50. Sea water temperatures will be about 60.

Local winds are expected in Southland mountains and deserts, forecasters said.

Patty's stunned family goes into seclusion

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The guilty verdict against Patricia Hearst Saturday hit her family and sympathizers with numbing grief, while others whose lives she had touched took grim satisfaction at the outcome of her bank-robbery trial.

Elsewhere, authorities speculated on future legal action in the wide-ranging case, including additional charges against Miss Hearst and others linked with her as a kidnap victim-turned criminal.

As the verdict was read in the federal courtroom, Miss Hearst's youngest sister, Ann, seated next to her parents in the front row of spectators' seats, clasped a hand to her forehead and wept.

Randolph Hearst, the defendant's father, appeared frozen with shock. He furrowed his brow and sat perfectly still.

Tears coursed down the cheek of Miss Hearst's mother, Catherine Hearst, moments after she heard the verdict.

Another Hearst daughter, Vicki, seated in the spectator section, doubled over and sobbed.

Her brother-in-law, Jay Bosworth, put a comforting arm around her and placed his other arm on the shoulder of his wife, Gina, Miss Hearst's eldest sister, who sat in stunned silence.

The Hearst family later went into seclusion and had no immediate comment on the verdict.

F. Lee Bailey, Miss Hearst's defense attorney, said the newspaper heiress had all along "wondered if she ever had a chance" at acquittal. He also said the verdict would be appealed.

Puffing a cigarette as he faced reporters after the conviction, Bailey also said he was "surprised at the combination of a quick verdict and a guilty verdict."

Asked if there was anything he would like to have done differently, Bailey said, "I can't think of any-

Canal Zone employes end 'sickout'

BALBOA, Canal Zone (AP)— Panama Canal employes agreed to end a 'sickout' Saturday afternoon after the Canal Zone governor agreed to modify wage freezes and work toward some form of collective bargaining.

Gov. Harold R. Parfitt said pilots and tugboat operators who had been calling in sick would return to work immediately to begin moving a backlog of more than 175 ships through the 50-mile canal.

The illegal job action began Monday and all but paralyzed the canal, reducing traffic from an average of 30-35 ships a day to no more than five or six.

Ships were reported waiting at anchor as much as 10 miles from the Atlantic and Pacific ends of the canal, and another 37 vessels were expected to arrive within 24 hours, officials said.

"I think we will be back in full operation by nightfall," Parfitt said late Saturday afternoon. "We plan to put 37 ships in the canal Sunday and have the backlog cleared up and be back in normal operation within three to four weeks."

Parfitt said he had agreed to modify wage freezes scheduled as part of a plan to reduce a $14-million operating deficit and to study a way to establish mutually acceptable forms of collective bargaining with all employes of the government-owned Panama Canal Co. and the Canal Zone government.

Jailers donate to bury town drunk

Combined News Servies

For the last 20 years, Homer Hill's mailing address was the Fort Lauderdale, Fla., jail, where he was taken after more than 400 arrests for public intoxication.

The 81-year-old man died last week, and the only friends he had — his jailers — decided they couldn't let him have a pauper's funeral.

"Homer has carved his own corner in the jail, and we just feel he deserves a decent burial," said Sgt. John Deaton, who organized a collection that has netted more than $500. "He was the first drunk I ever arrested when I came onto the department 13 years ago. He had been around here so long, he had interwoven himself into the hearts of all the policemen and we wanted to do something for him."

Deaton said that when a new city jail was built about 18 years ago, "They turned him out of the old jail and told him to walk down to the new one and pick out any cell he liked." He said police and other officials exhausted every possibility in an attempt at finding any of Hill's relatives.

Novelist Cloete dies

Stuart Cloete, whose novels dealing with interracial love were banned in South Africa, has died in a Cape Town, South Africa, hospital. He was 78 and had written more than 20 novels and many short stories.

Cloete, who died Friday night, had been in a hospital for nearly a week. The caue of his death was not given.

Cloete was a member of the British Coldstream Guards and farmed in South Africa before turning to writing. At 40, Cloete produced his first novel, "Turning Wheels," a Book-of-the-Month club choice in the U.S. and Britain.

The book sold more than two million copies, was translated into 14 languages and launched his career as a writer. Like four of his subsequent books, it included themes of interracial love affairs and his own religious disillusionment.

Family get-together

Queen Elizabeth II visited Princess Margaret at their mother's home, the Royal Lodge near Windsor Castle, on Saturday, the first time the sisters had had a chance to talk since the announcement that Margaret and her husband are separating.

The separation of Margaret and Lord Snowdon was announced in a terse statement Friday from the princess' home, Kensington Palace. The statement said there were no plans for a divorce.

The couple's two children, Viscount Linley, 14, and Lady Sarah Armstrong-Jones, 11, were with the princess at the home of Queen Mother Elizabeth, to whom the royal family has frequently turned in difficult times.

Concert canceled

French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing on Saturday was forced to cancel a gala opera performance to which he had invited 1,500 people because stage hands at the Paris Opera House went on strike.

Giscard d'Estaing had said he wanted to change the tradition of glittering society opera galas. He invited 1,500 people from around the nation who "particularly distinguished themselves in various spheres of activity" to see Mozart's "Il Seraglio."

Announcing cancellation of the event, a presidential spokesman said Giscard d'Estaing "refused to bow to such pressure" from the strikers "or to offer a show unworthy of the leading theater of France" and "offered his excuses to his guests who have been informed individually."

Goodpaster joins Citadel

Retired Gen. Andrew J. Goodpaster, who served as supreme Allied commander in Europe from 1969 to 1974, will join the faculty of The Citadel, the military college of South Carolina.

Goodpaster, who retired in 1974, will serve as a distinguished professor of government and international studies. He will assume his post in the fall, the college said in Charleston.

Goodpaster, a 1939 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy, was staff secretary for President Dwight D. Eisenhower. He served as commanding general of the 8th Infantry Division in Europe from 1961-1962 and as deputy commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam in 1968.

Fraud suggested in minister's request for U.S. campaign aid

By DICK BARNES

WASHINGTON (AP) — A minister seeking $100,000 in federal funds for his presidential campaign submitted records listing contributors who never heard of him, bills from an apparently nonexistent printing firm and other suspect data.

The Rev. Donald L. Jackson of Buffalo, N.Y., filed the material with the Federal Election Commission this month. The FEC has certified more than $11 million this year to 14 presidential primary candidates.

Commission staff members are making preliminary checks before starting the detailed audit which is routine before a candidate can be certified for matching funds.

To qualify for the money, a candidate must raise $5,000 in individual contributions of $250 or less in each of 20 states — a total of $100,000.

The only nonpolitician to qualify so far is Ellen McCormack, an antiabortion candidate who has run in several primaries and so far gained one delegate to the Democratic National Convention.

Jackson's filing first aroused suspicion among persons who examined it because virtually all of the contributions were for exactly $250, because totals listed for a number of the states were exactly $5,300, and because contributions from any one state were generally all received the same day.

REV. JACKSON
Under Suspicion

The Associated Press checked a series of listed contributors in New Jersey.

Edward P. Olszewski of 117 Talmadge Ave., Bound Brook, was listed for a $250 donation Feb. 24. Mrs. Albert F. Olszewski of 115 Talmadge Ave. said there was no Edward in her family, that no one in the house had donated to Jackson, and that the house at 117 Talmadge had burned down last year.

Paul Chester of 254 Penn Ave., Nixon, N.J., was also listed for $250 on Feb. 24. Mrs. Paul Chester of 250 Penn Ave. said "we haven't contributed and I don't know of any other Chesters." She said there was no 254 Penn Ave.

Audry Kiamme of 108 Retford Ave., Cranford, N.J., was listed for another $250 on Feb. 24. David Kiamie of 208 Retford Ave. said there was no other family by that name in the vicinity and "no money like that for contributions in this house."

Responses were similar from others as the pattern of slightly varied names and addresses continued.

Virtually every donor's occupation was listed simply as "worker." One man contacted on a basis of the list told a reporter no one in his household had been able to find work for a year.

Federal law requires specific occupations and business address of contributors to be listed.

In a letter to the FEC, Jackson said "many of these donations from members of the John Birch Society, who do not like people to know their name."

Jackson's report claimed he raised $110,931 during February and spent $111,640.

His asserted expenditures included $65,000 for mailing 500,000 letters. A postal official in Buffalo said it could not be determined whether or not such a first-class mailing had taken place.

Jackson also listed $32,612 in printing bills from "J" Publishing Co., 494 Masten Ave., Buffalo.

That address is a long-vacant house in a deteriorating neighborhood, according to a city directory and the Buffalo police.

No such business registered its name as required either with the Erie County court clerk or the sales tax collection office of the State of New York.

Attempts to reach Jackson at a telephone number listed on his campaign literature failed.

The new federal election law makes it unlawful to furnish any false, fictitious or fraudulent evidence, books or information to the Federal Election Commission in connection with matching fund payments. The maximum penalty is a $10,000 fine and five years in prison.

Violations of other reporting requirements are punishable by a fine of up to $1,000 or up to one year imprisonment.

Jackson had earlier appeared in Washington to announce his candidacy.

In his literature he describes himself as 19, a registered Democrat and "a poor Black American, who will have much to say for the poor and the unemployed."

He claims a correspondence school law degree but in his platform says "there are too many lawyers in government."

Listing his experience, he said he "was president of Jackson Educational Foundation, president of two real estate corp. Operated a radio station briefly. Can type 60 words per minute."

Kissinger depicted as irritable, contentious

Book bares secret Israel talks

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — An Israeli journalist in a revised manuscript after his first draft was banned by Israeli censors, has published an attack on Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's Middle East diplomacy that he says is based largely on secret Israeli government records of the negotiations.

The book, "The Secret Conversations of Henry Kissinger" by Matti Golan, contains no major substantive surprises. But it does provide what appears to be revelations about some of Kissinger's more candid, often contentious sessions with Israeli leaders. Golan does not reveal the source of the "leaks."

Kissinger is often cited making frank, sometimes uncomplimentary comments about other world figures.

In this book the snatches of published conversations seem designed to show Kissinger in a light that would not find favor with Israelis or Israeli sympathizers: He is seen as pressuring the Israelis constantly, taking the Arab position more often than not, and repeatedly losing his temper at the Israelis.

Kissinger, according to other Israeli sources, had protested on several occassions about the apparent "leak" to Golan of sections from the Israeli stenographic transcripts of his meetings.

When asked for comment on the book, published by Quadrangle, The New York Times Book Co., a State Department spokesman said that "Mr. Kissinger has not read the entire book; he does not intend to read it."

"He has seen excerpts here and there," the spokesman said. "From what he has seen, it is by and large a collection of lies, distortions and material so taken out of context as to amount to lies."

The spokesman declined to be specific.

Originally, Golan, a diplomatic correspondent for Haaretz, an Israeli morning paper, included sections of verbatim transcripts from Kissinger's conversations in the book.

The manuscript was banned by Israeli censors in May 1975, Golan says, becuse it was based on secret and top secret information. It caused Premier Yitzhak Rabin to call a cabinet meeting to investigate the source of the leaks.

In that meeting, according to Golan, Rabin said that if the book was published, Kissinger would have to resign and Israeli relations with the U.S. would be severely damaged.

Golan said he had rewritten the book, apparently deleting some of the verbatim text and paraphrasing other sections. It was approved by the censors last July.

Kissinger has reportedly expressed his irritation to Israeli officials over permission for the book to be published since its intent, he contended, was to discredit him.

Prankster ruins fund drive to pay for baby's surgery

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Latin Americans in New Orleans are again trying to raise money to pay for open heart surgery for a 21-month-old El Salvador blue baby. A prankster destroyed their first drive.

Mario Osorio, consul general of El Salvador, and radio station KGLA of suburban Marrero, a Spanish language broadcaster, were on their way to collecting the more than $5,000 they need for Ericka's hospitalization. Spanish-speaking New Orleanians were sending in checks, some as large as $10.

Then, on Friday, March 12, the day Ericka underwent a four-hour open-heart operation, the telephone rang in the midst of a fund-raising broadcast. The man identified himself as the head of the international department of a downtown bank.

"Don't worry about donations for the little baby," the caller said. "The bank has decided to take care of everything."

So, the station and Osorio called off the broadcasts, advised listeners not to send money and returned some checks they had gotten.

It was too late to telephone the bank, which was closed over the weekend. Osorio had to fly to San Salvador on Saturday because of illness in his family. He returned Tuesday night and telephoned the bank Wednesday morning to express his gratitude. The bank had never heard of Ericka or the fund drive.

"I just don't see how anyone could do that," said Osorio. "It's terrible."

Ericka's parents, Jose Rolando Cuadron, 23, and Juana Francisca, 27, had despaired at the $7,000 price tag of the open-heart surgery. The father is an auto mechanic and the mother a nurse's aid. Their income is less than $200 a month.

The child's doctor asked Dr. John Ochsner, chief of surgery at Ochsner Medical Institutions here, to operate without fee. He agreed and TACA airline flew the baby and her parents here without cost. In San Salvador, small donations to a radio campaign totaled $800 to start Ericka off to New Orleans.

A team of three surgeons closed a hole in the lower chamber of Ericka's heart and provided a means for blood to get from the heart to the lungs. The surgery has been judged successful, and Ericka may fly home next Monday or Tuesday.

But, at the weekend, her hospital bill was $4,800 and going up.

"We are beginning again," said Osorio.

Top brass to handle trial in ship collision

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The Navy's top legal brass is being brought to Norfolk for the courts-martial of the skipper and deck officer of the cruiser Belknap, which collided last year with a carrier off the coast of Sicily.

The collision involving the Belknap and the carrier John F. Kennedy left eight sailors dead and 47 injured. Capt. Walter R. Shafer, a veteran of four seagoing commands including the Belknap, already has received a letter of reprimand.

In addition, the 47-year-old Virginia Beach father of four is charged with dereliction of duty, causing the loss of military property through neglect, violating Navy regulations and placing a vessel in a hazardous situation.

Charged with Shafer in the collisions is Lt. (j.g.) Kenneth M. Knull, 26, of New London, Conn. Knull, as the Belknap's deck officer, was in virtual control of the ship when the collision occurred.

He will be tried separately on charges of violating the orders of Shafer, violating Navy regulations and permitting the collision through neglect. The Navy dropped a more serious charge of involuntary manslaughter.

The two Norfolk-based warships collided last Nov. 22 while the Belknap was trying to maneuver into a position behind the carrier.

Grand Jury to report on aliens getting welfare

By ROBERT GORE
Staff Writer

The number of aliens—legal and illegal—on welfare rolls has become the target of a County Grand Jury probe due for release this week, the Independent, Press-Telegram has learned.

Interviews with high-ranking officials of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) and County Department of Public Social Services (DPSS) disclosed that crackdown efforts, a likely area of concern to the jury, have been plagued by a series of communication problems and weak links in the operations remain.

The grand juror in charge of the report, Mrs. Edith Bogen, declined to elaborate on the contents of the document other than to say that her committee felt it to be "very important."

She expects the report, which will contain testimony from county, state and federal officials, to be released this week in spite of the fact that Grand Jury reports are traditionally held until near the end of the jury's term in June.

RECOMMENDATIONS will focus "on the whole picture of aliens, but primarily on illegal aliens" who are involved with the welfare system, she said.

DPSS spokesmen admitted that they have no exact count of either legal or illegal aliens on welfare because legal aliens are eligible the same as citizens, and no separate figures are kept.

The number of illegal aliens was set at less than one-half of one per cent of the 952,000 on the welfare roles (as of December) by the DPSS, but no specific study was cited to support the figure.

"It adds insult to injury," said one INS official, who asked to remain anonymous, "when you consider they (aliens) are here illegally and they're getting food stamps, free medical care at county hospitals and cash awards."

"The alien situation is out of control," he added.

"We have got to cut out the profit motive and force them (Mexican nationals) to go back home," he said. "They're a drain on the taxpayer."

ALTHOUGH DPSS and INS officials minimized the problem of aliens on welfare, both agencies said that, as recently as November, there was a crisis in processing applications of aliens applying for public assistance.

An alien seeking aid first applies to the DPSS. If the person presents a valid green (alien registration) card, the application is approved. If there is no identification, INS is asked to verify that the alien is in the U.S. legally.

Here is where there have been major problems, both federal and county officers acknowledge. Until November, the INS lagged in excess of 30,000 applications behind the DPSS, and aliens—legal or illegal—receive benefits while they are waiting to be cleared by the INS.

An additional problem is posed by the state Welfare and Institutions Code restrictions, which prohibit the DPSS from telling the INS of aliens who begin to fill out aid forms and then leave when they are told they will be investigated, according to Fox.

FOX said approximately 100 aliens a month leave DPSS offices when they are asked for identification.

A green card, which has actually been blue since 1965, is also known as Immigration Form I-151. About 1.1 million legal resident aliens have the cards and live and work in Southern California, according to INS statistics.

About 12,000 illegals are deported annually from the county, but over 1.3 million are estimated to be in the area illegally, the INS says.

The total aid bill for the 952,000 welfare recipients is $60.2 million per month from federal, state and county taxpayers' funds, the DPSS said.

The average person on general relief collects $146 per month and an average family group of a mother and three children receives $88 each per month, the DPSS noted.

INS District Director Joseph Sureck explained that his office formerly had to check the eligibility of all aliens who applied rather than just those who do not present valid identification, as is now the case.

DPSS also has supplied two workers to help in clearing applications, he said.

Where the INS used to get 3,000 aid applications to check per month from the DPSS, the amount has dropped to 500 monthly at the most, he said.

The large initial backlog was eliminated by simply sending all of the 30,000 applications where identification was presented back to the DPSS, Sureck said.

"We are still experiencing a backlog of applications," said DPSS Research Director David Fox, "but the situation has significantly improved."

The INS now calls the alien who has failed to present a valid green card in for an interview. If the person does not show, is uncooperative or is definitely found to have entered the U.S. illegally, the INS notifies the DPSS.

"AND I assume they (the DPSS) cut off the benefits," said Sureck. This was verified by the DPSS.

Although welfare case workers "are not specifically trained to recognize forged documents," Fox said that of 18,000 applications he helped to clear in the first half of 1975, no forged green cards were found.

Several case workers contacted by the Independent, Press-Telegram doubted their expertise in spotting the cards.

One pointed out that the DPSS could supply cheap black lights which would provide quick checks of green cards. Under the special light, an eagle that is printed on the back would show up, he said.

Sureck said that the INS is willing to supply the DPSS with special booklets on recognizing forged green cards.

A DPSS spokesman said that "past experience has shown that over 90 per cent of all green cards are valid. The case worker uses his very best judgment, but maybe people are forging green cards—we haven't heard anything, though."

"We do not see it (illegal aliens on welfare) as a major problem, but it is an issue we have to confront and deal with," Fox said.

Co-op plan best hope for malpractice cure

Physicians (400 members based in Los Angeles.) But he expects to have quite a hustle rounding up the 13 additional votes needed for the required two-thirds majority of 54 votes to pass the Assembly as a urgency measure.

Why?

Mainly because the state insurance commissioner objects to a concept that is not insurance and would not come within his province, Chel explained. He voiced these objections at committee hearings and is expected to do the same when the bill comes to the assembly floor.

"Wesley Kinder (the commissioner) came from the insurance industry and has a certain blindness," Chel says. "The insurance industry is uneasy about medical malpractice; it was dragged in by the heels and whatever happens might set precedent for other fields."

FRED CHEL
Sees Tough Battle

Also, there has been some opposition from the state corporations commissioner who wants control over disclosure and "investment" aspects. This despite the fact that the defense fund could not be classed as an investment and AB 2780 has already been amended to make detailed disclosures mandatory on the first page of the incorporation agreement, Chel says.

"I'm trying to avoid bureaucratic oversee if at all possible and to place control in the hands of the licensed physicians whose cooperative it is."

He thinks his bill will work and be a viable partial solution for the whole malpractice crisis until there are other measures, including tort reform.

He thinks it will work because it embodies answers to a number of the important issues: doctors policing their own profession, no allotment of state funds, fighting the nuisance claims rather than settling in order to avoid court costs.

The bill incorporates these factors:

—Careful screening of co-op fund members, which malpractice insurance carriers don't do;

—Quick and intensive peer review and the right to discipline members by several methods: prohibiting them from performing any of the procedures that have led to the claim against them, prohibiting them doing the procedure unless a fellow co-op member assists, and ejection from membership;

—Review of all claims by a peer committee of three to five members which decides if they are well founded and may then offer a reasonable settlement;

—No settlement unless the peer committee agrees on it; otherwise the claim will be fought in court. (Insurance companies can and do agree to settle without consulting the insured, thus leading to quick settlement of the so-called "nuisance claims" which comprise perhaps 75 per cent of all those filed, Chel says.)

The bill's premise is an all-for-one, one-for-all operation: when a member is sued and a judgment rendered, the cost of the judgment is born equally by all members. Thus there is the impetus to enforce screening and peer review to weed out members who are liable, Chel explains.

With the refusal to settle any claims except those approved by the peer review committee, Chel says, it will be quite clear that no co-op member is a sitting duck for a quick settlement. And by settling the well founded claims, the co-op will be saving costs of defense in court actions.

The bill amends sections of the corporations and insurance codes to allow groups of doctors not in partnership to form their own malpractice defense fund cooperative. (Existing law permits a physician or a group within a corporation or partnership to self-insure.) Other provisions of the bill: a minimum initial contribution of $5,000 per member and provision of $100,000 minimum umbrella coverage; no investment of funds without authorization of the coop board.

The more doctors in the coop, the bigger the fund. But regardless of the amount of up-front money, the members are responsible for pro-rata shares of settlements.

AB 2780 had its genesis last September when a group of orthopedic physicians, concerned about the developing crisis, came to Chel and asked about setting up their own collective trust account to insure themselves or establish a defense fund. He asked the legislative counsel's opinion, made his own studies and then started drafting his bill.

Saturday, Dr. William Hyman, president of the Long Beach Medical Association, publicly wished him luck. "It's an excellent bill; I hope it passes," he said. "Although I might not join such a co-op, the United Physicians of California think its fine and most doctors I know would be in favor of this option," he said.

More endorsement came from Dr. George Evashwick, Long Beach member of the Cooperative American Physicians and one of the original espousers of defense funds. Said he, "This is the only bill that doesn't ask anything from the state or anyone else.

"CAP has over 400 members now and a list of over 1,000 waiting to join as soon as this bill is law... It's the best answer we have," he added.

Wreckers still at work on Hubbard Bldg.

Workers continued tearing fire escapes and other outside metal work off the 54-year-old Omar M. Hubbard Building in downtown Long Beach Saturday in preparation for final demolition of the structure.

The 11-story building at 310 W. Broadway is the only structure left to be demolished in the city's new City Hall-Main Library-Art Museum superblock.

Environmentalist Peter Devereaux has filed a suit against the city seeking to halt demolition of the Hubbard Building on grounds that it could provide housing near the ocean for low and middle-income people.

He earlier won a temporary restraining order against the city, preventing municipal officials from demolishing the building. However, when the order was issued, the structure already had been handed over to the contractor for demolition.

Devereaux's effort to obtain a restraining order against the contractor, Roger Roy Land Clearing Co., Inc. of Chatsworth, was denied Friday by Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Norman Dowds.

Officials of the contracting firm could not be reached for comment, but workers could, conceivably, continue demolition of the building with a wrecking ball since the company has not been ordered by the court to stop.

Thieves pry door, take TV, guns

Burglars who pried open a door at the home of Staneley R. Lospp, 3581 Halbrite Ave., stole a television set, six rifles and a shotgun with a total value of $1,605, police reported Saturday.

Ford fears divisiveness by Reagan

in the North Carolina mountains. The President traveled by motorcade instead.

At Spruce Pine only 1,000 persons were waiting although there had been 8,000 a few hours earlier before the rain drove most of the crowd to seek shelter.

The President watched a performance of the Avery High Mountain Cloggers, a folk dance group. Then he was taken on a two-hour drive to Hickory, where 4,500 persons had waited three hours in the Lenoir Rhyne College gymnasium for his arrival. It was his last stop before returning to Washington.

As the first president to visit Hickory since Calvin Coolidge passed through in an automobile in the 1920s, Ford received a rousing reception.

In a question-and-answer session, Ford made these points:

—The U.S. is doing everything it can to learn the status of Americans missing in action in Indochina, but "the problem is a difficult one because we're quite frankly dealing with international pirates."

—He certainly will consider a woman when he makes his choice for a vice presidential running mate if he wins the Republican nomination.

—The Soviet Union and Cuba would not be in Angola today if Congress had approved his administration's request for $28 million in aid for two Western-backed factions in that African country.

Democrats were meeting Saturday in congressional district conventions in Oklahoma, meanwhile, to choose 28 of the state's 37 delegates to the national convention. The other nine delegates are to be chosen at the state conveition April 4.

In Florida, state Democratic officials parceled out the state's 81 national convention delegates Saturday, but supporters of Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington protested the division.

Applying the party's complex delegate selection formula to the certified returns from the March 9 primary, the party's rules committee gave former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter 34 delegates, Alabama Gov. George Wallace 26 and Jackson 21.

The protest came in the 6th Congressional District, where Jackson supporters claimed Carter received one more delegate than he should have. The dispute centered over the rounding off of figures made necesary by a new national party prohibition against fractional delegates.

Ford made his statements at a Charlotte airport news conference as he began a one-day campaign swing through the state.

Asked about efforts by various Republican mayors, governors and other officials to encourage Reagan to quit the race in the interest of party harmony, Ford replied: "I really don't care if he gets out. Our campaign is predicated on going to the convention in Kansas City and getting the nomination, and that is a forerunner of victory in November."

He said Reagan's candidacy potentially could have a divisive effect on the party, repeating a statement he initially made in an interview Friday.

North Carolina Gov. James E. Holshouser Jr., Ford's regional campaign coordinator and one of those who urged Reagan to quit, was more emphatic as he waited for the President to arrive in Charlotte.

He said Reagan's refusal to step down has put the Republican Party "right on the edge of divisiveness."

Holshouser said he hopes "that after Mr. Ford wins on Tuesday, Reagan will give it a good look."

Reagan, also campaigning in North Carolina on Saturday, said Friday he will not abandon the campaign and accused the White House of engineering the efforts to have him quit.

In a speech before a GOP breakfast at Charlotte, the President said his policies have put the nation on the road to recovery from its worst recession in 40 years. "Things are really looking up for the United States of America and we should be proud of that," he said.

He noted the consumer price index rose only one-tenth of 1 per cent in February, the lowest monthly rise in four years, and added: "This new announcement is powerful evidence that we're getting inflation under control."

Wallace, Reagan awaiting crucial N.C. primary vote

By ROBERT B. CULLEN

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP) — Tuesday's North Carolina primary could be the last chance for George Wallace and Ronald Reagan to prove they can be winning presidential candidates.

North Carolina is a state both once said they expected to win. It is a state with more favorable factors for them than any they will encounter in the next month of primaries.

Wallace has a long history of popular support here. He easily carried North Carolina in 1972. He put heavy emphasis on the busing issue to defeat favorite son Terry Sanford and Rep. Shirley Chisholm, the black congresswoman from New York. Wallace got 50.2 per cent of the vote.

THIS YEAR, Wallace says he realizes that the busing issue has cooled off in North Carolina since 1972. "People have gotten ued to it," he said last week.

Nonetheless, Wallace must win in the South to prove that he, and not former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, represents the popular will of the Democratic party's Southern wing.

A number of breaks, combined with the triumphs he fashioned in New Hampshire, Florida and Illinois, have pushed Carter into the favorite's role here.

The first break came when Sanford withdrew in January.

CARTERWashington Sen. Henry Jackson, Arizona Rep. Morris Udall and former Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma all entered the primary. But Udall and Harris decided not to campaign. Jackson got an organization started and made two appearances. Then he quit the state.

His campaign manager said Jackson was going to finish third no matter how hard he tried and he might as well spend his time and money in Pennsylvania and New York.

Wallace tacitly acknowledged the importance of the state to him by making some major changes in his campaign tactics upon arriving here from Illinois.

HE ATTACKED Carter personally as a "warmed-over McGovern," referring to the 1972 Democratic presidential nominee, Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota.

Wallace tried to confront the doubts about his physical ability by telling his audiences that his health was good. He also budgeted $135,000 for advertising, enough to saturate the state in the final week of the campaign.

Carter's state organization has swollen with each primary victory. He confidently predicted he will win the primary, and some of his aides have speculated that a decisive win might effectively end Wallace's candidacy.

WALLACE has vowed to go on regardless of how well he does. "Nothing is do or die. I have no intention of getting out of the primaries," he said last week.

Reagan has had to answer similar questions following his five straight primary losses to President Ford.

The Ford-Reagan race has accentuated the split in the state's Republican organization. One group, led by Gov. James E. Holshouser, supports Ford. The other, led by Sen. Jesse Helms, R.-N. C., backs Reagan.

The even division of strength between the two factions was last shown in the 1972 gubernatorial primary when Holshouser defeated James Gardner by less than 2,000 votes in a race widely viewed as a precursor of this primary.

SEVERAL months ago, Reagan was confidently pictured as ahead by Helms and state campaign manager Tom Ellis. But since his losses elsewhere, they have said only that "he could win."

They have also tossed aside Reagan's "11th commandment" of not attacking a fellow Republican. During the past 10 days Ellis has called almost daily news conferences to hurl one charge after another at Holshouser and the rest of the Ford organization.

Ellis has also begun to draw the racial issue into the campaign. He circulated a radio tape which erroneously stated that Ford "told an NAACP group in Massachusetts that Sen. (Edward) Brooke (R-Mass.) would be his running mate."

Ellis also has printed flyers reproducing newspaper articles about Holshouser's support of Soul City, a black new-town project which Helms has criticized for misuse of federal funds.

The town's principal developer, Floyd McKissick, is a former director of the Congress of Racial Equality and a registered Republican.

Ford has confined his efforts to a pair of weekend trips into the state. On one, he arrived a few hours after the Department of the Interior announced a decision to include a portion of the state's New River in the national Wild and Scenic River system, saving it from impoundment by a proposed hydroelectric project in Virginia.

Last month Barbara Simpson, a member of the state Utilities Commission, was appointed by Ford to the Federal Power Commission.

The President was to make his second campaign appearance Saturday with stops in Charlotte, Asheville, Spruce Pine and Hickory.

O'Neill declares Ford blocking vote reform

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The House majority leader accused President Ford Saturday of blocking campaign reform legislation now that he seems assured of the Republican nomination for President and his need for federal primary subsidies "no longer exists."

Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., warned the President that if he vetoed the election bill in the form that is expected to reach the House floor next week, "the strong likelihood exists that there will be no further legislation and therefore no public financing for the rest of the campaign."

ONLY Friday, Ford accused Congress of "retreating from its commitment to clean and fair elections" and repeated his threat to veto any campaign bill that went beyond a simple extension of the major powers of the Federal Election Commission, now scheduled to lapse on Monday.

Chief among the functions the commission will lose, under a January Supreme Court ruling, is the authority to make subsidy payments to national parties for their conventions and to presidential candidates of both parties to help finance their primary campaigns.

IF DEMOCRATIC congressional leaders should carry out O'Neill's counterthreat to let the commission lapse permanently, neither of the major party candidates for president would be able to collect the $20.2 million in federal funds to which each would be entitled for the general election campaign.

In that event, both parties would be dependent on private contributions as they have in the past. This would almost certainly give President Ford a substantial financial advantage over the Democratic nominee, precisely the ind of advantage the new campaign law was designed to eliminate.

O'Neill said in his statement that Ford "now that he seems to have effectively eliminated the challenge to his Party's nomination...is assured of the same kind of outpouring of money from the business and corporate community that fattened the coffers of his predecessor..."

The Democratic campaign bill, scheduled for final Senate action early this week and House debate beginning Wednesday, includes two provisions that O'Neill and other Democrats regard as essential to prevent "big business" from getting "a virtual blank check" to support Ford and other Republicans.

ONE provision involved limiting a corporation, conglomerate or international labor union to a single political action committee, rather than one for each subsidiary or state or local component. These committees collect voluntary contributions from stockholders and members and divide the proceeds among political candidates favored by the committee.

The second major goal of the Democratic bill is to reverse a 1975 commission decision that permitted corporate political action committees to solicit contributions from all their employes, rather than from stockholders and executives only.

HHH sees Demo win

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., predicted on Saturday that Democrats would capture the White House next November because most Americans want a strong central government.

"Victory will only be ours if we offer sensible alternatives to a morally bankrupt Republican administration," he said in a speech prepared for the Young Democrats of Virginia.

"We will not win because we are against the government we want to run, but because we are for government which cares about people. We will win because we dare to pioneer."

Humphrey said that despite a decline in public confidence in government institutions, "the American people will not tolerate timid national leadership."

Copter crash fatally injures Marine pilot

PHILADELPHIA (AP)— A Marine pilot and Vietnam War veteran, Capt. James Motisi, 31, died Saturday, 17 hours after his helicopter crash-landed in a wooded area near Willow Grove Air Station north of here.

Motisi, 31, of Franklin Hill Lakes, N.J., was an 11-year veteran of the Marine Corps Reserve. He served in Vietnam from August 1969 to July 1970, an air base spokesman said.

Two other Marine reservists were injured in the incident.

Motisi was co-pilot of the aircraft, which was on a routine training mission when it crashed Friday night.

Deli looted after child opens door

Associated Press

Approximately 30 persons looted a dairy and delicatessen early Saturday after two adults slipped a small child into the store to open the front door, police said.

Officers took all of them into custody and 10 were expected to be booked.

Police said two adults pried a side door of the delicatessen in the Rampart area of Los Angeles partly open, and sent in the child to open the front door.

The two took several items from the store, hailed a passing taxi and went to a house, where they called friends and told them the store was open, said Police Sgt. James Laker.

The store was looted of about $5,000 in merchandise, including 80 cases of beer and 60 gallons of milk, Laker said.

Officers located the two adults who broke into the store by tracing them through the taxi dispatcher.

Laker said about half the merchandise was recovered from other persons involved.

Teachers threaten president

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Sacramento State University teachers, in a power struggle with school President James Bond, are threatening "nonrecognition and noncooperation" with Bond's administration.

The teachers voted 426-177 last week to endorse a six-page list of complaints against Bond and a promise of future action if he does not change his policies. Seventy per cent of the faculty voted.

Teachers have complained that Bond does not consult with them on promotions or dismissals. They also want more control over the selection of department chairmen.

The faculty also called for reinstatement of Eugene Morris, executive director of a campus foundation, whose firing Bond helped engineer.

Bond contended Morris couldn't work with the administration. Morris accused Bond of trying to cover up spending irregularities.

Bond issued a statement saying university lawyers have found the teachers' demands "clearly illegal." He assailed the "irresponsibility of such empty referendums."

"The 'abuses' alleged have been nothing more than attempts to bring this campus into conformity with state law and with policies established by the trustees of the California State University and Colleges system," Bond said.

Toxic fumes from blaze overcome 42

Associated Press

Authorities said 40 firemen and two reporters were examined at a hospital Saturday after inhaling toxic fumes at the site of a commercial garage blaze in Hollywood.

Investigators said the men had inhaled fumes from a powdered chemical substance caled acrylamide, used to clean auto parts.

Firemen said they controlled the afternoon fire in about 20 minutes. After the flames were knocked down, the victims complained of skin irritation, upset stomachs and dizziness.

Two firemen were admitted to Los Angeles New Hospital for 24 hours observation and were reported to be in satisfactory condition.

The rest of the victims were treated and released, officials said.

2 STATE AIDES 'THREATENED'

Associated Press

California's Justice Department is investigating an alleged assassination plot against Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger and Republican State Sen. H.L. Richardson of Arcadia, it was reported Saturday.

The report named the two officials as the latest public figures to be identified as possible targets of self-styled revolutionary groups known as the Emiliano Zapata Unit and the New Dawn Collective.

IT HAD been disclosed earlier that the FBI and the Justice Department had learned of an alleged plot by the group against President Ford and Former Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Investigators in Los Angeles said their information on the plots was based on statements made by an informant in the aftermath of a police raid Feb. 21 in Richmond at a supposed Zapata Unit hideout.

Six persons were arrested and authorities confiscated explosives and timing devices.

Charles E. Casey, assistant director of the State Justice Department, said of Richardson and Younger:

"We have taken security precautions concerning both these individuals and I'm really not at liberty to say more than that."

HE ADDED, however, that persons who allegedly planned the assassinations, "did have an organization, did have weapons, did have explosives and did have a plan."

He said those involved in the plans kept Younger and Richardson under surveillance for an undisclosed time.

Investigators also said the credibility of their informant may be in question.

Saturday's disclosures were made in the Los Angeles Times.

Body in barrel found in river

ISLETON (AP) — Sheriff's deputies Saturday sought the identity of a man whose body was found stuffed in a barrel floating in the Sacramento River.

The man, in his late 20s or early 30s, had dark hair and a short beard, and both his arms were tattooed.

Colorado girl to be first Claremont coed

CLAREMONT (AP) — A 17-year-old Colorado student set on becoming a mining engineer is the first woman to be admitted to Claremont Men's College in its 30-year history, officials announced Saturday.

Kathleen Evans of Lakewood, Colo., an honor student at Wheat Ridge High School, is the first of about 50 women who will enroll in September.

Trustees decided a year ago to accept women at the school, which emphasizes public affairs training.

"With so many women going into business and government now it was thought prudent to offer this training to women students," said college spokesman Tom Hall.

Miss Evans, daughter of a mining engineer, will enter a five-year management-engineering program.

U.S. ready to battle newest flu

By HARALD SCHMECK JR.
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON—It was as though they heard a single scream in the night and then silence.

It was a single aberrant outbreak of flu at Ft. Dix, N.J., first detected last month. It startled public health experts because it was a new virus—possibly a harbinger of a new worldwide strain, a warning of serious danger next winter.

The outbreak may have affected 500 or more men. There was one death. For public health specialists it has been a dilemma because they have searched the nation and found no other outbreak with the same virus. Yet a decision must be made, probably within days, on whether the Ft. Dix episode means that an entirely new influenza vaccine must be developed for next winter's flu season.

EXCLUSIVE

In recent days, top federal health experts here have been discussing possible unprecedented action against flu. Apparently no recommendation has yet been sent to F. David Mathews, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, but a decision is expected next week.

Some public health leaders, both within and outside the federal ranks, expect the decision will be to request from Congress enough money to provide flu vaccine for all Americans next winter. The probable cost has been estimated, by one expert, at $180 million to $200 million.

At a meeting in Atlanta about a week ago, a group of leading advisers on vaccine policy to the federal government spent an entire day discussing the issue. At the end of the meeting they seemed to be coming close to a decision in favor of a new vaccine.

"We are close to the point of thinking we will have to bite the bullet," said Dr. David J. Sencer, director of the Center for Disease Control, at the close of the meeting there.

BITING THE BULLET means recommending manufacture of about 200 million doses of vaccine by next winter, if possible, and a nationwide, government-supported campaign to vaccinate everyone who would accept it. No comparable effort against flu has ever been made before.

A decision to try it this year would be based on two key factors:

First, and probably most important, the Ft. Dix outbreak may have given six months advance warning that a new strain of flu is being seeded in the American population and may become the next widespread strain.

Second, there is evidence suggesting that the virus found at Ft. Dix may be of the same type that caused the greatest worldwide flu outbreak in modern history—the great pandemic of 1918-19.

There is no certainty about either of these points, nor is there any way of getting proof before making the decision. Whatever choice is made will be a gamble.

"It's a choice between gambling with money or gambling with lives," said Dr. Harry M. Meyer Jr., director of the Food and Drug Administration's Bureau of Biologics.

In recent years, industry has produced about 20 million doses of flu vaccine annually, almost all of it distributed through normal commercial channels of prescription drug sales. The manufacturers are already far along in their normal vaccine production process, according to Dr. Meyer.

BUT CURRENT EFFORTS are aimed at producing vaccine against Influenza B, which changes little from year to year, and the type of influenza that has been widespread in the United States this past winter. It is called A-Victoria for the Australian state where it was first discovered early last year. This would be of virtually no use against the new strain of virus discovered at Ft. Dix.

'We're close to point of biting the bullet'

Millions of fertilized chicken eggs would be needed for another vaccine production effort, and they would have to be ordered quickly. Many more vaccine guns would also be needed for administering the "shots." These too would have to be ordered almost at once.

An effort to mount a nationwide program that would begin next fall or winter would be a tight race against time. Scientists and vaccine experts from industry and government are to meet Thursday to discuss the logistics problems. At an earlier meeting late last month, industry technical experts said the "go" or "no-go" decision would have to be made well before April 1.

For scientists and administrators the dilemma is that the decision for or against action on this grand scale will have to be made almost exclusively on the evidence from Ft. Dix—which might turn out to have been a fluke.

The climactic event in that outbreak began on Feb. 3 when a 19-year-old combat trainee turned up at sick call complaining of a sore throat and other symptoms of a bad cold. He had a moderate temperature—100.4—and was told to stay in quarters for 48 hours, a public health official said. The next night, however, the recruit went out on a training march, collapsed and was rushed to the base hospital where he was found dead on arrival.

AN AUTOPSY SHOWED the typical condition of lungs beset by influenza-caused pneumonia.

Virus experts took a swab of the recruit's trachea to discover specifically what caused the pneumonia. It proved to be none of the strains that have caused epidemics this past winter or in recent years. Instead the virus appeared to be that of swine influenza. The same unexpected virus was grown from specimens collected from four non-fatal flu cases at Ft. Dix.

Didn't pull any strings, Callaway says

By NICHOLAS M. HORROCK
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON—Howard H. "Bo" Callaway, former Army secretary who has voluntarily stepped aside as President Ford's campaign manager, said Saturday he never used his government position to benefit a Colorado ski resort in which he is the principal stockholder.

Callaway said in an interview that he used "minuscule" amounts of time in his 27 months as secretary to attend to personal business affairs and that this had included several contacts with Agriculture Department officials in behalf of the resort.

He said that Defense Department regulations permitted him, as a political appointee, to "look after my financial interests." Callaway denied that he had had any part in transfers of National Forest Service personnel who had helped evaluate proposals of the Crested Butte Development Co.

Callaway denounced press reports that made him appear to be a "wheeler-dealer," but he acknowledged contacts with friends that might have given rise to suspicion.

Callaway has been accused of pressuring Forest Service and Agriculture Department officials to get them to allow the resort at Crested Butte, Colo., to expand. The expansion plan involved land owned by the Forest Service, which is a part of the Agriculture Department.

Callaway voluntarily withdrew from the campaign one week ago in the aftermath of the allegations.

Callaway also said he interceded with White House officials as a private citizen in the early 1970s to urge the government not to ban cyclamates as an artificial sweetener. Earlier, Callaway was former President Nixon's southern campaign manager in the 1968 presidential election.

He said he had called Peter Flannigan, a senior aide to Nixon, in behalf of the Royal Crown Cola Co., a Georgia soft-drink manufacturer, which used the sweetener in its drinks. Callaway's brother is a member of the company's board of directors.

IN OCTOBER 1969, then-HEW Secretary Robert Finch announced that the banning of cyclamates and the withdrawal of the artificial sweetener was done in stages beginning in early 1970.

Callaway said he had entertained several government officials at the ski resort, including William P. Clements, Jr., deputy secretary of defense; John W. Warner, then Navy secretary and John L. McLucas, Air Force secretary in February 1974.

He said he invited Flannigan to ski at his resort shortly after the cyclamate matter, but Flannigan had not made the trip.

Callaway said he never entertained Ford at the resort either before or after Ford became President.

In a series of news reports beginning March 12, it was reported that Callaway met on July 3, 1975, with J. Phil Campbell, undersecretary of Agriculture; Richard A. Ashworth, assistant to the undersecretary of Agriculture, and Rexford A. Resler, associate chief of the Forest Service, to discuss a proposal to expand the resort. Expansion plans required Forest Service approval since the ski-lift areas are on leased land in the Gunnison National Forest.

After this meeting Neil Edstrom, a district forest ranger, and John T. Minow, his supervisor, were transferred. Edstrom had written, and Minow had approved, a recommendation that Crested Butte's expansion proposal be denied. The proposal later was approved by new personnel assigned to the area.

CALLAWAY said he exerted no pressure to have the two men moved. "Categorically no, I didn't know them. I didn't know who they were, I had nothing to do with it," he said. Both officials were well known to other Crested Butte officials, however.

Yet in August 1973, Callway had attended a meeting with Forest Service officials on the Crested Butte matter in Colorado where both men who were later transferred were in attendance.

Callaway said that in October 1973, some six months after he became Army secretary, he called Ashworth and arranged an appointment for his brother-in-law, Ralph Walton, who operates Crested Butte, to discuss delays by the Forest Service in handling the expansion proposal.

He said that he and Ashworth and Campbell were long time friends. "I would have had as much influence with them as Bo Callaway, friend, then as Bo Callaway, secretary of the Army," he said.

He said that during his tenure as Army secretary he called Ashworth on eight occasions. Only two contacts, he said, involved Crested Butte.

On July 3, 1975, Callaway said, the day he resigned as Army secretary to take over Ford's campaign, Ashworth called him and asked to come over with Campbell to say goodbye and give him a status report on Crested Butte.

Paper blocked from publishing 2 editions

PHILADELPHIA (NYTS) — The Philadelphia Inquirer published only one of three editions Saturday because construction-union demonstrators, some of whom were disorderly, blocked entrances to the building for 11 hours.

Federal marshals dispersed the crowd of about 250 pickets at midnight Friday under a restraining order issued by a federal judge. Two Inquirer photographers were injured by the pickets, neither seriously.

The Inquirer charged that the demonstration was a conspiracy among the Philadelphia Building Trades Council, Mayor Frank L. Rizzo, Police Commissioner Joseph F. O'Neill and City Solicitor Sheldon Albert.

The Inquirer has been feuding with Rizzo, a former police commissioner, for more than a year, and the mayor this week sued the newspaper for $6 million, saying he had been libeled in a satirical column in last Sunday's newspaper.

Thomas J. Magrann, business agent for the Building Trades Council, said the council had not sanctioned the picketing but that individual members objected to recent articles in the Inquirer about nonunion construction companies.

Mafia, 'closed' since '57, will initiate new members

By NICHOLAS GAGE
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — For the first time since 1957, New York's five Mafia "families" have been authorized by the national Mafia commission to initiate new members, according to law-enforcement officials.

The officials said that each family had been given permission to initiate 10 new members, but had been told to select them from men who were already moneymakers in the rackets, had no legal problems facing them and were of proven loyalty.

The membership books were closed in 1957 to prevent gangsters who were informers for law enforcement agencies from gaining entry into Mafia families. One Mafia informer, Joseph Valachi, testified in 1962 that the move followed a series of arrests of high-level leaders, including Vito Genovese, then the most powerful Mafia boss in the country.

But about six weeks ago the commission met in the Greater New York area and approved the opening of the books on a limited scale, the officials said.

The change has been confirmed both by the police and federal officials through informants and court-authorized electronic surveillance.

"There's no doubt they've opened the books again on a tightly controlled basis," said a Justice Department official. "They've been holding initiation ceremonies in New York for the past month."

He said the ceremonies had been held in the homes of under-bosses and selected family captains, not in the homes of Mafia bosses, which are under close surveillance.

"Apparently," he said, "the initiation ceremony they're using is still close to what Valachi described — guns, knives, oaths of silence, the whole thing."

Among those recently initiated, he said, were John Russo, the driver and bodyguard for Frank Tieri, who is the reputed boss of the Vito Genovese family, Benaro Mangano, known as Benny Eggs, a successful bookmaker and loan shark, and Salvatore Franzese, who reportedly heads the lucrative gambling operations of his uncle, Sonny Franzese, a captain in the Joseph Colombo family who is now serving a 50-year prison term.

The decision to reopen the books indicates a decline in the influence of Carlo Gambino, boss of the biggest Mafia family in the city, who opposed the move.

IT ALSO signifies the emergence of Carmine Galente, the new boss of the Mafia family of Joseph Bonanno, as a major power. Galente, who finished a 15-year term for narcotics last year, led the fight to persuade the commission to open the books.

According to the officials, Galente argued that all Mafia families were declining rapidly, because new members were not being brought in to replace those who had died and major moneymakers in the rackets were not being brought into the families.

Being initiated, or "made," carries great honor and prestige in organized crime. A made member is called a "good fellow" and has the right to participate in "sitdown" — conferences to solve grievances.

A nonmember must be represented by someone who is made and does not have as good a chance to get a decision in his favor. Moreover, made members do not help or trust gangsters who are not members the way they do each other.

OLDER Mafia bosses such as Gambino reportedly have felt that this special relationship among members would make whole Mafia families vulnerable if someone who is an informant was initiated.

They went along with a few initiations during the 19 years the books were closed, but only when it was absolutely necessary. One such instance took place three years ago, when most of the leaders of the Colombo family were injured, imprisoned or in hiding and Alphonse Persico was "made" in order to lead the Colombo family in the war against its rebel faction, the Gallo gang.

Gambino, however, found himself in the minority at the recent meeting of the nine-member national commission, the officials said. His strongest supporter in the past, Stefano Magaddino of Buffalo, has died and his other staunch ally, Joseph Zerilli, the boss in Detroit, could not attend because of illness.

The other bosses, who felt that opening the books now was essential to the survival of the Mafia, carried the day. But in deference to Gambino they agreed to limit new members to 10 per family.

No progress in talks to end Vegas strike

LAS VEGAS (AP) — A Howard Hughes-owned casino, one of 12 gambling spas shut down by a Las Vegas Strip strike, reopened Saturday.

But opposing sides appeared no nearer to settling the 10-day labor dispute which is said to be costing the facilities $1.4 million a day exclusive of gambling revenues.

The Silver Slipper Casino reopened its doors at noon with nonunion employes and management manning gaming tables and a bar.

Clark Ecton, manager of the Silver Slipper, said about a quarter of all employes remained on their jobs and provided more than enough manpower to service the 19 gaming tables.

The six establishments owned by Hughes' Summa Corp. were the first to shut down when the walkout of service employes and musicians hit 15 strip hotels March 11. Summa first laid off, then put back on the payroll, its dealers and other nonunion employes.

Perry Lieber, spokesman for Summa, branded as "a lie" rumors that the Hughes organization would bring in outside workers to staff the hotels. Lieber said no other Hughes hotel would be opened until after the strike was settled. The Silver Slipper was reopened, he said, because "it was the easiest to open, it has no hotel."

For the second day in a row Saturday, negotiations between culinary workers and bartenders unions and the Nevada Resort Association yielded no progress.

U.S. concerned over spread of Cuban influence

By DAVID BINDER
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON—In the last two years Cuba has gained considerable influence among the small republics of the Caribbean and is now enjoying some regional support for its military ventures in Africa, in the assessment of top-ranking U.S. policymakers.

The principal friends in the region of the government of Premier Fidel Castro are Guayana and Jamaica, both of which endorsed Cuba's intervention on behalf of the Marxist-Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola, which won the civil war in Angola.

But administration officials believe that the younger generation of political leaders throughout the Caribbean view Cuba as the most successful model of social and economic development in their experience. "The young leaders are very radical," one official observed, adding that they are "sympathetic to Castro."

As a result, the Ford Administration recently began to examine the implications for United States security posed by expanding Cuban influence in what had largely been a United States sphere.

Two United States specialists on the Caribbean said that it would be "relatively cheap and easy" for the Soviet Union and Cuba to acquire an additional base or two in the region simply by offering to bail out one of the heavily indebted Caribbean republics.

Already Prime Minister Forbes Burnham of Guayana has promised Cuba that it could use Guayana airfields to transport troops and supplies for Cuban forces in Africa in any effort to liberate Rhodesia and South-West Africa from white minority rule.

BURNHAM, THE UNCONTESTED political leader of Guayana even though his fellow-blacks are outnumbered by East Indians, has recently put his country on a path toward a Marxist society. He has stimulated high-level contacts with Cuba to the point where administration officials believe that Castro has become his most important ally.

At the other end of the Caribbean, Prime Minister Michael N. Manley of Jamaica has also been cultivating closer relations with Castro, whom he first met in September 1973.

There are understood to be 83 Cubans in Jamaica helping build a dam, a school and a factory. "With 20 per cent unemployment in Jamaica, it makes you wonder why they need Cuban construction crews," a United States official remarked.

In the administration assessment, Manley is basically a democratic socialist who does not seek to impose a Communist system on the 1.9 million Jamaicans. But the United States officials worry that Jamaica's grave and deteriorating economic situation—with "only a week and a half's foreign exchange validity," as one put it—may drive Manley to assume authoritarian powers.

Firemen unaware they were in house

6 children die in fire

OXFORD, N.C. (AP) — Six children from three families died inside a blazing home Saturday as fire fighters battled the flames, unaware that the building was occupied, officials said.

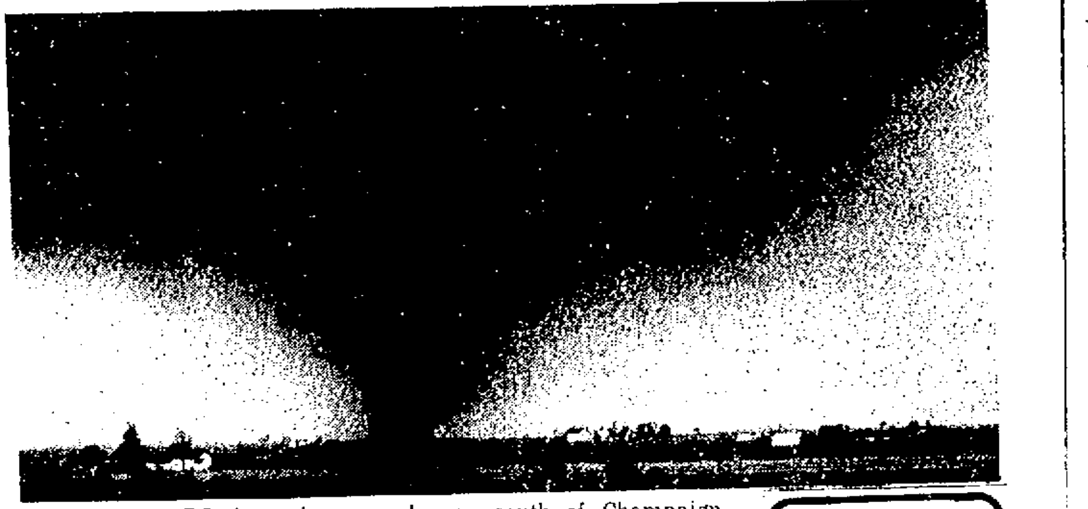
The children, aged 16 years to 9 months, were found dead inside the five-room frame house after fire fighters spent an hour bringing the blaze under control, an Oxford Volunteer Fire Department spokesman said.

When fire fighters arrived on the scene, flames were beginning to break through the roof of the green and white house. The spokesman said a neighbor was asked if anyone was inside the house, but the neighbor said he did not know.

After the blaze was brought under control, fire fighters went inside and found the bodies of five children huddled together near one bedroom window and a sixth body in another bedroom, officials said.

"Nobody believed it at first because none of the neighbors said anything about people being in there. It appeared to be unoccupied. It looked like a new house," said fire fighter Al Woodlief.

"But when we got inside, we saw it was occupied, and when firemen reached the end of a hallway at the back bedroom we found the bodies," he said



TORNADO DIPS down in a rural area south of Champaign-Urbana, Ill., Saturday, marring the first day of spring. Several communities reported damage estimated at $1 million, and eight persons were hurt. —AP Wirephoto

Twisters mar spring's start

Associated Press

Tornadoes ripped through towns and farm country in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Louisiana and Arkansas on the first day of spring Saturday, killing at least two persons and injuring an undetermined number of others, authorities said.

In Michigan, the Oakland County sheriff's office said a tornado hit a residential area in West Bloomfield township and struck a number of businesses. Authorities estimated that at least 100 persons were hurt in that area of Michigan.

The two persons killed were reported to have been in a car when the twister struck.

In Kilbourne, La., a tornado demolished the general store, jumped across the state line into Arkansas and injured nearly 20 persons, state police said.

At least five persons were injured when tornadoes struck a mobile home park in northwest Indiana and a rural area north of Lafayette.

In Illinois, twisters touched down at Vorbees and moved through Bement, Ivesdale, Sadorus, Philo and into Ogden.

FBI sat on bomb data 4 years

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Alabama Atty. Gen. Bill Baxley has revealed that the FBI withheld for almost four years information relating to the 1963 Birmingham church bombing which killed four black girls.

Baxley said he originally requested the information in March 1971, but didn't receive it until last December. He declined to speculate on the reason for the delay, which hampered the investigation of the unsolved incident. It occurred at a time when the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was leading civil rights demonstrations in Birmingham.

An FBI spokesman in Washington confirmed the dates given by Baxley for requesting and receiving the information.

The spokesman said that when the bureau first received the request it turned the matter over to the Civil Rights Division of the Justice Department. When that office informed the FBI it was all right to provide the information, the spokesman said, "we promptly did so."

A spokesman for the Justice Department commented that there was no effort to withhold the information, but Baxley's request "just slipped between the cracks some way or other."

Since the appointment of Edward H. Levi as U.S. attorney general, Baxley said, the Justice Department has been cooperating fully with Alabama officials in the investigation of the bombing, for which no suspects have ever been arrested.

Baxley has said that he knows who was responsible for the bombing and that "the ones still alive are going to be brought to justice."

Killed were 11-year-old Denise McNair, whose father, Chris McNair, is now a state representative, and Cynthia Wesley, Carol Robertson and Addie Mae Collins, all 14.

FBI opens Mellon inquiry

KAREN BOYD MELLON
Daughters Seized

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — The FBI said Saturday it has launched an inquiry to learn whether federal law was violated in the reported kidnaping of two children Friday from their mother in Brooklyn by her divorced husband, Seward Prosser Mellon, Pittsburgh banker.

According to the account given by Lester Carew, a bodyguard for Constance Elizabeth, 5, and Catherine Leigh, 7, three men posing as FBI agents disarmed him and took the children from him. They had been living with their mother, Karen Boyd Mellon, for the last few months.

The father, an heir to the Mellon empire, said later Friday, "The children are safe with me." But he would not say where they were.

In disclosing the FBI investigation, a spokesman for the agency said, "If it proves that the children were kidnapped, the guilty ones would be subject to 10 years in jail, a $10,000 fine or both. For impersonating federal officers, the penalty is a $1,000 fine, three years in jail or both."

It was unclear on Saturday who was legally entitled to the custody of the children. They were reported to have been abducted originally by agents for the mother while they were visiting her in Durham, N.C., three months ago. Mellon had been granted custody of the youngsters by a Pennsylvania court, before that time.

But last month, a New York State Supreme Court Justice granted the mother custody of the children, a judgment Mellon refused to recognize as legal.

Holy Shroud no fake, 7-year study indicates

By HILMI TOROS
Associated Press

VATICAN CITY — An exhaustive seven-year investigation of the Holy Shroud of Christ shows it cannot be dismissed as a fake relic, a leader of the study team said Saturday.

But he said the experts recommended more tests on what is traditionally held to be the actual linen cloth wrapped around Christ's body after the crucifixion.

"We have not found anything negative (to contradict the belief)," the Rt. Rev. Jose Cottino, vice president of the commission of experts, said in a telephone interview from the northern city of Turin, where the 14-by-three-foot relic is kept in a silver chest.

While the commission's report will not be definitive, he said, it will at least deny that the tradition of the shroud can be dismissed as a myth.

MSGR. Cottino, a native of New Bedford, Mass., said the final report of the commission, established with Vatican approval, will be made public this week.

He said the experts concluded the cloth "could have come from the area and time of our Lord."

Msgr. Cottino said the chief significance in the panel's findings was the failure of extensive photographic and other tests on the Holy Shroud to disprove its authenticity.

Msgr. Cottino said the commission found no definite trace of blood on the cloth. Some students of the Holy Shroud say possible blood stains on it could indicate Christ did not die on the Cross but was still bleeding and died later.

POPE PAUL VI suggested five years ago that special studies be conducted on the "Shroud of Turin."

A Vatican spokesman said the commission's report had not arrived at the Vatican but will be studied when it reaches the central administration of the Roman Catholic Church.

The spokesman said he did not know if the Vatican would take a stand on the final report. He said the investigation was left to the competence of the archdiocese of Turin.

The shroud is wrapped in red silk and kept in a silver chest on an altar, protected by a glass cover and iron grills. It contains an impressed face and the shape of the body believed to be Christ's.

The material is the property of Italy's former royal family, the House of Savoy. It is rarely made public and has been opened no more than 10 times in the last 100 years.

THREE years ago Italian television showed a documentary on the relic, filmed with the permission of Michele Cardinal Pellegrini of Turin.

A Swiss photography expert retained as consultant by the commission told the newspaper La Stampa he could "conclude definitely" from his examination that the Holy Shroud is "not a myth."

The consultant, Max Frei, said his own conclusion was that the cloth is of the same material used in Palestine at the time of the death of Christ.

It is presumed that the shroud was taken from Palestine to Constantinople, then to France and finally to Turin. However, authorities have traced the shroud only to the 14th century, and some historians say they have found little evidence of a shroud in the early Christian era.

THE VATICAN position is that "it is a tradition that the Holy See admits."

West German author Kurt Berna, whose "Holy Shroud Foundation" in Zurich claims to have spent over $150,000 on research, says blood stains on the material prove Christ was alive when taken from the cross.

Berna says his findings would free Jews of Christ's era of guilt for the crucifixion because "the execution was not carried through its completion."

Berna's statement contradicts Gospel accounts and the Vatican's belief that Christ died on the Cross.

The Holy Shroud has been the target of several acts of vandalism. In Oct. 23, 1972, the Holy Shroud Chapel was broken into, and religious objects near the relic were torn apart and set afire. The Holy Shroud was not damaged.

Viets mark anniversary of My Lai with memorial rite

TOKYO (AP)—About 12,000 persons attended a memorial service for the South Vietnamese villagers killed by U.S. soldiers in the 1968 My Lai massacre, according to a Japanese news dispatch from Saigon.

The Asahi newspaper said the service was held at a former American artillery position near the hamlet in central Vietnam on March 16—the seventh anniversary of the massacre.

A Hanoi broadcast quoted survivors as saying 504 villagers were slain by U.S. troops of the American Division.

It said that Tam Nua, a village elder, claimed that expectant mothers were raped before being shot, children were bayoneted and his entire family was wiped out.

"Honestly, even though I have told and retold this story many times, I still feel it is not enough," the broadcast quoted Tam as saying. "We have to tell it again and again to everybody."

The broadcast said My Lai is now a productive hamlet, raising cattle and pigs and growing coconuts and fruit.

A U.S. Army investigation of the massacre reported that at least 347 unarmed civilians were killed.

William L. Calley Jr. of Columbus, Ga., who was a platoon leader at My Lai, was the only person convicted in the massacre.

Thai extend U.S. exit deadline

BANGKOK (AP)—Thailand granted permission Saturday for 270 American military advisers to remain in the country indefinitely and allowed four more months for withdrawal of another 3,900 U.S. servicemen.

Saturday was a deadline for the withdrawal of all U.S. military personnel from Thailand agreed to after Communist-backed regimes came to power in Indochina. But instead of enforcing it, Prime Minister Kukrit Pramoj announced the extension to July.

"It is right and fair that the United States should have time to remove its possessions," he said.

U.S. Ambassador Charles Whitehouse said after emerging from Government House, where Kukrit made the announcement: "We didn't want to stay where we are not wanted. We will be leaving within the time period specified by the Thai government."

The 270 advisers will remain under a 1950 military assistance agreement.

During the Indochina war, Thai-based planes bombed Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos and almost 50,000 U.S. servicemen were stationed in Thailand.

Some factions in Thailand had called for the retention of several thousand American advisers after Saturday at the electronics intelligence center at Ramusen, the sprawling Utapao Air Base and a string of communications and radar sites.

Kukrit ordered a halt to intelligence gathering at Ramusen, 300 miles northeast of Bangkok, and other sites by midnight Saturday.

Kukrit is a caretaker prime minister, ruling until the general elections scheduled April 4. He said it "depends on the next government" whether the withdrawal matter will be reopened.

An embassy spokesman refused to give the schedule for the withdrawal from more than a dozen sites or to discuss background of U.S.-Thai discussions over the last few weeks.

The Thai capital was under full military alert for the third straight day and pro- and anti-American students demonstrated throughout the day. U.S. military personnel throughout the country were ordered to remain on their bases, according to a U.S. spokesman.

Two bombs exploded near where National Student Center demonstrators were cheering the announcement and shouting anti-American slogans. One person was injured.

Two blocks away, the rightist Vocational Students Center was holding a pro-American rally.

Italy told of risks in Red shift

ROME (AP)—Premier Aldo Moro warned his Christian Democratic Party Saturday against accepting a governing alliance with the Communists, declaring it posed risks both for Italy and world peace.

U.S. officials have told both Italy and France that their relations with Washington will be reassessed if the Communists, strengthened by recent gains in local elections in the two NATO countries, get a role in governing at the national level.

Addressing his party congress, Moro suggested a return to an alliance with the Socialist Party and said relations with the Communists should be on the basis of a "serious, rigorous and respectful confrontation."

THE governing Christian Democratic Party, faced by a serious economic crisis and a drive by the Communist Party for a share of power, is expected during the congress to determine the course of its relations with the Communists.

Moro acknowledged the strength of the Communists, who polled a third of the vote in nationwide regional elections least June, running just 2 percentage points behind the Christian Democrats.

He also asserted that Communist Secretary Enrico Berlinguer's assertions of the party's belief in multiparty politics, made during the recent 25th Soviet Party Congress in Moscow, "are rightly objects of attention."

West Bank chief quits

TEL AVIV (AP) — The Arab mayor of Biblical Hebron accused Israeli soldiers of brutality Saturday and resigned as skirmishes between soldiers and Arab youths were reported in Hebron and two other Israeli-occupied west bank towns.

Israli officials said anti-occupation demonstrations that have swept the zone for a month were tapering off despite rock-throwing incidents in Hebron, Nablus and Tulkarim.

Jaabari, a former Jordanian cabinet minister, is the sixth Arab mayor on the west bank to resign since the strife began.

Most west bank Arab leaders have endorsed the Arab summit decision saying the west bank should go to the Palestine Liberation Organization — PLO — to set up a Palestinian state.

The rioting broke out after a Jerusalem court ruled that Jews could pray on the city's Temple Mount, which is holy to Moslems and Jews.

The Israeli court ruling and west bank rioting will be debated at the U.N. Security Council this week at the request of the Arab bloc.

In an unusual move, Israel announced it would participate in the debate even though the PLO will be present.

Israel has boycotted previous U.N. debates and international gatherings where the PLO was represented, accusing the organization of being a terrorist group dedicated to Israel's destruction.

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. (AP) — Beef producers must continue to "take a blood bath" while meat eaters enjoy lower retail prices because of a glut of choice beef on the market, the president of the National Livestock Feeders Association said Friday.

Part of Peking economic recovery plan

The Chinese are coming—to U.S. toy shops

By CAUSEWELL VAUGHAN
Knight News Service

NEW YORK — The People's Republic of China is planning to invade the United States this year — with wooden soldiers. The toys will be among the thousands of items made in the People's Republic that will be offered to American consumers for the first time.

The importation of consumer goods from the People's Republic is part of the country's over-all plan for economic development, which has been getting a helping hand from the U.S. since President Nixon's 1973 visit.

Actually, trade with China started in 1971. Shortly after Nixon's visit, though, the National Council for United States-China Trade was set up. Its president, Christopher Phillips, said that as a result of the consumer goods that will be coming in this year, "our trade with China will be balanced for the first time since it began."

For example, in 1972 U.S. exoports to China totaled $63.5 million. They reached a peak in 1974 at $819 million, but were off last year to $303.6 million and are expected to drop again this year.

Meanwhile, imports from the People's Republic have been increasing steadily: In 1972 they were $32.4 million; last year, $158.3 million. Phillips predicted that the consumer goods would raise the level of imports to between $190 million and $205 million this year.

Trade with Peking has been heavily in favor of the U.S. because of massive exports of grain and other agricultural goods needed by China since it suffered one of its worst droughts.

The consumer goods from China that will hit the market in abundance this year will range from artwork to zori (a kind of sandal) and include biscuits and blouses, chocolates and carved figures, liquor and lingerie, toys and ties.

The Chinese have about 45,000 items consumers can use, and by this time next year most large department stores probably will carry some of them.

One company that is a member of the Washington-based trade council is the China Trade Corp., here in New York, which conducted a three-year study of Chinese goods. Its chairman, Charles Abrams, estimated that as many as 4,000 of the possible 45,000 consumer goods were saleable in this country. The fraction is so small, he said, not because of their quality but because of this country's packaging standards and regulations of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

China Trade Corp. is the only company that will import Chinese products exclusively, Abrams says.

The company hopes to familiarize American consumers with Chinese products with a Chinese Friendship Fair, which will tour major cities during the late summer and fall. "The fair will be a total educational process," Abrams said, "and from the reception similar exhibits have received in other countries, we know it will be a success."

Abrams concedes that, to some extent, the public will be buying products from the People's Republic because of the novelty.

And because of the interest consumers express in the People's Republic, the other China, the Republic of China, may suffer economically.

Dollar making a comeback

By G. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — While currencies of some other major industrial nations have been losing value in recent weeks, the once-beleaguered U.S. dollar has been waging a winning comeback.

An immediate benefit for Americans will be cheaper travel abroad and slightly reduced inflationary pressures at home. Goods from Spain, France, Great Britain and Italy all may be slightly cheaper.

On the other hand, U.S. goods may face cheaper competition from goods of other nations abroad, which could have an adverse impact on the nation's foreign trade.

But the gains in the U.S. dollar for the past year have been impressive, and no one complains anymore that there are billions of unwanted U.S. dollars sloshing uselessly in world money markets.

"The Deutsche-mark and the U.S. dollar obviously are in demand today," Treasury Secretary William Simon told newsmen last week.

The low point in the dollar's value was in February of last year when it was 18.8 per cent below ets 1970 value in comparison with currencies of the nation's major trading partners, who are members of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development.

By January of this year, it was back to within 11.5 per cent of its 1970 value, and for the week ending March 17, after new devaluations in Europe, it was within 10.7 percent of its former value.

The gains have been primarily against the British pound, French franc, Italian lira and Spanish peseta. The German mark has also remained strong, as has the Japanese yen.

The increased value of the dollar is also reflected in its exchange rate with the Special Drawing Right of the International Monetary Fund. It has gone from a low of $1.25 per SDR about eight months ago to $1.15 per SDR in recent weeks.

Oil-exporting nations which a year ago were considering pricing their oil in SDRs instead of dollars because of concern over the falling value of American currency have lately been silent on the issue.

The chief reason for the turn-around in the opinion of economists both in and out of government is that the United States and Germany have made better progress against inflation than have France, Great Britain and Italy.

When the dollar was plunging in value, the U.S. was experiencing inflation above 10 per cent a year. But inflation has now declined to around 6 per cent and consumer prices rose just one-tenth of one per cent in February, the smallest monthly increase in four years.

'Security' key issue for UAW

Knight News Service

DETROIT — Backers of the short workweek and cost-of-living protection for retirees kept pressure on the United Auto Workers leadership until the closing minutes of the union's bargaining convention Saturday.

Both demands have rank-and-file support. More than 1,000 delegates demonstrated in support of the two proposals before the opening of the Friday session.

Their persistence, veteran labor observers said, mandates an effort in these areas by UAW negotiators when the auto and farm-implement contract talks open in mid-July.

A 69-page omnibus resolution adopted by the convention took note of both the need to reduce working time to create more jobs and "the hardship which retirees suffer by reasons of inflation."

But UAW leaders have said that the hard facts of economics dictate choices somewhere below the grass-roots demands for 36 hours work for 40 hours pay and a full cost-of-living allowance (COLA) for retirees.

Both carry sticker prices that make them prohibitively costly, in the leadership view, at a time when they see the nation's economic recovery as tentative.

All railroads but 3 to hike freight rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — An average 4.7 per cent freight rate increase will go into effect on Sunday on all but one railroad operating east of the Mississippi River. The hike will be applied by all but two railroads west of the Mississippi on April 18.

The ICC approved the rate hike on Feb. 20, but the Southern Pacific, the Missouri-Kansas-Texas and the Long Island all refused to increase their rates.

This resulted in the ICC agreeing to delay until March 21 the effective date of the increase to allow the carriers time to decide what action to take.

Bankruptcy losses no longer a club

Banks getting tough on REITs

By REGINALD STUART
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — This time a year ago, the strong threat of a rash of bankruptcies by the nation's troubled real estate investment trusts prompted many of the trusts' bank creditors to ease the terms for trust repayments of the billions of dollars due the banks.

Bankruptcy, it was felt, might result in years of settlement negotiations and could result in the banks' losing more than if they waited the problems out.

Just the reverse seems true today. The banks appear to be closing in on the REITs.

Some lenders have concluded that, after a year of putting together all kinds of REIT rescue packages, they should now seek immediate payment of their loans and run the risk of a REIT bankruptcy.

BANKRUPTCY, some people in banking and real estate now feel, might actually improve the possibilities of banks getting back at least part of what they put into the trusts.

Nearly half the estimated $11 billion in REIT bank loans is held by the nation's 10 largest banks, with several hundred other banks sharing the remainder.

Until about two years ago, when the real estate market began showing serious signs of collapsing, banks and investors viewed realty trusts as attractive new vehicles for expanding real estate development — and reaping good profits. REITs are tax-exempt as long as 90 per cent of their earnings are paid out as dividends, which are taxable to the shareowners. Most of the trusts were formed in the last eight years and by 1974 had placed more than $20 billion, or 20 per cent, of all construction loans, made that year.

UNTIL their problems set in, REITs borrowed money from banks, relent it to developers at higher interest rates, and made their money on the spread between the two. To supplement bank loans, which were considered senior debt, REITs also raised money through private placements and sales of stock, called subordinate or junior debt.

When times were prosperous, most REITs were able to make their payments to banks promptly. But when times went sour, and borrowers from the REITs began to default on payments, a chain reaction occurred. Many REITs are still unable to pay bank debts at the original terms and still pay junior debt on time.

"I think there is a stiffer attitude developing on the part of some banks that in the past perhaps they gave up too much of their own position in order to keep the REITs from insolvency," said William E. Pike, chairman of the credit committee of the Morgan Guaranty Trust Co.

From the REITs point of view, the shift in bankers' thinking has been painful. Morgan, which at the end of 1975 had $257 million in loans outstanding to realty trusts, was cited earlier this month by Continental Mortgage Investors as one of the banks that figures prominently into its decision to file for protection from its creditors under Chapter XI of the Federal Bankruptcy Act.

Morgan was one of 25 bank creditors out of a group of 103 that refused to sign a credit agreement with Continental which trust officials said would have extended the life of the REIT and given it a better chance to work out its portfolio problems without the interference of the courts.

Continental owed more than $500 million to its bank creditors at the time of the bankruptcy filing. Among the more prominent of those refusing to sign the new credit accord were Morgan, to whom Continental owed $6.7 million; the Bank of America, $10.6 million, and the Crocker National Bank, $21.8 million.

The bankruptcy filing by Continental, the nation's second largest realty trust behind the chase. Manhattan Mortgage and Realty Trust, was only the highlight of a series of developments between the banks and the REITs that signaled a shift in bank posture.

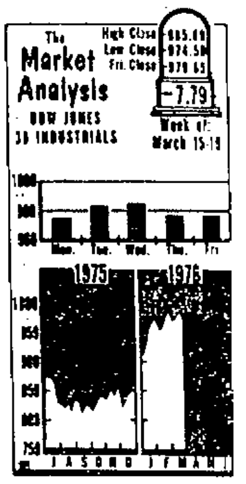

CHART shows stock market's performance over past nine months as reflected in Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks. Dow closed at 979.85 at week's end.

Florida recovery gives hope

By THOMAS MULLANEY
New York Times Service

BOCA RATON, Fla. — There has been a virtual halt in the once-frenzied pace of condominium-building along the Gold Coast and elsewhere in Florida, but the depression of the state's construction industry no longer dampens spirits to the degree it did last year.

Thanks to the general economic recovery in the nation, the bust in building is being largely offset by some concrete gains in other business areas.

The biggest plus all over the Sunshine State this year has been the banner tourist business, spreading a heavy volume of spending among hotels, airlines, stores, restaurants and other attractions from Disneyworld up north to the bottom of the keys, despite the long delay in the perennial baseball training exhibitions.

Other facets of economic activity are on the rise, albeit slowly, and the state's unemployment rate has receded from its exceedingly high rate of 11.5 per cent in January, down from 13 per cent late last year. Even the badly battered housing industry has recently shown a flicker of revival in the private, single-family home sector.

IN ITS latest monthly economic report, the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Miami said that Florida's Southeastern counties, which had been hit by the recession more severely than most other areas, were "on the road to recovery... but the road is not without its obstacles."

The institution's economic index for Dade, Palm Beach and Broward counties rose for the fifth consecutive month in March and moved above the 200 level for the first time since September 1974. A year ago it was under the 190 mark, but three years ago it was around the 214 level.

THE economic upbeat in Florida, which has been developing slowly over the last few months, has been particularly encouraging to economic analysts because this region of the country has provided one of the most dramatic examples of the devastating effects wreaked by the 18-month national recession that officially ended for the country almost a year ago.

This state's gradual start along the comeback trail typifies the character of the nation's recovery — a steady, though not vigorous, improvement of business conditions in a spotty pattern. With such a prospective environment, the outlook for construction and employment remains rather grim for many months ahead and has prompted some sentiment here, as it has elsewhere in the country, for a more stimulative national economic policy.

I am appalled to learn that all lunch meat and hot dogs contain sodium nitrite, an element which causes cancer in laboratory animals. My son and husband love these, and I'm worried. Why don't they take this additive off the market? Where can I buy hot dogs without the sodium nitrite? K.H., Signall Hill.

All hot dogs and lunch meat on the market contain the controversial antibacterial agent sodium nitrite, according to Dr. Harold Hayes, food safety and health officer with the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Washington, D.C. He said that while concentrated doses of the additive have caused cancer in rats, it never has been possible to link human cancer with sodium nitrite. In addition to maintaining the color and flavor of cured meats, the agent's principal role is to prevent botulinum toxin, which can cause botulism poisoning. "We feel the danger of botulism to be far greater than the potential hazard of cancer," Hayes said. New federal regulations that went into effect in January reduced the amount of sodium nitrite used from 200 parts per million to 156 parts per million in curing solutions for all processed products, except bacon and dry-cured products. The use of sodium nitrite has been a controversial issue for some time, with major consumer groups such as Consumers Union and Ralph Nader's Center for the Study of Responsive Law lobbying actively against the preservative.

Almost two months ago I ordered some upholstery work done on six chairs and a medical treatment bench from Anthony's Upholstery in Baldwin Park. When time came for delivery they did not show up. Every time I called they had excuses for not delivering my furniture. I have already paid them $84.50, and I need the furniture in my office. Can you help me? R.J.K., Redondo Beach.

By now you have your furniture. After repeated telephone calls to Anthony's Upholstery and a couple of false promises of delivery, they finally returned your furniture to you. Mrs. Anthony Pedilla, co-owner of the shop, told Action Line her husband had been ill and they had had mechanical problems with their truck.

I would like to know if the houses in the 2500 block of Webster Avenue are going to be bought up by the state for the Terminal Island Freeway extension. Rumors are going around to this effect. R.A., Long Beach.

The plans to extend the Terminal Island Freeway to Artesia Boulevard in Compton have been shelved because of a lack of funds, and in any event, the proposed route was east of Webster, and the state was not planning to acquire any homes in your area. State Sen. Joseph M. Kennick, D-Long Beach, has introduced a bill, SB1075, which would require the California Highway Commission to resume plans for part of the extension, but even if this measure is signed into law, the state has no plans to buy any houses on Webster Avenue, according to a spokesman for the California Transportation Department. This bill, which has passed the Senate and the Assembly Committee on Transportation, would require the construction within six years of a 1.1-mile extension connecting the Terminal Island Freeway to the San Diego Freeway. This project would cost about $50 million. The state currently is upgrading the existing Terminal Island Freeway from Seaside Boulevard to Willow Street. This project, which will cost $2.5 million, is scheduled for completion in mid-1977.

No can do

The State of California has to spend many dollars for cleanup because we have a bunch of litterbugs driving the freeways. My question is: Are the thousands of aluminum cans that are picked up recycled? J.B., Long Beach.

We checked with spokesmen in charge of road cleanup crews for the State Department of Transportation, for Los Angeles and Orange counties, for Long Beach and the City of Los Angeles and were told that none of the aluminum cans picked up by their crews is recycled. All five told us the cost of labor as well as the technical problems involved in separating the cans from the other litter make recycling impractical at this time.

Federal foul-up: Wrong turkeys to market

was not the lot sampled. The lot from which an objective sample was collected was combined with other lots and processed into turkey rolls and shipped out from the establishment."

An FDA inspector, according to the memo, thought that FDA "should assume responsibility for the lot that was processed and shipped." The FDA and USDA were not sure whether the turkey rolls should be recalled, it said, but at least two officials felt that the FDA Bureau of Foods "should be aware of the situation in the event that they thought action was indicated in order to protect the consumer."

Van Houweling, however, argued successfully that the FDA had no "obligation" to take regulatory action on products under USDA's jurisdiction, and instructed his bureau not to ask USDA for any more information on the turkey affair.

One of the participants at the meeting pointed out, the document said, that since both agencies share responsibility in the drug residue program, "there is the additional possibility that USDA, or for that matter FDA, may be embarrassed."

The memo said that "it could be difficult to explain why FDA is bringing criminal charges against an individual when USDA had allowed the adulterated food (meat) itself (upon which the charge is based) to enter the channels of commerce for human consumption."

Van Houweling's conclusion was that his agency wouldn't become involved unless requested to step in by USDA, but that there would be no bar to FDA action in the future if it seemed warranted.

Dr. John E. Spaulding, a USDA official, said none of the turkey rolls processed from thousands of contaminated birds was retrieved from supermarkets.

"We didn't even try. There was no point in it," he said. The birds we had were clean. The other birds had gone out already."

Spaulding said there is a two to three-week lag before USDA gets a reading on its residue samples and that, unless it has a reason to do so the Agriculture Department cannot impound the birds. In this case, the meat had been processed and left the plant before USDA discovered the violations.

Turkey rolls have a shelf life of only 7 to 14 days unless they have been frozen, he said, and would have been eaten before a recall could have been initiated.

Ipronidazole residues dissipate when turkey meat is frozen or when it is cooked as turkey rolls at 165 degrees, he said. The drug is used to prevent the disease called "black head" which primarily affects turkeys and can be fatal.

Spaulding said that after this incident and a few others, turkey growers, "who are very sensitive to the residue problem," stopped using the drug.

Prosecutor sorry for family, praises Bailey

"Quite frankly, if the jury had acquitted her, I was going to tell you this was a case that had to be tried...There was no vengeance involved," he said, noting that a grand jury had indicted the newspaper heiress on the charges of armed bank robbery and use of a firearm to commit a felony.

The prosecutor said he had "nothing but sympathy" for the Hearst family. "I have children of my own. I think Patricia Hearst can straighten herself out and I hope she does so."

He said he believed Miss Hearst participated in the bank robbery with the Symbionese Liberation Army "soldiers" who had abducted her just two months earlier "because she got caught up in the rhetoric and. . .joined the SLA."

The most crucial witnesses in the government's case included Zig Berzin, a Vietnam veteran who testified that Miss Hearst was carrying spare ammunition on the day of the holdup, and a psychiatrist, Dr. Joel Fort, who said she was a willing robber, Browning said.

"I'm delighted with the verdict because I think he (Fort) has been vindicated by it. There were some terrible things said about him during the trial..."

Browning explained that the government was unable to introduce material which would have supported Fort's views on Miss Hearst's willingness in the bank robbery because Judge Oliver J. Carter wanted to shorten the trial as much as possible.

Bailey had attacked Fort's credentials savagely during the trial, at one point accusing him of trying to "fix" the case.

Patty wondered if she had a chance — Bailey

"I can't think of anything that hurt her more than (having to take) the 5th Amendment and certain documents, including a list of banks and instructions on how to make bombs," he said.

Bailey declined to speculate about the jury's reasoning, but Johnson injected, "The jury may have felt the accumulation of the evidence was overwhelming."

Bailey said he considered admission of these things and the exclusion of testimony by court-appointed psychiatrist Dr. Margaret Singer to be possible grounds for appeal. But he said he would not announce his intentions on an appeal until after sentencing.

Before the press conference, however, when asked if he planned to appeal, Bailey said, "Sure."

Asked about the 11 state charges the newspaper heiress faced in Los Angeles, Bailey said, "I wonder what the state would gain down there by additional punishment."

Earlier, Bailey approached Browning as the prosecutor was surrounded by reporters. Bailey had to yell at Browning to get his attention.

The prosecutor turned and said, "I'm sorry it couldn't have been a verdict both ways."

Bailey responded, "I understand."

"You put on a great case, Lee," Browning said.

the terrorists who kidnaped her on Feb. 4, 1974.

They rejected her explanation that she had never fully become "Tania," the heroine of the underground but had sprinted into the Hibernia Bank the morning of April 15, 1974, with guns pointed at her back and a threat that if she did not join the holdup she would be killed.

There were many witnesses to the bank robbery who came forward to testify against her. But the other robbers were dead.

After the verdict was read, Carter told jurors: "As to the verdict you've arrived at, it is well within the evidence of this case, and it will be accepted...You have done the best you can under the circumstances that were presented to you."

He told them, "Now that you have arrived at your judgment, do not try to second-guess yourselves. Judgment day is a difficult time."

The verdict was read in a packed courtroom. In a tense atmosphere, the foreman of the jury—William Wright, a retired Air Force colonel—handed the sealed envelope to the judge's crier, Howard Frank, who passed it to the court clerk, then to Carter.

As spectators seemed to hold their breath, the judge examined the verdict and handed it to clerk Eugene Driscoll, who arose and read in a calm voice: "We the jury, find Patricia Campbell Hearst, the defendant at the bar, guilty as to count one of the indictment, guilty as to count two of the indictment."

The two counts were armed bank robbery and use of a firearm to commit a felony. The penalties are 25 years on the first count, 10 on the second.

Miss Hearst, who strode into court quickly, sat facing jurors and did not turn to see her family until nearly the end of the 15-minute proceedings. She turned and looked at them wistfully, then turned away, conferred briefly with her attorney.

The jury had been escorted out of the courtroom by the time the doors were unlocked and reporters began their stampede to telephones. The panelists, who had been urged by the judge to meet with the press, declined to have a news conference and went instead to the hotel where they had been sequestered.

The jury's decision ended one of the most dramatic criminal trials in memory. In the end, it came down to which of two portraits of Patricia Hearst the jury found more believable.

'RESPECT' JURY, HARRISES SAY

Associated Press

Two Symbionese Liberation Army radicals indicted with Patricia Hearst in Los Angeles on 11 felony counts said Saturday they felt respect for the jurors who convicted the newspaper heiress of bank robbery.

It remained uncertain, however, whether SLA members William and Emily Harris would stand trial with Miss Hearst on the charges, which include assault, robbery and kidnaping.

In a statement following Miss Hearst's conviction, Los Angeles County Dist. Atty. John Van de Kamp said the newspaper heiress would be brought to Los Angeles as soon as possible to face trial.

He told newsmen that U.S. District Court Judge Oliver Carter had said that Miss Hearst, if convicted, could be brought to Los Angeles prior to sentencing.

But U.S. Atty. James Browning, prosecutor in the San Francisco trial, said Miss Hearst wouldn't be turned over to Los Angeles authorities until after her sentencing—and perhaps not even then. He did not elaborate.

thing offhand ... both (U.S. Atty. James L.) Browning and I went all out."

Browning, the chief prosecutor, termed the verdict "entirely proper, and I'm very pleased with it.

"I see it as a bank robbery trial," Browning told reporters, saying he had "nothing but sympathy" for the Hearst family. "I have children of my own. I think Patricia Hearst can straighten herself out, and I hope she does so."

Emily Harris' lawyer, Leonard Weinglass, said Miss Hearst's conviction "vindicates the position we have taken all along.

In Los Angeles, Dist. Atty. John Van De Kamp said Miss Hearst would be brought taken there as soon as possible to face state charges of robbery and kidnaping along with William and Emily Harris.

"She turned her back on people and chose to go the route of wealth and power and deception," he said. "She wrongfully accused her friends (the Harrises) and slandered her dead lover and vilified the political organization she chose to join."

Dr. Louis Jolyon West, a defense psychiatrist whose reports were credited by Miss hearst's lawyers as providing a blueprint for the defense, told reporters, "I feel bad about the outcome and regretful. I am not an emotional character, but from my point of view there was more information the jury could have become acquainted with."

Details of kidnap, 'conversion,' flight

Patty's trial: the background story

By WALLACE TURNER
New York Times Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Patricia Hearst's 39-day trial served to put some flesh on the almost bare bones of the sensational story of her kidnaping, alleged conversion to the doctrines of the self-styled Symbionese Liberation Army and life underground for 19 months as captive and then as fugitive from the indictment.

The trial concluded Saturday with the jury's guilty verdict.

Miss Hearst testified in her own defense. At first, it appeared that she was ready to tell all, to incriminate others without exception. It was not to be that way.

On Feb. 23, she took the Fifth Amendment 42 times to avoid being required to incriminate herself. Fundamentally, she was refusing to talk about anything that happened to her in the year from September 1974, when Jack Scott, the sports radical, dropped her off in Las Vegas, Nev. after an auto trip across country from Pennsylvania, to Sept. 18, 1975 when an FBI agent and a San Francisco policeman burst into her apartment here to arrest her and Wendy Yoshimura, another fugitive, who lived there with her and Steven Soliah, who now is on trial for bank robbery in Sacramento.

Some images of events flickered in the trial. . .

What happened to Miss Hearst in that year is unclear. Some images of events flickered in the trial, as when it seemed that she had broken with William and Emily Harris, sole survivors of the SLA group that had kidnapeped her.

The prosecutor, James L. Browning Jr., argued to the jury that Miss Hearst had broken with the Harrises and had drifted away from the brutal revolutionary doctrine of the SLA to adopt a "feminist revolutionary" political philosophy.

To understand all the convolutions of the Patricia Hearst story, it is best to go back to the point where she became a figure for American folklore; the night that William Randolph Hearst's granddaughter was dragged in her nightclothes, screaming, to be held for ransom, by a group of young people led by an escaped convict.

The convict, Donald DeFreeze, a black, had nothing in common with the others who were white, the children of middle-class Americans, but also the children of the Vietnam War.

It was those eight who planned and brought off the successful abduction of Miss Hearst at about 9 p.m. on Feb. 4, 1974. The SLA snatched her with the thought of trading her off for Russell Little and Joseph Remero, two others of the SLA crowd who were in jail, charged with the murder of Dr. Marcus Foster, the Oakland superintendent of schools. The SLA was first heard from after Foster's murder. A Communique No. 1 claimed "credit" for murdering Foster with cyanide tipped bullets. Remiro and Little have since been tried and convicted and are serving life terms.

It appeared she was ready to tell —but it wasn't so

Miss Hearst had been living with her lover and fiance, Steven Weed, 26, one-time radical at Princeton University. They had met when he was a teacher in the high school she attended for a year in Hillsborough

The prosecution psychiatrists sought to portray Miss Hearst as a young woman in the throes of disenchantment with her fiance, willing to end their relationship, but not able at the time of the kidnapping to work out a way to do that gracefully.

The prosecution's medical and mental experts leaned heavily on this view of Miss Hearst's unhappiness, for it was a strong element of their assertion that Miss Hearst was "a rebel seeking a cause" and was "ripe for the plucking."

Miss Hearst said she had been thrown into the trunk of a car, after being bound and gagged, driven a short way and thrown onto the floor of another car. She was driven for an hour or more in the second car, she said, and then led, blindfolded, into a house and put into a closet.

She said she stayed in there for weeks, and it was eventually estimated that she was in this closet in a house in Daly City, a suburb, for about three and a half weeks.

She told of being "interrogated" by DeFreeze and of making the early tape recordings that her captors used to tell her parents and the world that she was alive.

The recordings were played to the jury, all but one of them by the defense.

The SLA realized very early that the ransom of Little and Remiro was out of the question, for public officials ranging down from then-Gov. Ronald Reagan said it would not be considered. So the kidnapping effort turned to an attempt to make the Hearst family give $5 million worth of food to feed the poor.

This worked out to become the "People in Need" program.

The PIN program became a discredited administrative mess. But it cost the Hearsts around $2 million, and it failed to get their daughter back.

In the trial it has been disclosed that the group lived until late March in Daly City, and then moved to another hideout on Golden Gate Avenue in San Francisco, within sight of the federal courthouse, a mile or so away, where the national headquarters for Miss Hearst's search was based.

The government accepted Miss Hearst's story of being held in the closet at Daly City, although one of the government medical witnesses, Dr. Joel Fort, seemed to be trying to make it sound like a pleasant experience. However, the government did not accept her statement of being held similarly in a tiny closet in the Golden Gate apartment.

By the time of the move there, the government contended, Miss Hearst was already a member of the SLA or so close to it, that she no longer had to stay in the closet.

But her story was that she was held prisoner in that closet until April 1. She was kept blindfolded, she said, and on that day was asked by by DeFreeze if she wanted to be turned free in a safe place or stay with the SLA.

"I didn't believe him," she testified. She said he had earlier told her the choice was "stay or be killed" and it was really that choice that was in her mind when she told him she would stay.

Miss Hearst testified that then her blindfold was taken off and instruction began in teaching her to use weapons. She said she even stood watches through the night as did the others.

Some tape recordings were made at the Golden Gate apartment, including one on April 1 in which Miss Hearst's voice announced to the world that although offered freedom, she had decided to "stay and fight."

She testified that this was in fact a script written for her to read by Angela Atwood, one of the eight.

Miss Hearst's first foray outside the apartment was to the bank robbery. The SLA picked the bank for its good getaway route, and the fact that it had surveillance cameras, which would show her in the robbery, Miss Hearst said.

The government opened its case by presenting evidence about the robbery. Witnesses said that two of the four women robbers and the one man had M-1 carbines and that one SLA woman — Nancy Ling Perry — had shot two men who came into the bank and tried to leave. Both survived and both testified.

The bank guard, Eldon Shea, testified that Miss Hearst had told him to get on the floor and threatened to blow his head off if he did not.

On cross-examination, Bailey managed to becloud Shea's testimony. But the defense lawyer was not able to shake the identification made by a witness the government provided on its rebuttal. This was Zigurd Berzins, operator of a radio equipment store across the street.

Berzins said he did not see the face of the woman in the bank, but in looking at a crude, jerky film the government produced from the bank surveillance camera negatives, he pointed to the figure of Miss Hearst as the woman he saw.

"I don't care if it's Patricia Hearst or who it is," he said, "that's the woman I saw."

This was strong medicine for the prosecution, for Miss Hearst had said in her testimony that she had not known if her gun was loaded.

The defense — including Miss Hearst's own statements — asserted that she had been told before the robbery that she "would be shot on the spot" if she did anything to frustrate the robbery.

Miss Hearst said that after the robbery, she was given one-ninth of a share of it to hold, she said.

A few days later, Mrs. Atwood wrote another script for Miss Hearst to read into the tape recorder. This one denied that Miss Hearst has been brainwashed or coerced, and contended that she was a willing participant in the bank robbery.

Shortly after that, Miss Hearst said, the group moved to another apartment, and then soon left for Los Angeles, about May 1, 1974. They lived first in a motel, then in a small empty house. On May 16, 1974 Miss Hearst went with Mr. and Mrs. Harris to Mel's Sporting Goods store in Inglewood. Harris was accused by a clerk of shoplifting and a struggle ensued.

Miss Hearst, across the street in a parking lot, saw the Harrises struggling with the clerks and picked up Harris's M-1 which had been altered to make it automatic. She said she fired it, and the recoil knocked it out of her hand. She picked it up, and emptied it onto the street. Then she picked up her own carbine and fired two shots from it.

Patty's trial: damaging statements

"I can't believe that I did what I did," she testified.

After making their getaway, Miss Hearst said they had gone to a motel in Anaheim on May 17, 1974, and had turned on the television set. They saw the live coverage of the shootout where their six companions were killed.

The story of what happened to Miss Hearst after that can be pieced together from the brief glimpses in her testimony and from documents that the government introduced.

She said she and the Harrises went back to San Francisco and Berkeley where they were met by Josephine Soliah and James Kilgore, two persons who have been sought for months by the authorities for questioning. Miss Hearst said she met Jack Scott at the Soliah-Kilgore apartment.

She said that Scott and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Scott of Las Vegas, drove her east in the summer of 1974.

The Scotts took her to an apartment in New York City, she said, and then farmhouses in Pennsylvania and New York state.

It was in that period that she met Miss Yoshimura, she said. Scott and Miss Hearst drove alone back to Las Vegas, where he left her. And that was where her story faded behind a constant response of Fifth Amendment claims.

But from other evidence in the trial, it is plain that Miss Hearst lived for a time in Sacramento.

Miss Hearst's picture was on a Sacramento City College identity card that the prosecution put into evidence. However, Carter refused to allow into evidence a hand-drawn chart of the interior of a bank in Sacramento because a woman had died in an area bank robbery. The judge said he did not want the jury to begin thinking Miss Hearst had been involved in a homicide.

The judge did allow into evidence a typed list that had Miss Hearst's fingerprints on it. It was headed "bakery" but really was plainly a detailed plan of the steps to take to rob a bank.

Among other documents put into evidence was the so-called Tania interview, which was damaging to Miss Hearst. Some items were written in her own hand. She testified that this was the product of the Harrises' desire to write a book and that her answers had been dictated, in principle, by what they wanted her to say. Altogether, if true, the "interview" described how Miss Hearst, the kidnapping victim, became Tania, the SLA member and bank robber.

Three things that happened soon after Miss Hearst's arrest, caused her defense problems. She was photographed, giving a clenched fist salute; she said this was because Mrs. Harris expected it of her.

She listed her occupation when booked into the San Mateo County Jail as "urban guerrilla" and again said that Mrs. Harris had expected it.

Then she made damaging statements to Patricia Tobin, when her old friend visited her at the jail. She said, for instance, that hers was now "a revolutionary feminist perspective" and that she was very sorry that she had been found and arrested.

Miss Hearst explained to the defense psychiatrists that she had talked this way because Mrs. Harris had been a few feet away in the visiting room. But the government produced evidence that Mrs. Harris was not in the room at that time.

The defense sought to keep the tape-recorded interview from being played to the jury, but Carter allowed it.

After it's over, jury members keep silence

By MARK L. KAUTZ

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The seven women and five men of the Patricia Hearst jury steadfastly maintained an agreed-upon silence after finding the newspaper heiress guilty of bank robbery Saturday.

Juror Marilyn Wentz, 36, said that the panel had agreed not to discuss the case. "I am satisfied with my own decision," she said, adding she was glad to have served on the jury.

Only one juror, Oscar McGregor, responded to newsmen pressing for comment as the panelists left their hotel. When asked whether he was sorry Miss Hearst had been convicted, he replied, "No," and brushed past reporters.

In San Mateo, Andrew Conway, husband of juror Charlotte Conway, said, "Right now, she's just happy to be home and to be a mother to her children again. She's been away a long time abnd everything's a bit confused."

Judith Braunstein said her husband, Bruce, had indicated the panel agreed not to discuss the case for at least a week. "Everybody's really spent," she said. "Right now, there's just nothing left."

An alternate juror, Mary Nieman, who wasn't privy to the deliberations, later said she was "disappointed" in the verdict, but she declined to elaborate.

The jurors rejected Judge Oliver J. Carter's suggestion that they meet with the press after the verdict. Instead, the panelists immediately returned by bus to pick up belongings at the nearby hotel where they had been sequestered during the eight-week trial.

Most lowered their eyes and appeared somber as they entered the hotel. Apparently not wishing to be buttonholed individually, all 12 crowded into one elevator and turned their backs on dozens of newsmen and cameramen.

The jurors later tried to slip out of the hotel individually through the hotel garage or side doors where they were met by their families inprivate autos.

All but one of the jurors was married, and most had families of their own. In all, the combined jurors had at least two dozen children — one man had seven and two women were mothers of four, a fact that defense attorneys believed was in their favor.

The average age of the jurors was 39. The youngest was a 24-year-old newlywed and the oldest was a 55-year-old retired Air Force colonel.

Four women are housewives, but other occupations were diverse, ranging from a self-employed potter to an aircraft mechanic, stewardess, postal worker and receptionist.

Verdict 'clears my son'

LITCHFIELD, Conn. (AP) — The mother of a slain Symbionese Liberation Army "soldier" said Saturday that Patricia Hearst's conviction on a bank robbery charge clears her son of an accusation that he sexually assaulted the newspaper heiress

"My son was a revolutionary, not a rapist," said Virginia Wolfe, mother of William Wolfe, an SLA member who died in a shootout with Los Angeles police in May 1974.

"I know that my gentle Willie was not a rapist," she said.

IN courtroom testimony, Miss Hearst said Wolfe was the first of several SLA members who attacked her sexually.

That testimony contradicted a taped communique that Miss Hearst, as the revolutionary "Tania," issued from the underground in which she declared love for Wolfe and described him as "the gentlest, most beautiful man I've ever known."

She said she had not been closely following developments in the trial.

"My son is dead. He has been for nearly two years. It's all beyond me," she said.

Mexico 200-mile rule bad omen

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Maritime Editor

THE WATERFRONT

If other Latin American countries follow Mexico's lead and establish 200-mile territorial jurisdictions, American tuna boaters couldn't afford to leave the breakwaters of San Pedro or San Diego.

So claims John Royal, executive secretary of Local 33, Fisherman's Union, ILWU, in San Pedro.

Royal, a former Los Angeles Harbor commissioner, said Mexico's recent constitutional amendment would force American fishermen to pay exorbitantly high license fees to fish within 200 miles of the Mexican coast.

Mexico is expected to start enforcing the 200-mile restriction about June 5, Royal says. He fears the Mexican action could be the first step in expulsion of U.S. West Coast fishermen from foreign waters.

The Mexican government has not yet established its schedule of fees to be charged foreign vessels to fish within the 200-mile zone. If the fees are prohibitively high or the government decides to ban all foreign vessels from fishing in the zone, approximately 2,000 U.S. fishermen and 100 boats would be "beached," Royal says.

"As some of the 10 or 11 Latin American nations develop their own facilities and the ability to harvest raw resources in their offshore waters, there could be a complete phaseout of the American-flag tuna vessels in the years to come," Royal believes.

He cites as an example that Mexico is now building six new large ships to add to its fleet of 22 tuna boats. The new craft are expected to be fishing-ready by the end of the year.

Currently being considered by the U.S. Congress is a bill to extend America's fishing jurisdiction limit to 200 miles. The measure is urged and supported by East Coast fishermen, who claim foreign fishing fleets are depleting some Atlantic fish resources almost to the point of extinction.

Royal contends that if the bill becomes law, it will be a paper victory for the Atlantic fishing industry but would sound the death knell for the Pacific fishing fleet and deal a crippling blow to the Southern California fish-canning industry.

Many West Coast fishing industry leaders believe that if the U.S. adopts a 200-mile limit, it will prompt Latin American countries, especially those along the west coast of South America, to do likewise. Much tuna taken by U.S. West Coast purse seiners is netted within 200 miles of the South American coast. Closing those ocean waters could result in a virtual shutdown of the U.S. West Coast commercial fishing fleet. It would be economically unfeasable to pay the expected high license fees bound to be levied by the Latin American ocean-fronting nations.

Wait and see

A spokesman for the Army Corps of Engineers in Washington, D. C., has told the Waterfront the corps has taken a "wait and see" attitude toward action on a Coast Guard request it be allowed to establish shipping lanes over federal offshore oil leases outside the entrance to Long Beach and Los Angeles harbors.

The corps, said the spokesman, wants to see what the oil companies intend to do about anchoring drilling ships, building platforms, creating floating or nonfloating islands or other structures within the proposed ship safety lanes.

The corps' Washington headquarters was asked to review the matter after Brig Gen. Richard Connell, commander of the corps for the South Pacific, which includes the two Southland ports, recommended that the Coast Guard's request be denied. The spokesman said the corps has not ruled out the request by Rear Adm. Joseph G. Steele, commander of the 11th Coast Guard District headquartered in Long Beach, to establish the shipping lanes—described by one waterfront wit as an ocean extension of the Long Beach Freeway.

The admiral wants to protect ships entering or leaving the harbors by establishing an inbound and an outbound lane, called fairways. The proposed fairways would be from 1 to 1½ miles wide and extend about 18 miles out to sea toward the east end of Catalina Island. The path of the lanes would pass across two parcels of ocean area where the Department of the Interior has granted leases to oil companies to conduct exploratory operations for gas and oil.

If the safety lanes are established, the oil companies could not locate any drilling operations within them.

The Coast Guard and the oil companies are at loggerheads.

The companies want the lanes located four miles to the west—not over the leased parcels.

The Coast Guard contends that would result in additional hazards to navigation because the lanes would then have to be crossed by thousands of pleasure craft going to and from Catalina.

The Coast Guard suggests that the oil companies locate their drilling rigs outside the lanes and slant-drill into the oil field, but the oil companies claim the subsea oil fields are so close to the surface that the wells would have to be drilled almost horizontally—a feat not technically possible.

However, a production engineer with Long Beach's Department of Oil disputes that allegation and claims the wells can be drilled from outside the lanes and "whipstocked" to bottom out in the suspected oil-rich zones beneath the shipping lanes.

Little risk seen in new drilling

By RON ROACH
Associated Press

SACRAMENTO — Renewed drilling sought by Standard Oil in the Santa Barbara Channel would not greatly increase the risk of an oil spill — nor would it provide much oil.

Those are conclusions of an environmental impact report prepared for the State Lands Commission.

The draft report was received last week by the Senate Government Organization Committee. The Lands Commission will hold a hearing May 8 in Santa Barbara.

No new drilling has been allowed on state leases since the huge 1969 Santa Barbara Channel oil spill, which occurred on the federally controlled outer continental shelf. The ban was lifted in 1974.

A LAME-DUCK State Lands Commission in late 1974 approved new drilling, but the new commission rescinded the vote in 1975.

Atlantic Richfield won approval from the Lands Commission for 17 new wells, but the Coastal Commission rejected the 17 wells and that rejection was upheld by the state Supreme Court.

Standard wants to drill 38 wells using four existing platforms in the Carpinteria and Summerland offshore oil fields.

The report, prepared by Woodward-Clyde Consultants, said the chances of an oil spill or blowout from new drilling are slight — not "inevitable" — but the effects of one "cannot be disregarded."

With proper safeguards that Standard intends to employ, the report said, "few, if any, significant irreversible natural environmental changes are likely to occur."

However, the report raised the question of whether state approval of new drilling at Carpinteria and Summerland would have a snow-balling effect.

On the benefits from renewed drilling on the state's energy situation, the report said it would make "a small contribution toward meeting anticipated demand for oil and gas consumption.

In 1980, the anticipated peak of recovery, the maximum daily oil production from the two fields would be 31,000 barrels.

Bond rejects support of teacher political group

Former Assemblyman Bill Bond, Republican candidate for Congress in the 34th District, said Saturday he has told a teachers' political organization that he would not seek its endorsement or support "because they have rigorously pursued their own self-interest to the detriment of the rest of society."

Bond is running for the GOP nomination against Dan Lungren and Art Jacobson for the seat of incumbent Democrat Mark W. Hannaford. The 34th District includes East Long Beach, Signal Hill, Lakewood, Bellflower, Cerritos, Artesia, Hawaiian Gardens and a western portion of Orange County.

Bond said he appeared Tuesday before an endorsement committee of teacher representatives from several school districts, organized by the Teachers Association of Long Beach.

He said he could not in good conscience accept help from any teachers union or association because he feels "they have been irresponsible in their selection of candidates to support in the past, their demands for the right to strike are against the public best interest and teacher strikes during the last year were illegal and should have been treated as such.

"Similar to any other special interest group, public employe labor leaders want to know what you are going to do for them if you're elected. I won't hide my true philosophy to get a few votes. I will support fair pay and benefits for both active and retired employes and of course I will work to improve educational opportunities for our children, as I did in the Legislature.

"However, one of my chief goals is to find an effective means to curb the undue political influence of big labor, big business and other major pressure groups such as teachers' unions. The power exercised by these organizations over elected officials is one of the fundamental causes of bad government at all levels."

BOND SAID that teachers would never approve of someone's going into the classroom to instruct children who does not possess extensive training in education but "their unions have consistently supported totally inexperienced candidates over those who are well qualified simply to get another commitment of a vote to give them the right to strike.

"At the end of this pipeline we get people in office like Governor Pat Brown Jr. (sic), whose first priority was to provide collective bargaining rights to teachers. Yet to this day he has directed no attention to the critical problem of reforming and equalizing school taxes."

Calling teachers' organizations "particularly irresponsible" in demanding the right to strike, Bond said "It would be an intolerable situation for union bosses to be able to shut down schools or any other vital public service.

"Labor leaders and liberal politicians like Congressman Mark Hannaford claim these employes are 'second class' citizens without this 'right.' I say this is nonsense. The public has rights, too, and these rights should come first.

BILL BOND
Tells Union Views

"It is a very real question of basic philosophy," Bond said. "That these unions don't understand they are a part of what's wrong with government was never more clearly in evidence than when New York's teachers went out on strike during the height of that city's financial crisis. Of all the special-interest groups it is the teachers and other public employe groups who should be most concerned with improving government. But if they are not then it is easy to understand why government is in such bad shape."

Bond said his purpose in telling the teachers' representatives where he stands was not to offend them, "but to make them think. I know that laying the truth on the line will cost me politically but it is time for the big pressure groups to stop dealing with government solely on the basis of 'what's in it for me,' because there is a lot more at stake than merely paychecks and personal advantage."

Brown may be 'fading light'

By GIL BAILEY
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON—The popular feeling here is that California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.'s entry into the presidential race will make it much more difficult for any Democrat to win the nomination by way of the primaries instead of through trading at the convention.

However, the popular thinking in Washington, D.C.—the theory six months ago was that Jimmy Carter didn't have as much of a chance as Sen. George McGovern in 1972 in seeking the nomination—has been known to be wrong.

So there is a possibility that Gov. Brown's candidacy will be one of those little noticed nor long remembered by the voters.

Rep. Morris Udall, another candidate with a certain interest in the matter, advanced one reason last week why the Brown candidacy, and the candidacy of Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, may make little difference in the race.

"Voters want to have a hand in determining who is going to be nominee," Udall said. "They won't vote just to honor someone."

IT'S UDALL'S ANNOUNCED theory that Brown cannot translate his personal popularity as governor into presidential votes unless he becomes a nationwide candidate.

And California governors, no matter how popular (witness Ronald Reagan and Earl Warren), have had their problems translating in-state popularity into out-of-state votes.

ANALYSIS

Brown may have some particular problems, due both to his style and to his relatively little national exposure.

In addition he got started late and even last week said his campaign would follow "sequential order," meaning no plans had been made.

The Brown personality, and he has more personality than programs, has not had much national exposure.

He speaks of the voters "disaffection" with Washington D.C. and with big spending programs. He does not, however, say which programs he would eliminate and which he would keep.

He speaks of scarcity combined with increasing demands but again he does not specify how he would reduce demand nor allocate scarcity.

BASICALLY, BROWN has practiced in running California what Ronald Reagan preached. When Reagan reached the national scene, it was what he preached that has all but destroyed his campaign.

For Brown to take his casual life style to New Jersey for example, although his accent from south San Francisco should be at home there, may be more difficult than the political prophets believe.

Finally, what is Brown, a liberal, a moderate, or a conservative? From his record he is much closer to being a Jimmy Carter than a Morris Udall or a Frank Church, and a great deal of the Brown support at the moment in California comes from the Wallace wing of the Democratic Party.

The fate of the Brown candidacy may be settled during the April 6 primaries in New York and Wisconsin. If Morris Udall falls by the wayside, as so many others have in those primaries, then the liberals must seek another candidate at least as a holding action for Hubert Humphrey. It could be Brown.

Lightining might strike the Brown campaign or again lightining may have already struck Carter and it is too late to stop him.

IPT Classifieds Don't Run Forever

Volkswagens may run forever, but Independent Press-Telegram Classified ads are usually short-lived. That's what Karen Kingsbury of Long Beach discovered when she advertised her 10-year-old bug for sale through an IPT Classified ad. She sold the car quickly to one of the many callers responding to her ad.

Leaders in crisis: Adams was outspoken American

By SID MOODY
Associated Press Writer

Not everyone loved John Adams as much as Abigail.

Theirs was a match that distinguished the institution of martimony. His was a presidency that infuriated many, at home and abroad. In truth, Adams was not an easy man to know, hence to like. This was no little due to his principles, which he clung to as stubbornly as the roots of an oak to his native New England soil.

By the time of the Boston Massacre in 1770, John Adams was an outspoken supporter and spokesman for the American cause. Yet he took the unpopular course of defending the British soldiers who had killed five Bostonians on the principle of equal justice to all. When he took the oath of office as America's second president March 4, 1797, Adams characteristically wore not only a plain gray suit but buckled on a sword for the occasion.

The sword symbolized the peril the new nation faced. France, her former ally, was undergoing her own revolution, and her radical leaders were trying to goad the Americans into joining their war with Great Britain. The war had deeply divided American politics. The Republicans, led by Adams' Vice President, Thomas Jefferson, were sympathetic with France and what they consider a revolution against tyranny. The Federalists and their chief ideologue, Alexander Hamilton, favored the British as defenders of order and tradition against atheistic anarchy. It was Adams' hope to stay in the middle, pledging in his inaugural address to conduct a "system of neutrality and impartiality among the belligerent powers of Europe." It would not be easy.

REPUBLICANS AND FEDERALISTS 'DISCUSS' EUROPEAN SITUATION

THE BRITISH were impressing American sailors into service aboard their warships by the hundreds. Spain was plotting to seize American territory in the Gulf Coast area, and the French were alternately bullying American merchant ships at sea and lobbying brazenly for American support within the country. Into this combustible mixture dropped the "XYZ Affair."

Adams had sent a three-man commission to Paris to negotiate a settlement. A coded letter from the commissioners informed Adams that they had been approached by three French agents, identified only as X, Y and Z, who said France's revolutionary government would not negotiate without a $3 million "sweetener," loans and a guarantee that America would resist reapproachment with Britain. When news of the proposal was strategically released by the President, the Republicans were embarrassed into silence and the country rang with the defiant toast: "Millions for defense, but not a cent for tribute!"

Congress authorized for the first time a standing army of 10,000 men. Merchant vessels were empowered to be armed and seize any French warships or privateers found in American waters. The treaty of 1778 which had brought France to America's side during the Revolution was abrogated by Congress. The President weighed declaring war on France in an increasingly bellicose atmosphere.

AS IS OFTEN the case in American history, one victim of the crisis was civil liberty. Over the strident protests of the Republicans who declared them unconstitutional, Congress passed the Alien and Sedition Acts, which made aliens subject to seizure or deportation in a wartime situation and declared it a crime to write or speak "seditiously or maliciously" against the United States.

Adams did not initiate the measures, but he did support them, mindful of the 30,000 Frenchmen in America, many of whom were active agents of the revolution, not to mention many more anti-English Irishmen.

It was in this climate of near-hysteria, that a little known incident known as Fries' Rebellion occurred in 1798. Fries was a vocal auctioneer in Pennsylvania, where popular feeling, egged on by the Republicans, was high against a federal property tax Congress had passed to help finance the new army and an expanded warship-building campaign. When two Pennsylvania Dutchmen and a militia captain were arrested for refusing to pay the tax, Fries and a company of several hundred armed men stormed the jail where they were held and freed them. Fries in turn was captured, tried and, with two others, sentenced to hang for treason

THE FEDERALISTS, Adams' party, were vehement that the sentence be carried out. Hamilton, whom Adams called the "bastard brat of a Scottish peddler," had been intriguing against the President for war on France and to enhance his power in the party, which was delighted at the show of national force against Fries. Supreme Court Justice James Iredell said if the guilty were not punished "anarchy will ride triumphant and all lovers of order, decency, truth and justice will be trampled underfoot."

To dissent from his party at such a time would have brought condemnation from the Federalists that Adams was siding with the Republicans, who were vehemently against taxes, especially to finance war on France.

Adams' cool-headed diplomacy successfully avoided war with France. But the intriguing Hamilton split the Federalist party in the 1800 presidential election, which Jefferson won. Adams, apparently not even invited to his successor's inaugural, retired to his home in Quincy, Mass., at peace that, as ever, what he had done was for country, not party.

Next: Thomas Jefferson.

George Hamilton on home-wreckers

NEW YORK — "The only Hollywood home-wrecker left," said the "best-dressed" vice president and fashion director of the Sole Leather Industry, George Hamilton, "is my close friend Warren Beatty.

"Warren is close to being a male fatale. He's had a couple of situations where there were husbands." George names them but not for publication. "I wouldn't ever want Warren to baby-sit for me!"

Tall, slim 36-year-old George, who recently made a lot of money on the stock market buying on margin ("In one day I made as much as I made in pictures in two years") was in a soul-baring mood as he had a prosciuto and melon lunch at the Regency.

"Really, there's no such thing as a home-wrecker," he decided. "The home has already been wrecked and somebody takes advantage. If my wife ever cheated I'd not blame the guy but my own neglect. Warren Beatty," George smiled, with what seemed like admiration, "works very quietly, and he's still a bachelor."

As for women home-wreckers, George insisted as he sipped an Italian aperitif, that he'd never met one.

"The women control the parties in California, and when they hear about a home-wrecker type, they don't invite her. That woman is unheard of for a year. The way for a woman to be a success in Hollywood is to be nice to the women, not to the men.

"The women," George added, "also have the money. It's unfortunate that they inherited it, but they've got it."

The one-time playboy, once linked with the leading beauties and a president's daughter, says his wife, Alana, has domesticated him exactly as he wished.

"I put on a nightshirt and get into bed with my son, 17½ months old, our dog and about eight books, and watch TV, and then I fall asleep. I got married because I wanted a wife, a home and a child, and I have them and I'm happy.

"My wife has her own life-style. She's in TM. I haven't the discipline for it. I'm afraid I'd go to sleep."

WARREN BEATTY

GEORGE HAMILTON IV

With unusual candor, George said he became a spokesman and trouble-shooter for the Leather Council so he could have a "secure future."

"One way to succeed in Hollywood is not to need them. When you need them, you sacrifice, you do things that hurt you," he said. Now he's negotiating a 10-year deal, has offices in Chicago and Boston and zips around the country mentioning that now is the time to buy leather-soled shoes.

Prices are going up, he lets us know.

"I've never done a commercial, You never believe those guys who say they use a certain product. But leather I've used all my life. I give them 20 days a year. I travel. I'm now convinced that actors should travel more and politicians should travel less."

With the leather job and stock-market profits, Hamilton says, "I don't really need the movies to survive."

Nevertheless, he raised $3 million to produce and star in a picture about the oil fields called "Scandal" to be filmed this year.

"If the stock market hadn't gone up," he admits, "I'd be working for somebody else now. I took big chances, and I can't lose now."

An interviewer must remember that Hamilton is a spoof artist. When he first went to Hollywood broke, he drove a '39 Rolls and spoke of his Palm Beach mansion.

"I couldn't afford not to have that car because I rented it our for $100 a day. It was working, and I wasn't. People thought I was worth millions, and I didn't want to disappoint them. Hollywood creates its own myths and believes them."

One final word from the leather merchant: "Never have dates with a producer's wife."

Today's Best Laugh: Some H'wood marriages consist of a guy taking out a girl once or twice before the wedding, and once or twice afterward.

Wish I'd Said That: If you don't go into debt these days you're probably doing something illegal. — Bob Burton.

Remembered Quote: "It's hard to celebrate a 35th wedding anniversary — it's too soon to brag and too late to complain."

Earl's Pearls: Someone described a Broadway hanger-on: "I'll say one thing for him — he never met a celebrity he didn't like."

Desi Arnaz once told an interviewer that one of his Broadway shows was "Too Many Girls." Lucille Ball spoke up: "That was also the story of your life."

Arts show slated

With new exhibits, new entertainment and a new name, the Long Beach Arts, crafts and Hobby Show will be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday, April 2-4, in the Arena.

For the first time, commercial exhibitors will take part in the annual show, and will be permitted to sell handcrafted items and supplies.

The commercial exhibits will be separated from the traditional amateur hobbyists and their displays, which this year will number about 160, and will feature such things as dulcimer making, leaded stained glass, calligraphy, dolls and woodcarvers.

Artists and craftsmen, both commercial and amateur, will give continuous demonstrations of their skills, and there also will be a continuous stage show, featuring an old-fashioned musical review, "It's a Grand Old Flag."

There also will be entertainment by a 30-voice choir from the Society for the Preservation of Barber Soop Quartet Singing in America.

Show hours will be from noon to 9 p.m. on both Friday and Saturday, and from noon to 6 p.m. on Sunday. Admission will be $1 for adults. Children aged 12 and under and senior citizens 65 years and older will be admitted free

FORECAST FOR MONDAY

Your birthday today: Career-building occupies most of this year's time and energy. Your natural aggressiveness is dramatized by pressure or inspiration from little crises. Relationships are susceptible to occasional failures in communications or cooperation: think about every move, however trivial. Avoid expensive commitments. Today's natives have a knack for finances and related subjects, as well as a theatrical flair.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Be satisfied with minimum business progress. Take the day off if feasible. You can't do much about the comments of associates. Remain unruffled.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): So-called silent partners become querulous. Abandon schemes involving casdual travel. Charity begins at home: protect your own welfare.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): An intense and inspiring pace is followed by much success in personal and public enterprises. Quit while you're ahead and avoid excess.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Reject efforts to embroil you in disputes. Concentrate on the job. Loved ones don't realize what you're going through; be easy on them.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Present and future resources ride on trivial decisions. Buy only what you need. Let others display temper, but you maintain your poise.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Use sales resistance as a shield where group funds are concerned. Paying careful attention brings useful information. Be selective in business deals.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Discipline your response to older folk, avoiding harsh action. Listen to the whole story of family incident. Travel with sensible precaution.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Work of any significant quality is all uphill. You must cope with people who won't accept things as they are. Stay out of legal procedures.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Ancient chickens come home to a new roost. Learn from the experience without recrimination. Follow a low-key course; don't even bink of speculation.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Ask no favors, although many are asked of you. See to neglected maintenance work. Whether to buy new or repair the old is a difficult decision today.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your theories are under fire from all sides. Little is gained by an immediate defense. Renewed resolution comes later. Consider how to improve your health.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): It's not time to get involved in anybody's gamble or expedition. consider each situation and your natural reaction in context. Children create problems

Transistor plant burns

PHOENIX (AP) — Damage has been estimated at $150,000 from a fire brought under control Saturday by 130 fire fighters in a chemical shop of a Motorola transistor and component plant that could have forced evacuation of the surrounding area.

The Fire Department sent 29 units and kept the blaze away from lethal chemicals which could have created deadly fumes and forced evacuating a one-mile surrounding area, authorities said.

No one was seriously injured in the fire, but six firemen suffered minor acid burns and two Motorola employes, Jules Nelson, 47, of suburban Glendale, and Matthew MacKenzie, 57, of Scottsdale, were treated for smoke inhalation.

Vats of acid and cyanide caused a hazard in bringing the fire under control.

Rock group coming

Bachman-Turner Overdrive, which hit the top of the charts with "Takin' Care of Business," "Let It Ride," "Rolling on Down the Line," "Hey You" and "You Ain't Seen Nothing Yet," will be making their only appearance this year in Long Beach at the Arena April 9. Tickets are on sale at the Arena box office for the show, which also features Wishbone Ash.

Fusion of soul music, jazz seen

NASHVILLE (AP) — Trumpeter Freddie Hubbard, who won a Grammy award in 1973 for the traditional jazz album "First Light," says a fusion of soul and jazz is the only way jazz will be able to survive.

"Jazz isn't for dancing, but now you can dance to it," he says. "We're going back into a funky thing, a soulful groove to pull back people. It's bad because we're slowing down the creativity. But we're pulling people back into the music so that maybe they'll go back into our music and follow it up, and then maybe we can create, not compromise."

In 1959, when he was 20, Hubbard came to New York from Indianapolis to break into the jazz world.

"In the olden days, people thought of jazz as a kind of subculture. It was a place where you would go; there would be a lot of smoking, a lot of drinking and a lot of women.

"I think the musicians are getting more respect now. Most of them have been to schools. They know something about Western music, and they can go to schools and discuss jazz with people who teach."

Santa Clara park features nostalgia

SANTA CLARA (AP)— About 19,000 people attended the opening-day ceremonies Saturday at Great America, a 65-acre amusement park combining turn-of-the-century nostalgia with dozens of rides, restaurants, gift shops and live shows.

Marriott Corp., a hotel and restaurant conglomerate, spent $50 million to construct the park. A second, identical park will open May 29 near Chicago, and a third is planned for the Washington, D.C. area.

Speech slated on minorities

Dr. Gary Nash, a UCLA history professor, will speak Monday at Long Beach State University on "The Indian and the Black in the American Revolution."

He will speak at noon in the Graduate Center as the third lecturer in the college's symposium on "The Meaning of the American Revolution."

Nash has written widely on racial relations in early American times. His most recent book is "Red, White and Black."

The fourth speaker in the symposium will be Dr. Ira Gruber, professor of history at Rice University.

Guess Who(siers) next for Bruins after 82-66 win?

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

About the time Arizona coach Fred Snowden was conceding defeat to UCLA Saturday, fans in the end zone bleachers of Pauley Pavilion unfurled a banner.

"Indiana *Who*siers" it read.

The Wildcats couldn't stop the determined Bruins and now it will be Indiana's turn as UCLA won an all-expense paid trip to Philadelphia and a shot at its 10th national championship in the last 12 years with an 82-66 lashing of the Wildcats.

UCLA fans in Saturday's turnout of 12,459 hadn't forgotten Indiana's 84-64, season-opening triumph over their Bruins. Neither had Gene Bartow.

"In that game we were so overprepared and I wanted to win so badly in my first game that our players tried too hard to win it for me," said the weary UCLA coach. "Taking nothing away from Indiana, the way they played that night we could have played a perfect game and still lost by 15 points."

Bartow's players weren't thinking so much of their semifinal match with the Hoosiers as just being in the final round of four.

"Chilly Philly, here we come," shouted forward Marques Johnson in the the noisy Bruin locker room following the Western Regional championship.

The junior all-America performed brilliantly down the stretch when UCLA unleashed a 12-0 blitz that broke a 58-58 knot with 8:03 to play and sent the Bruins winging, 70-58, with only 2:21 remaining.

"I couldn't begin to tell you how we went from 58-all to our insurmountable lead," said Bartow. "If I knew, I'd do it every time."

After Ralph Drollinger, Richard Washington and Johnson gave UCLA a five-point cushion (63-58), Arizona slowly started to fold.

Jimmy Rappis, a never-miss shooter in the Wildcats' semifinal win over Nevada-Las Vegas, was reduced to a hobbling liability in the final and was mercifully pulled by Snowden with 5:51 showing. The senior guard had taken lengthy treatments Friday to reduce the pain in a bruised left heel and arch but twice reinjured the foot Saturday while finding the basket only once in eight attempts.

"He was shooting off one foot and I knew from the start he wasn't going to have a good scoring game," said Snowden later. Minus their courageous quarterback, the Wildcat offense disintegrated.

Center Bob Elliott walked underneath the basket. Guard Herman Harris carried the ball and later ran over the tenacious Raymond Townsend. Arizona even fumbled away an inbounds pass in its own end.

Those four turnovers proved disastrous. The Wildcats were outscored, 24-8, in the concluding eight minutes and Bartow thought fatigue might have been a factor.

"They were well prepared for us, but I honestly think the last 10 minutes of that wild game with Las Vegas (114-109) took its toll. We seemed much more rested and played near-perfect basketball in the stretch."

Johnson, who picked up his third personal foul at 16:29, was tagged with No. 4 at 4:01. With the help of UCLA's 2-1-2 zone defense he refrained from from being disqualified and was removed along with the other Bruin starters to individual standing ovations with 1:33 to go.

"It was an aggressive game," said Johnson, a 14-point, seven-rebound performer. "Picking up some of those ticky-tack fouls was frustrating and rendered me almost useless on the offensive boards."

'Bring on Hoosiers'

David Greenwood wasn't popping off.

But in quiet, measured tones, the 18-year-old UCLA freshman center pointed out that Indiana's 84-64 victory over the Bruins last Nov. 29 in St. Louis had been for the championship of the weekly wire-service polls—and nothing else.

"Indiana won when it didn't count," said the 6-10 former Verbum Dei star Saturday after the Bruins qualified for a rematch with the Hoosiers by dispatching Arizona, 82-66, in the NCAA Western Regional final at Pauley Pavilion.

"That was a practice game in St. Louis," said Greenwood. "We're going to win when it counts."

UCLA will face the top-ranked and unbeaten Hoosiers in the semifinals of the NCAA tournament next Saturday in Philadelphia.

It was obvious after the the Bruins had burst away from Arizona in the final eight minutes Saturday that they had Indiana on their minds.

"We're looking forward to playing Indiana," said clever Andre McCarter, who will be going home to Philadelphia for his last two basketball games as a collegian. "The time we played them in November, the floor was slippery and we had a new coach to get used to.

"We didn't have our offense adjusted. I think Indiana was playing as well then as it is now, but we're playing better."

Junior foward Marques Johnson, who was chosen to the all-tournament team, cited some differences between the team Indiana met in St. Louis and the one the Hoosiers will be playing in Philadelphia.

"We've matured as a team," said Johnson. "We've adjusted to coach (Gene) Bartow and his style of play, and his whole philosophy of coaching.

"We've jelled at just the right time."

Bartow joined in the "bring on Indiana" chorus.

"I'm looking forward to playing Indiana, as is the whole team," he said. "I know they're a super team with a super coach, but if we play the way we have in 13 or 14 of our last 16 games, we can play with any college team in the country."

Bartow paused and grinned. "Indiana is, after all, a college team."

Junior forward Richard Washington, chosen the tournament's outstanding player, said the Bruins have the "same kind of team as we had when we went into the tournament last year."

"This team is just as strong, maybe stronger," he said. "We're definitely getting more out of our guards (McCarter, Raymond Townsend). Last year, Dave Meyers had a leg injury in the NCAA tournament. This year, we're completely healthy."

Bartow, who appeared to be a nervous wreck during the game, alluded to the pressure he has been under as the successor to John Wooden, who took the Bruins to 10 national championships in 12 years.

"We're where we were supposed to be, at least according to everybody out here," said the UCLA coach, whose mailbox has been filled with angry letters after each of the Bruins' four defeats. "You know, we played a bad game against Indiana before.

"Marques Johnson and Ralph Drollinger got into foul trouble early. Very few things went right. I've seen Indiana play some great basketball since then, but I've also seen us play some great basketball. It should be interesting."

Kings decision Montreal

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

Maybe the Kings should open the Stanley Cup playoffs against Montreal. The Canadiens seem to bring out the best in coach Bob Pulford's skaters.

Weathering a furious third-period comeback, the Kings hung on to defeat the Flying Frenchmen, 4-3, before a frenzied sellout crowd of 16,005 at the Forum Saturday night.

The defeat ended the Canadiens' 15-game unbeaten string, which included eight wins in a row, while the Kings regained a share of second place with the idle Pittsburgh Penguins in the Norris Division.

The setback also deprived Montreal's division champs of a chance to improve on their own NHL record for fewest defeats in a season. It was only their 10th loss in 74 games matching their standard of 10 reversals set in 1972-73.

"We should have been playing like this on the whole home stand," Tommy Williams said, reflecting on only the Kings' third win of their seven-game stand. "I don't know why we aren't more consistent. That's been our biggest problem lately."

It marked the Kings' second win as well as a tie in their last three meetings with Montreal. In their last joust at the Forum on Jan. 31, the Kings won, 7-3.

"Except for the first game when we lost 9-0, we've played well against them all year," defenseman Bob Murdoch said.

"It was nice to finally get a win on this stand. We've been struggling lately. It was also nice to hear the fans cheering. They've done a lot of booing lately," Murdoch added as he hastily dressed to catch a plane for tonight's game in Minnesota.

After building up a 4-1 lead after two periods on goals by Williams (No. 14), Murdoch (No. 5), Mike Murphy (No. 24) and Don

Rutgers, Michigan also advance

Associated Press

Indiana continued its relentless march toward the national championship with an impressive victory over Marquette and joined UCLA, Rutgers and longshot Michigan in advancing to the semifinals of the NCAA basketball tournament Saturday.

The Hoosiers, 30-0 and ranked No. 1, turned back No. 2 Marquette 65-56 to win the Mideast regional at Baton Rouge, La.; Defending champion UCLA, 26-4 and ranked fifth, overpowered Arizona 82-66 in the West regional at the Bruins' home court in Los Angeles; No. 4 Rutgers, 31-0, ran by Virginia Military 91-75 in the East regional at Greensboro, N.C., and No. 9 Michigan, 24-6, trimmed Missouri 95-88 to win the Midwest regional at Louisville, Ky.

So it's on to Philadelphia where Indiana will play UCLA and Rutgers will meet Michigan in the semifinals next Saturday afternoon. The survivors play for the championship Monday night, March 29.

The semifinal doubleheader will be televised, starting with the Rutgers-Michigan game at 11:15 a.m. (PST).

Indiana, which has lost just one of its last 65 games, goes into the final four as the favorite. The Hoosiers, despite the benching of All-America Scott May with foul problems, broke to a 30-19 lead midway through the first half against Marquette. But the scrappy Warriors rallied to trail by one, 3635, at the half.

The Hoosiers again pulled away in the second half as May returned to score 11 points and give his team a 51-41 advantage with 10:23 left.

Again Marquette rallied. Forcing Hoosier turnovers, the Warriors rode the outside shooting of Earl Tatum to close within 57-54 with 2:15 remaining.

But Marquette's hopes ended when Tom Abernethy sank a pair of free throws and the Hoosiers retained possession of the ball due to a technical foul called on Warriors' coach Al McGuire. Free throws by Abernethy and Bob Wilkerson and a layup by Quinn Buckner iced the Indiana victory.

Burly center Kent Benson topped the Hossiers with 18 points, May had 15 and Abernethy 12. Tatum led Marquette, 27-2, with 22 points and Bo Ellis added nine.

Dodger pitching hopeful trims down

Bryant: A 'slim' chance

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

VERO BEACH — Among the candidates to replace Andy Messersmith on the Dodgers' pitching staff is a fellow who has won the grand sum of three games the last two seasons, nearly had his career end in a slip from a swimming pool slide and rooms with a stuffed teddy bear.

Desperation? Not really.

Ronald Raymond Bryant also is a former 24-game winner and one-time National League pitcher of the year.

But since that peak season of 1973, when he was 24-12 for the San Francisco Giants, Ron Bryant's career has fallen — literally — on ill times.

It was in the spring of '74, at a Palm Springs hotel where the Giants were staying, that, in a freak accident on the swimming pool slide, Bryant fell and ripped his side open.

When he finally did return he won but three games, lost 15. Last year at St. Louis he was 0-1 with an earned run average of bulbous proportions — 16.00.

Not surprisingly, he was a free agent last month when he contacted Dodger vice president Al Campanis and asked for a job. "I wanted a West Coast club," explained the Redlands native.

So, for the price of a ticket to Albuquerque — he has a Pacific Coast League contract at the moment — the Dodgers have grandiose hopes for the 29-year-old lefthander, much like they had a year ago for Burt Hooton who wound up winning 18 games for them.

The similarities between the two are numerous, not the least of which is the fact that both were grossly overweight but scaled down dramatically.

I lost nearly 50 pounds, from 230 to 184," said the slimmed-down Bryant. "I can't believe how much better I feel."

If weight alone is an accurate guide, mammoth things are expected of Bryant. Hooton lost only 35 pounds and besides winning 15 games, bagged his last 12 in succession.

It is Bryant's 24-victory season of 1973 that the Dodgers prefer to talk about, not the events since.

"The biggest reason for the drastic change was my confidence, not the accident," Bryant insisted Saturday after a lengthy workout. "I'm sure I'll get my confidence back once I get to pitching regularly."

He received an immediate confidence-lifter from Campanis who said, after he saw Bryant work two scoreless innings in the recent game with USC at Dodger Stadium, "I like him. Really, I think he's going to make the club."

If he does it means the Dodgers' roster will include one manager, four coaches, 25 players and a teddy bear.

Suns put the heat on Lakers, 106-93

By DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

PHOENIX — When it comes to television performances, perhaps the Lakers should be censored.

They gave their Southland viewers another occasion to fall asleep here Saturday night as they turned in a lacklustre effort in falling to the Phoenix Suns, 106-93.

Considering what this game could have meant to them — an alomst certain playoff berth — it was embarrassing that the Lakers couldn't have shown some semblance of spark.

What coach Bill Sharman thought of the performance had to be bleeped out. But by now he is used to such efforts. The Lakers have lost seven of their last eight on TV and by an average margin of 14 points.

Instead of a three-game lead over the Suns with 10 games to play, the Lakers now find themselves only one-half game in front of third-place Seattle and one ahead of Phoenix.

"It's a whole new season now," said Sharman. "If we don't get meaner and more aggressive on the boards we are going to be in deep trouble."

The Lakers have 10 more games, six at the Forum, including one tonight against Milwaukee. But they end the season with games in Portland and Phoenix and that is something they don't look forward to.

No wonder, since they have a 9-28 road mark.

Phoenix dominated the backboards and turned seven offensive rebounds into baskets in the first half. This lifted the Suns to a 52-38 lead and the Lakers never came close to catching up.

Garfield Heard and Curtis Perry of the Suns are two of the finest rebounding forwards in basketball, but the Lakers have size up front, too. On the road, however, they don't display any of their muscle.

Guard Lucius Allen, who played poorly (3 of 12 shooting) summed up the Lakers' frustration very well.

"We know what they do defensively but we can't seem to adapt to it," he said. "We want to penetrate but we can't. We had to take too many perimeter shots tonight an they didn't fall in.

"Personally, I stunk up the place, but then no one else did much better. They are a very physical team and they outmuscled us at every position."

Phoenix's front line of Heard, Perry and rookie star Alvan Adams combined for 30 rebounds, a whopping 18 offensively.

Adams, a shoo-in for Rookie of the year, was brilliant with 29 points, one more than the Lakers' Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who really didn't get untracked until the second half.

Guard Paul Westphal, who along with Ricky Sobers easily penetrated the porous Laker defense, contributed 19 points for the Suns and also had four steals.

"Phoenix's offense is a simple one," said Sharman, "but we can't stop it. We talk about what we have to do and then we can't execute."

Only rookie Don Ford played well for the losers. The young forward hit 7 of 11 shots and totalled 16 points, giving him 38 in two nights since replacing Corky Calhoun as a starter.

Calhoun, out with the flu Friday night, returned to play 27 minutes and gave a creditable performance. So did guard Stu Lantz, although he didn't shoot well (4 for 14).

Laker sharpshooter Gail Goodrich made only 4 of 13 from the field, meaning the team's three guards hit only 11 of 39 shots.

Abdul-Jabbar was restricted to 10 points in the first half. He was in foul trouble again early in the fourth period but by then the outcome was decided.

The decisive priod was the second when the Suns outscored the Lakers, 25-16. They had 10 more field goal attempts and the Lakers committed nine turnovers while hitting only six of 15 shots. Calhoun had three of the baskets.

Sharman baited the referees most of the night, but they weren't to blame for the one-sided loss. Both teams committed an identical 26 fouls.

Ironically, this was the 17th consecutive time that the home team in the Phoenix-Lakers series has won, dating back to 1973. Against these odds and considering their lack of spirit Saturday, the Lakers could have mailed in this loss.

Prep spikers in mid-season form

By DAVE WIELENGA

According to the calendar, spring is just beginning but stopwatches at Saturday's 55th Southern Counties Invitational track meet at Hungtington Beach High were reading more like late May.

Sprinter Donn Thompson of Gahr High, Foothill distance runner Bill Spillsbury and pole vaulter Bill Hintaus from Aviation were the standouts from a field of 800 entrants from 59 schools.

Thompson, who is competitive at distances from 100 to 880 yards and as a hurdler, focused his attention on the quarter-mile Saturday. Despite chilly late-afternoon winds, he emerged with a meet record 47.0, wiping Billy Sims' seven-year-old standard off the books by one-tenth of a second.

The senior standout also ran a pair of relay anchor legs, as Gahr placed second in the 440 relay in 43.3 and came from behind to win its mile relay race with a time of 3:25.5.

Spillsbury, also a senior, led from wire-to-wire in winning the large division two-mile in 9:01.8, the best in the nation this year. He rambled through the first mile in 4:28 and kicked home his last lap in 67 seconds to topple Curtis Beck's 1972 mark of 9:07.9.

Spillsbury returned later in the afternoon to record a 4:17.1 mile, the day's best, although Santa Fe High sophomore Sal Peralta ran 4:17.8 in the next race.

Hintaus won a dramatic duel with national sophomore record holder Anthony Curran of Crespi to win the pole vault at 15-9.

With only two vaulters remaining in the competition, Curran, who's best is 15-9¾, took the lead with a 15-6 vault. Hintaus also topped that height, then cleared 15-9. Curran passed at 15-9 and the pair assailed 16-1, but neither was successful and the Aviation star went home with the award as the meet's outstanding field event performer.

All six Moore League school's made an appearance, Poly (18 points) and Compton (15) finishing third and fourth in the team standings.

Led by Compton's Andre Polk, who outsprinted Peter Owens of Poly to win in 1:55.8, the league's halfmilers were the most impressive. Owens clocked 1:57.5 and was followed by Al deFrates of Millikan (1:58.1), Poly sophomore Nelson Herring (1:59.3) and Randy Cox of Wilson (1:59.9).

Willie Fowlkes of Poly clocked 50.0 to lead Moore League athletes to a fine showing in a 440 race. Compton's Aaron Hudson (50.4) was second while Millikan's Jim Nieto (50.6) and Wilson's Herman Averetta (50.7) were fourth and fifth.

Pasadena and Muir tied for the large school's crown with 32 points, Pasadena earning the deadlock when a Muir long jumper was disqualified after it was learned he had allowed a teammate to make several jumps in his place.

Crespi pocketed the small school's title with a clutch 3:25.2 victory in the mile relay, their last event of the day.

Reaching for Cup

Parker sails to victory in Congressional

Tony Parker of the Annapolis Yacht Club sailed his "Pantera" to seven wins and two losses in the three-day Congressional Cup Series which ended Saturday. His decisive triumph came at the end of the ninth and final series, in which he defeated Ted Turner, Atlanta Yacht Club and owner of the Atlanta Braves.

It was Parker's second appearance in the Congressional Cup competition, the 12th since the trophy was established for the Long Beach Yacht Club by an Act of Congress.

There were three skippers who had six wins and three losses. They were Dick Deaver (Los Angeles YC), Graham Hall (Naval Academy Sailing Squadron) and Turner, who was ahead until the final four series.

Dennis Conner (San Diego Yacht Club, winner of two previous Congressional Cup regattas, finished with four wins and five losses as did Pierre (Poppy) Delfour, representing the Yacht Club d'Hyeres of France, and Ken Young (U.S. Yacht Racing Union).

Barney Flam (LBYC) had three wins and six losses as did Marc Hollerbach (Yacht Racing Union of the Great Lakes). Hugh Treharne (Australian Yachting Federation) won two races and lost seven, but the two he won were against heavy favorites.

Although the ocean was calmer on the final day of the Cup Series, it turned out to be one of the most hectic of all racing days. The strain of five previous series of races had taken a toll on men and equipment, and with four series to go on Saturday, crews, committeemen and all others involved were tense, to say the least.

Turner had the toughest schedule, but until the final series he had a chance to tie for a victory and perhaps win inasmuch as he had beaten Hall in a previous match.

The ninth race was a real hoodoo for Turner. He had lost to Deaver (Los Angeles Yacht Club) in the eighth series. In the ninth everything seemed to happen. The final knockout came when his jib split on the run from the leeward mark to windward. He had to change sails and that cost him two minutes.

Meanwhile, Hall, who had a chance to tie Parker with 7-2, dropped behind in his race with Treharne and lost by 31 seconds. Thus Treharne, the hard-luck skipper of the first day, became a giant killer. He won only two matches, but those were with Turner and Hall.

Barney Flam, representing the host club, Long Beach YC, had hard luck in the last race. He missed the windward mark adn had to go around again, so Hollerbach beat him by 55 seconds.

Saturday's results:

Sixth series—Hall def. Deaver, :13 (double protest), Turner def. Flam, :36 (double protest); Conner def. Hollerbach, :01, Young def. Treharne, :22 (Treharne protested), Parker def. Delfour, :55 (double protest).

Seventh series—Hall def. Hollerbach, :24, Flam def. Conner, :23 (Conner protested); Turner def. Young, :20 (double protest), Deaver def. Delfour, :10, Parker def. Treharne, :13.

Eighth series—Deaver def. Turner, 1:11, Hollerbach def. Treharne, :24, Delfour def. Young, 1:17, Parker def. Conner, :15 (Connor protested), Flam def. Hall, :57.

Ninth series—Delfour def. Conner, :37, Deaver def. Young, :10, Hollerbach def. Flam, :57 (Flam protested), Parker def. Turner, 2:21 (Turner protested), Treharne def. Hall, :31.

KINGS—

Kozak (No. 17), the Kings nearly had their skates scared off as the Canadiens completely dominated the final 20 minutes.

Guy LaPointe (No. 20) and Murray Wilson (No. 10) scored 26 seconds apart to cut the Kings' advantage to 4-3, but goalie Rogie Vachon then took center stage to make save after save and preserve the pulsating win. Guy Lafleur's 49th goal in the first period accounted for Montreal's other tally.

"I though we showed a lot of guts at the very end," Pulford said. "I thought we played with a lot of effort. (Marcel) Dionne played very well. Murphy also had a good game. He was almost out cold when he got hit by a puck. When he skated off the ice he nearly collapsed on the bench. But then he came back and got the goal which put us ahead 3-1," Pulford noted.

"To beat them is a big victory. I think it will mean a lot to us from here on in."

With eight games remaining, the Kings have only three home dates remaining.

"Having Pittsburgh push us might be good for us," defenseman Neil Komadoski reasoned. "The pressure now is sort of like the playoffs."

The Kings proved their was some fight left in them. The teams were at each other's throats in the second period when Kozak and Bob Gainey scuffled behind the Canadiens' net. Moments earlier Kozak and goalie Ken Dryden engaged in a shoving match in the crease. Komadoski and Gainey also engaged in a brief skirmish to highlight a frantic second period.

It's this kind of performance that keeps the Kings' followers trying to figure out their bewildering heroes.

KINGS NOTES: Mike Corrigan needs two goals to become the first player in NHL history to score 20 goals at each forward position. Corrigan notched 20 as a center with Vancouver in 1970-71; 37 in 1972-73 with the Kings at right wing and currently he has 18 as a left winger. . . Whitey Widing remains sidelined with an ankle injury. He did not accompany the Kings for their match in Minnesota tonight, but may be available Wednesday when the team returns to the Forum against the Islanders. Widing's next game will be his 500th in the NHL, all but 14 with the Kings. . . Kings' defenseman Gary Sargent missed his sixth game in a row because of a back injury. . . The Kings open the Stanley Cup playoffs on Tuesday, Apr. 6. Their opponent and the site are undetermined. Tickets are on sale only at the Forum . . . Saturday's sellout was the Kings' sixth of the season. With three home dates remaining, they trail last year's record gate, averaging 12,351 compared to 12,613 after 37 dates. . . Ken Dryden entered Saturday's game with a 1.50 GAA and a 11-8-7 won-loss record in goal. Rogie Vachon was 3.20 GAA and 21-19-1. . .

DODGERS

A teddy bear?

"He was my roomie with the Giants," Bryant said, straight-faced, "and I think I'll bring him out of retirement."

Indeed, after his abrupt flop in 1974 the bear, decked out in a teddy bear-sized Giants uniform, received a good deal more publicity than Bryant did.

"It's a pretty good roomie when you stop and think about it," Bryant said, still dead serious. "He sleeps a lot and doesn't talk back...even when you lose 15 games."

DODGER DOPE: The club plays an intrasquad game today with Bryant among the pitchers scheduled to work . . Tommy John will make his first spring appearance in his comeback bid Friday in an exhibition against the Mets at St. Petersburg. Because of the spring training delay the Dodgers lost two telecasts, both of which will be made up during the season. The first telecast will be a week from today against the Mets. The first exhibition will be Wednesday in Daytona Beach against the Expos. Doug Rau will start that game and will likely work only two innings.

Nostalgia, anyone?

Young Mel Kenealy poses proudly in his race car, circa 1933, in the pit area of old Legion Ascot Speedway. Kenealy, now 72, drove the same type of car in three Indy 500 races.

Indy vet can't wait for Prix

MEL KENEALY
With scrapbook of memories

Driving in the Indianapolis 500 with a two-seat machine, almost a half-century ago, is a far cry from next Sunday's U.S. Grand Prix West, but Mel Kenealy will view the race through Long Beach streets with just as much enthusiasm. Maybe more.

The 72-year-old Long Beach resident, who was at Indianapolis for the 1930-31-32 classics, had a grandstand seat for the Formula 5,000 race in September, but he is hoping for a choicer location this time.

"You betcha I'll be there," enthused the beaming Kenealy, who finished eighth in the 1930 Indy race, but had his car break down in the other two 500- milers.

"The Grand Prix cars are a lot different than the kind I drove, but the excitement's still there. I still get a kick out of watching any kind of auto race.

"I want to get into the pits this time, though. I'd sure like to get a look at what's inside those speed machines. They're a couple thousand worlds apart from the model-T's, model-A's and everything else I drove."

HANK HOLLINGWORTH

KENEALY hasn't lost any of the aggressiveness that he demonstrated in 15 years of competitive racing (1922-37) on dozens of tracks all over the country. That aggressiveness gives him a sure-fire method of gaining admission to this era's major events, including the Grand Prix West.

"I always get passes for the races. I go to the racing office and tell them who I was, and take along my pictures and scrapbook so they'll know that I'm not lying. They always come through," declared the Gasoline Alley veteran.

MOST OF the excitement in Kenealy's racing life was generated at three Southland tracks, all gone now—Legion Ascot Speedway ("a couple miles north of downtown L.A."), Hollywood's Gilmore Stadium and Atlantic Stadium ("on Atlantic Avenue, a dozen or so miles out of Long Beach").

The only time he was injured was in a 1932 race at old Ascot, but that proved a blessing in disguise.

"Two cars collided and turned sideways, so I shut off my motor and gas, and slid into them," recalled the Denver native, who came to Long Beach from Los Angeles five years ago. "I slammed into the steering wheel and fractured my spine. I wore a corset and missed a month's racing.

"I celebrated my return by finishing second in the feature race at Ascot, but that wasn't the big thing.

"During my recuperation, I was signed as consultant in the Warner Brothers movie, The Crowd Roars, starring Jimmy Cagney. I got $30 a day, which was darned good pay in those depression days.

"The only action scenes were when Babe Stapp, driving my car and behind a camera car, opened the movie going 50 miles-an-hour, and when they used some shots of real races.

"What really killed me was that they took lots of pictures of Cagney in a race car with the wheels turning a mile-a-minute, the wind blowing, him going through all those facial contortions—and the car was going nowhere. I learned a lot about the movies that month."

DRIVING A two-seat machine with a mechanic in the rear seat was an exasperating experience for Kenealy.

"It was stupid — all it did was slow us down," snorted Mel. "A mechanic couldn't fix a car when you were going 100-miles-an-hour down the straightaway. I never could figure out why they put a mechanic in a rear seat back of the drivers. They had to remake the cars, and everything.

"The AAA (American Automobile Association) contest board just decided one day to put in the rule. It lasted just the three years I was at Indy, but that was enough."

Strangely, Kenealy's salad days were in the depression era.

"We made good money in the '30s," recalled Mel. "A guy could make $3,000 in one day if he won some heats, the helmet dash (a race in which the three or four top qualifiers competed) and the feature.

"Even though it was depression, people would pay to see auto races. Somehow, they had money. Ascot could seat about 15,000 and lots of times every seat was filled and people paid to stand and watch."

KENEALY RACED against the best drivers of the era — "Wilbur Shaw, Louie Meyer, Rex Mays, Kelly Petillo, Floyd Roberts and a good driver from Long Beach, Chet Gardner, who got killed 40 years ago. I'll bet every one of them would have gone out of his mind to race in this Grand Prix."

Death was no stranger to drivers in those early days, especially at old Ascot, which Mel nevertheless still holds closest to his heart.

"Quite a few were killed at Ascot," he claimed, shaking his head at the remembrance. "When you'd turn there on the dirt, it was tricky and dangerous."

Kenealy holds no love for the current Ascot Park track at Gardena.

"That new Ascot is no good," he blurted. "It's just a half-miler and there's no blacktop. It's not much better than our old dirt tracks. Maybe not as good."

KENEALY'S battered scrapbook, the one which gives him entree to big races today, contains numerous pictures of movie queens of his racing era, lovelies like Claire Windsor and Lois Wilson, hugging and kissing the auto race winners. The recollection brings a twinkle to Mel's eye.

Mel admittedly broke into auto racing "to make money", but he departed the sport with a far richer satisfaction.

"Yeh, I got into racing just to make money, and I made good dough during the depression, but the old race drivers learned a lot for the people who manufactured passenger cars," he said proudly.

"In '34 I went 420 miles-an-hour at the Bonneville Salt Flats in Utah and my back tires wore out, but that was what we were trying to learn."

With another twinkle in his eye, Mel concluded: "I suspect it was a little more fun racing then than now. Everything else was."

Even if everybody's wheels were spinning, and they were going nowhere.

Like grand prix . . .

'California a separate race'

"What's glamorous? Actually, one works quite hard. But it's very nice to have a nice life, and we do have. It's better than being a bank clerk in South London." — James Hunt.

Man of the world that he is, James Hunt is apt to find himself in almost any part of the globe, except where he has spent the past week.

"When I first heard about this race in Long Beach, I was skeptical," the Englishman says, aligning himself with untold millions.

"When you do it in the streets, it's new, you've got to disrupt the town, you have the noise problems, the big investment, it's on the West Coast, which is a long way to fly the cars . . . well, I thought it was a lot of hot air.

"I'll tell you, the guys that put this together deserve a success just for the guts of doing it."

Words such as those are music to the ears of Christopher R. Pook, Hunt's former countryman and father of the Long Beach event.

HUNT, TEAM McLAREN'S top driver, understands the stake that the Formula One program has in next weekend's United States Grand Prix West, so he has been running up and down the state like a primary candidate to promote it, enjoying himself immensely.

"I've been here several times," he says. "Riverside, Ontario, Laguna Seca. I find California a very stimulating place. I like to play golf and I play tennis. I have my racquet with me. But there are a lot more things to do than I ever get time to do."

Hunt, 28, apologizes, however, for being "very un-American" when he arrived at the Beverly Hills Hotel.

"I'd been in the room for five minutes before I realized I didn't have the TV on."

Among his preferred diversions is lobby lounging.

"I couldn't work out whether that bird sitting in the lobby last night was a hooker or not," he muses.

ALL OF THIS considered, Hunt concludes that "Californians are a bit of a separate race. Californians will like grand prix racing."

After all, Hunt reasons, everybody else does.

"It's only when we're in the 'States that this ever becomes a pertinent question, because to every other country in the world, grand prix racing is it—there is nothing else—and it's for the world championship."

Grand prix has always seemed a more glamorous type of racing than the domestic brand—dirt tracks and bare knuckles compared to the image of dashing, devil-may-care chauffeurs with white scarves flowing behind them.

"What's glamorous?" Hunt counters. "Actually, one works quite hard. But it's very nice to have a nice life, and we do have. It's better than being a bank clerk in South London.

"Take some film star. Those people work very hard. The situation might surround them all the time but they don't actually get into it. I know if we try to sit back and enjoy it, we're probably not going to do a very good job on our cars."

JAMES HUNT, who will drive in U.S. Grand Prix West in Long Beach next weekend, enjoys fruits of success after last Sunday's victory in "Race of Champions" at Brands Hatch, England.

HUNT'S EMPATHY with movie stars is natural. By coincidence, another guest at the Beverly Hills the past week was Elizabeth Taylor—the coincidence being that James's estranged wife Suzy, described in an old press release as a "ravishing society model," has been seen in the recent company of Richard Burton.

"I can handle it," Hunt says of the publicity. "It doesn't bother me."

However, he claims he did not encounter Liz in the Polo Lounge, nor did he bother to look up her room number.

RICH ROBERTS

Perhaps James is tired. The past week has been a continuous round of late breakfast interviews, luncheon appearances, publicity junkets hither and yon and a banquet or three. He has handled himself admirably and watched his physical condition.

At a media gathering one night he requested an orange juice from the bar but received a screwdriver instead.

"What's in this?" he protested after a small sip and returned it for a straight refreshment.

So much for the image.

HUNT, RAISED in Surrey, insists that he never would have become a bank clerk in South London, but his introduction into racing was not without pain.

"I bought myself a formula Ford but I had to buy it on half-purchase (time), which was a big risk because I couldn't afford to pay it back. So I did laboring jobs. I was a porter, then a hospital cleaner at night, scrubbing the floors . . . that sort of thing. It was the only way I could get started.

"But then I ran out of money before I'd even raced it, doing some testing and things. We had an engine blow up and the engine was being rebuilt, but the company wouldn't give it to me without paying for it, so they kept the engine, which was fair enough."

James calls that crisis in his budding career "a big crunch drama."

"I remember the bill was 92 pounds and my father was going to give me 100 pounds for my 21st birthday. I asked him for it but he said, 'It's a month away, so you can wait; you've got to do things in order,' which was fine, except I had a sponsor lined up who said he wanted to see me race. People like that don't stay hot for a month; they stay hot for a week.

"I presented my special case and he still said no."

Hunt's father is a stockbroker.

"He wasn't going to risk anything on me," James says.

"So I presented it to my mother, who sympathized, and she sat up all night and persuaded him, and they gave me the money in advance."

SO HUNT WAS able to drive, won the sponsor and was off on the career that finds him among the favorites for next week's race, off last season's victory in the Dutch Grand Prix and last Sunday's win in the special "Race of Champions" event at Brands Hatch, England.

Does Long Beach have his mother to thank for his presence?

"Oh, I'd be here today," James says. "I just would have been here a different way. If you want it, you can get it. The breaks come in odd ways, but they always come if you persevere."

Chris Pook couldn't have said it better.

A.L. woos Toronto —so does the N.L.

NEW YORK (AP) — The American league voted Saturday to expand to Toronto for 1977 and the National League immediately set up a possible collision course by saying it would actively consider expansion to the same city for the same season.

Presidents Lee MacPhail of the American League and Chub Feeney of the National League announced their separate actions at the conclusion of the joint meeting if the 24 major league owners.

"The American League has declared its intention to expand to Toronto in 1977 and so advised the National League and the commissioner in a joint meeting," MacPhail said.

THEN FEENEY disclosed the National League's plans, saying his league will actively consider expansion for 1977 and, if it adopts expansion, Toronto will be included. He said that should the National League decide to move to Toronto "the city would have to decide which league it wants."

"There is one ball club and we're not contemplating two teams there," said MacPhail.

Ealier Saturday, the Player Relations Committee, of which Feeney and MacPhail are members, formally withdrew their "best and final" offer to the Players Association in the continuing labor conflict.

The Amerocan League, which has already voted to expand to Seattle for 1977, requires a three-quarter majority to aprove a new team. "Our vote was 11-1," said MacPhail, who declined to identify the dissenting team.

MacPhail refused to set a price for a Toronto franchise but the price for Seattle was $6.3 million.

"If Toronto decides to go to the National League, that will leave us still looking for a 14th franchise," he added.

MacPhail acknowledged that the American League decision gives it a head start in the race to Toronto. "We have made a commitment to expand and they have not," he said, nodding toward Feeney.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn said he was not upset over both leagues aiming for the same city.

"I don't think it is a battle or a war," he said. "But I certainly think the situation is competitive. I don't think there is anything unhealthy about competition of that kind for franchises. I don't consider it bad for baseball."

TORONTO originally thought it had a franchise when the San Francisco Giants ownership accepted a bid in principle to purchase that club. That deal fell through when the Giants were purchased, instead, by local interests and kept in san Francosco Toronto would be a prime target for the National League because of the natural rivalry it offers for the Montreal Expos, currently the only non-United States team in baseball.

In connection with the labor dispute with the Players Association, MacPhail said, "The owners' offer has been withdrawn. "We are going to negotiate further. We want to wait to hear their ideas."

"It (the withdrawal) means nothing," said Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players Association. "It's a negotiating tactic. They can do anything they want."

Miller said he expected to return to the negotiating table with the Player Relations Committee on Monday. The main task for the parties was further refinement of the owners' "one-and-one" proposal, which would permit players to deal with a maximum of eight teams and, in some cases, would limit players to dealing with only one club.

Then he said...

• FRAN TARKENTON, on his qualifications as a TV golf commentator: "I know as much about golf as Howard Cosell knows about football."

• JOE FRAZIER, explaining why he has ordered a new Cadillac Seville when he already has a '74, Rolls, '72 Mark IV, '75 Cadillac Brougham, '62 Corvette and an Austin taxi: "Blew the transmission on one, can't open the trunk on another, somethin' wrong with the others. I think what I need is somethin' to drive when they're all in the shop."

• MARTINA NAVRATILOVA, tennis star on her weight problem: "I put on weight when I first settled in this country. I was on a 'see food' diet. Everytime I'd see food, I'd eat it."

• CECIL SMITH, TV columnist: "Radio isn't dead though sometimes when Superfan comes on I wish it were."

• AL McGUIRE, Marquette basketball coach on the quick hands of two of his players, Lloyd Walton and Earl Tatum: "If there was a school for pickpockets, they's both be Phi Beta Kappa."

• LLOYD WALTON on McGuire: "The nice thing is, when he yells, you can yell back. He gives you thaat freedom. Of course, when he saaays shut up, I shut up. He's the boss."

•JOHN ROBINSON, USC football coach on the nationwide competition for Southern California prep talent: "We usually do pretty well with what we want.. any kid who has grown up in this climate and chooses to go outside somewhere to a college in the rain or the snow, well, he may not be bright enough to be desirable anyway."

• TELLY SAVALAS, co-owner of Telly's Pop, anticipating his colt's meeting with Honest Pleasure in the Kentucky Derby: "They'll call him Honest Pain when we get through with him.

• ROLAND CARTER, pole vaulter, on his first 18-foot effort: "It wasn't any more of a thrill than the first time I cleared 15 or 16 or 17 feet. I just had more time to enjoy it on the way down."

UCLA ROLLS—

Johnson said he and his teammates dedicated the game to senior guard Andre McCarter, whose season-long goal has been to make it to the NCAA finals in his hometown of Philadelphia.

"Andre was going to get to Philadelphia if he had to walk and I would have been right alongside him," said Bartow.

"That's right," McCarter said, "I told them, 'get me home and I'll take care of everything else.' " His contributions in the Regional finale were nine points, five assists and a hawking job on Rappis.

"I knew he was hurting, but he's a great shooter and no way was he going to get an open shot."

"It hurt quite a bit and I couldn't move very well," said Rappis. "I'm just grateful the coach let me play. I don't know if I should have but I wanted to and there's nothing I can do about it now."

With Rappis merely bringing the ball upcourt with a limp and a prayer, Arizona went to its inside gang of the burly Elliott (10 points), Phil Taylor (14) and Al Fleming (14).

Harris, who riddled Vegas for 31 points, was virtually forgotten. He didn't take a shot for the game's first eight minutes, scored the last of his 18 points with 10:18 to play and was on the bench the final 2:51.

"I switched from man defense to the zone to force them to take outside shots as well as to protect Marques and Richard from foul trouble," said Bartow. "Our stategy on Harris was to make him work as hard as possible for each shot and Raymond (Townsend) did just that. He had very few, if any easy ones."

"We ran into a cold spell when the ball just wouldn't go down and we couldn't make a clutch basket when we needed it," said Snowden of the Bruins' explosion. "We got everything we expected in the way of shots."

Townsend and Washington hurt the Wildcats more than any other Bruin.

Townsend caused Harris to miss on 6 of 10 second-half shots while he was hitting 7 of 12 off the lame Rappis.

"That's one of the most talented backcourts we've played against all season," said the sophomore guard. "Harris got about three baskets in a row off me late in the first half when he was popping out from a double low stack and we weren't getting any communication. If I had concentrated better, I'd have had two or three more baskets myself."

Washington was the tournament's most valuable player. Joining him on the elite quintet were Johnson, Rappis, Al Fleming and Harris. Richard, who shot poorly (7-18) Thursday, hit only four of his first 14 attempts but was 7-of-10 and snared eight of his 10 rebounds in the second half.

Ten of his points came before the blitz, when the Wildcats were still threatening a Bruin lead that varied between one and three points.

"It was only a matter of time until we wore them down," said the other UCLA all-America. "This maybe a stronger team than last year's. We've definitely had better play out of our guards."

He might have added centers, too. David Greenwood and Ralph Drollinger combined for 13 point and 10 boards.

"They were really strong but they also pushed off and did a lot of illegal things like that," said Greenwood of Arizona's front line. "Our job (his and Drollinger's) was to stop Elliott. Stop him from touching the ball and he doesn't score. I think he got six points off me."

The lanky freshman only hopes he can say the same about Kent Benson's point production next week.

Rambo leads way in JC tournament

John Rambo scored 32 points to lead the Kappa-Alpha-Pfi all-stars to a 103-91 victory over Wilson Ford in the Barstow Invitational JC basketball tournament Saturday night.

The all-stars trailed by 11 at halftime. Poly's Michael Wiley and Joe Ware chipped in 13 points. The Stars face Capital Insulation of L.A. today in the semifinals at 11 a.m.

'BRING ON INDIANA'—

Bartow praised his coaching rival, Fred Snowden of Arizona.

"Fred did a phenomenal job getting Arizona ready," he said. "I thought we were awfully strong down the stretch and could have gone another 10 minutes like that."

Snowden said the Wildcats "didn't play to our full potential, but I'm sure UCLA had something to do with that."

Asked what he expected when the Bruins face Indiana, Snowden said: "I haven't seen Indiana personally. But I've seen them on TV. Any team in the final round of four has a legitimate chance to win the national title."

Informed that three Arizona players —guards Jim Rappis and Herman Harris and forward Al Fleming—had claimed places on the all-tournament team, Snowden clapped his hands and said:

"Is that right? I'm just ecastic about that. I wish you could meet our players. They are beautiful people."

Rappis, who reinjured his left heel and arch with eight minutes remaining and played the first 32 minutes at half-speed, said he was "grateful to coach Snowden for letting me play."

"Maybe I shouldn't have played at all," said the senior guard, who converted only one of eight shots after going 10-for-14 against Nevada-Las Vegas Thursday night. "It hurt quite a bit from the beginning."

He shrugged his shoulders. "There's nothing I can do about it now."

Thirty minutes later, he left Pauley Pavilion on crutches and the 200 fans who were still around gave him an ovation.

There were some beautiful people in the stands, too.

HEDGEMON LEWIS KO'D IN TENTH

WEMBLEY, England (AP) — John Stracey of Britain stopped Hedgemon Lewis of Los Angeles in the 10th round Saturday night and retained the World Boxing Council welterweight title.

Lewis, 30, finished the fight looking dazed and on the point of exhaustion after taking a terrible battering from the aggressive 25-year-old Briton.

British referee Harry Gibbs stepped in and stopped the fight after 1 minute 25 seconds of the 10th round to save Lewis from further punishment. It was his third unsuccessful attempt to win the welterweight title. He previously lost twice to Jose Napoles before Stracey beat Napoles for the crwn.

A partisan crowd of 8,000 waved Union Jacks and roared for Stracey at Wembley Empire Pool.

The Canadians won by the same score on Friday. The teams conclude the three-game series tonight at the same facility at 7.

Mike Dabney and Ed Jordan scored 23 points apiece for Rutgers against hustling but outmanned VMI. The Scarlet Knights broke it open with a 227 streak in the final 4½ minutes of the first half and went on top by 21 early in the second. The Keydets, plagued by fouls, crept to within 10 with 8½ minutes left but could get no closer.

VMI lost four players on fouls, including Will Bynum who led all scorers with 34 points. All-American Phil Sellers added 16 points for Rutgers.

Michigan got a balanced attack going to overcome a 43point outburst by Missouri guard Willie Smith. The Wolverines built an 18-point first-half lead before Smith led the Tigers back with his long-range jumpers after intermission. Missouri surged ahead 76-71 with 7:54 left, but Michigan resumed the offensive and gradually pulled ahead for good behind Johnny Robinson and Rickey Green.

The Wolverines went into a stall over the final two minutes to protect their lead.

Green finished with 23 points, Robinson added 21 and Phil Hubbard 20 for the winners.

Cypress softballers stun Vegas

Cypress' hustling Hawks surprised the top-seeded Las Vegas Gamblers, 3-2, in the winners' bracket finals Saturday in the Carson Parks-Recreation/Shakey's softball tournament at Dominguez Park.

The Hawks must wait until 2:15 today to get an opponent from the losers's bracket that must defeat them twice to win the title.

Carson Glenn Miller meets Glendale Continental Furniture at 9 a.m. and that winner plays Oceanside at 10:45. Las Vegas gets the 10:45 victor at 12:30 p.m. to set up the title game or games.

LBSU thinclads eye national ranking

Coach Ron Allice calculates that his Long Beach State track team ranks among the nation's top ten. He'll find out Monday when the 49ers entertain U. of Washington and Occidental at 1 p.m.

"We think that this meet will have great bearing on our national dual meet ranking," Allice said. "Occidental is consistently one of the leading NAIA division teams in the country, while Washington was ranked eighth among all major universities last year.

"Last week we defeated Irvine, the No. 1 college division team in the country. If we defeat Washington and Occidental, we'll be very pleased, but not over-confident. We're going to No. 1-UCLA on March 28."

If the weather is conducive to records, there may be a bunch of them Monday. Many of the races look like eye-strainers.

- 100 meters — Greg County (9.4) and Rickie Jackson (9.4) of Long Beach vs. Al Davis (9.3w) of Washington.
- 200 — Pablo Franco (20.7) of Washington vs. Jackson (21.5) and County (21.5).
- 400 — Albert Shorts (46.2) of Long Beach vs. Keith Tinner (46.7r) and Jerry Belur (47.0r) of Washington.

UCLA vs. Vols

Perfect-record UCLA and Tennessee meet today, 1:15 p.m., at Westwood. UCLA leads their intersectional track and field series, 5-0.

- 800 — Greg Gibson (1:48.6) of Washington vs. Malcolm Cleary (1:51.0) of Oxy and Larry Boaen (1:52.6) and Larry Hayden (1:52.7) of Long Beach.
- 400 hurdles — Gene Taylor (50.6) of Oxy vs. Brian Mondschein (51.1) of Washington and Otis Fisher (52.6) of Long Beach.

There appear to be only two "sure things" — Dwight Stones (7-6½) of Long Beach in the high jump, and 49er Donnie Baird (17-10) in the pole vault.

Allice isn't adding those points yet. Stones cleared only 6-10 in his first meet on the new jump facility, and Baird is coming off a hamstring injury. Baird, second at 17-6 in the recent indoor nationals, is switching to a lighter pole and raising his hand grip from 14-6 to 15 feet.

A team from the Ivory Coast, Africa, will be an added entry in the 400 relay.

Admission is $1.50 for adults. $1 for students.

'Putters' into tourney lead

Golf grass greener for Hubert

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A large number of golf's touring pros have complained— some mildly, some more vehemently —about the grainy, Bermuda grass greens they've encountered at the $175,000 Greater Jacksonville Open.

But Hubert Green, a native of Alabama, a former collegiate star at Florida State and now a resident of nearby Bay Point, Fla., is right at home on these conditions.

"If you're putting good and you know Bermuda greens, know the grain, you can be a little more brave on your putting," Hubert said Saturday after his five-under-par 67 had staked him to the third-round lead in this non-televised event and put him in prime position to claim a rare, second consecutive title.

"You don't have to worry so much about running the ball past the hole. You can stroke your putts with much more authority," said Green, who scored a runaway victory last week in the Doral Open—also played on Bermuda grass greens.

"My putter has been working a little bit better the last couple of weeks," he said. "It's very enjoyable. It's a very welcome change."

Green, rapidly becoming one of the game's more popular players, rewarded the big gallery that trailed him on his trek through a plush residential area spiked by pines and mirrored by lakes with five birdies and no bogeys in a solid round that made him the man to catch in Sunday's final 18 holes of the chase for a $35,000 first prize.

The 44-year-old Barber, who recently joined the elite list of men who have won $1 million playing this game, shot a 68 in the mild, sunny, breezy weather and advanced to second place at 207, just one stroke back. Hill managed a 71 and was another shot behind at 208.

Graham, in a slump most of the year, birdied four holes in a row at one stretch and later holed out a 40-foot sand shot for an eagle-three on his way to a 65.

Carner leads lady golfers

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — Joanne Carner of the United States carded a two-under-par 71 Saturday for a two-day total of three-under-par 143 to take the lead in a women's golf tournament at the Grange Links.

Four strokes behind was Australian Jane Lock, last year's winner.

The first round leader, Rhys Wright of Australia, carded a disappointing 79 for a 149 total.

Cathy Duggan of the U.S. was fourth at 152, followed by Gillian Bannan of New Zealand at 154.

Nastase goes 'soft' in victory over Connors

CARLSBAD (AP) — Ilie Nastase, the Rumanian star who paid a $6,000 fine to get into the event, won the $30,000 first prize Saturday in the Independent Players Association Tennis Tournament by whipping Jimmy Connors, 4-6, 6-0, 6-1.

After Connors broke the Rumanian's serve twice in the first set in the finals at La Costa, Nastase dominated the match in the final two sets and rattled off 10 straight games before Connors captured the fifth game of the third set.

Connors, 23, who beat the 29-year-old Nastase in straight sets at Hampton, Va., just a week ago, appeared befuddled by a switch of strategy when the Rumanian quit trying to match the lefthander's power and successfully went to softer placements.

To get into this week's tournament, Nastase had to pay a $6,000 fine assessed against him for a match in Canada last year where he was accused of not trying in the final set he lost to Manual Orantes.

"He played good," Connors commented of Nastase this time. "He ran down a lot of balls and hit some great shots."

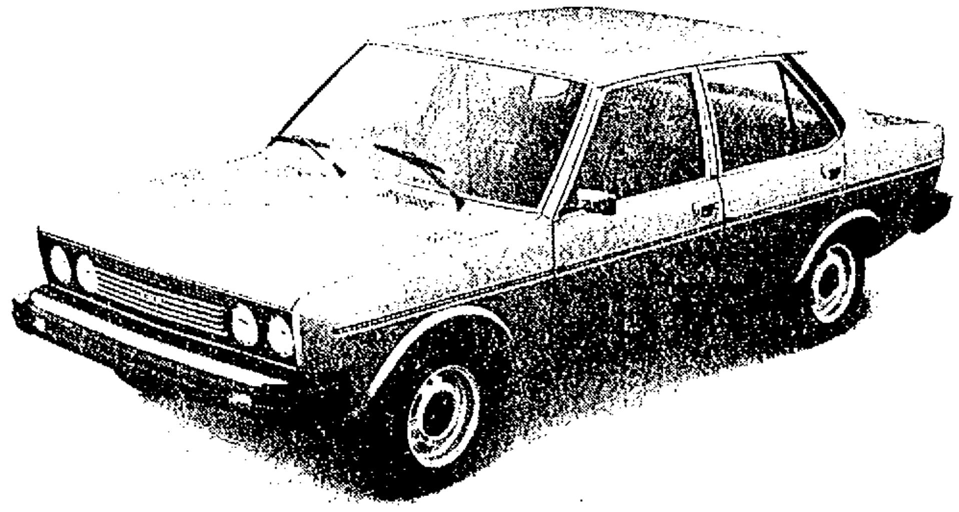
The first thing you have to do to get a lot of car for not a lot of money is believe it's possible.



The 1976 Fiat 131 Sedan.

You can't believe that a car costing as little as ours could come with rack-and-pinion steering, a five-speed gear box, front-wheel disc brakes, radial tires, undercoating, tinted windows, door-to-door carpeting, a rear window defroster, an adjustable steering wheel, and complete rustproofing? Plus the room of much larger cars? And the performance of much more expensive ones?

Then, before you spend your money on any car, you'd better test drive a Fiat 131.

Because not only is it possible, but all those things come on a 131 with a choice of either two doors or four.

Chapman, L.B. State trade wins

Lefthander Bob McRae pitched five innings of one-hit baseball and his teammate banged out 14 hits in six innings Saturday as host Long Beach State split a doubleheader with Chapman College.

McRae and the 49ers jumped on the Panthers for an 11-1 triumph in the seven-inning nightcap after Chapman had won the first game, 3-2, by throwing the tying run out at the plate with two out in the ninth.

The 49ers (13-10) made it easy for McRae to secure his second win when Shaughn Lewicki walked to force in one tally and Greg Commentz, Jim Smith, Steve Fenoglio (2 runs) and Frank Hardy followed with consecutive run-scoring singles in a six-run third inning.

Vikes' Metro skein snapped

Saturday was not Long Beach City College's day.

First the Vikings saw a ninth-inning, game-tying rally dissolve when Ed Myers singled into a double play.

Then the Vikings saw their 10-game Metropolitan Conference win streak disappear when Bill Tidmore limited them to three hits while hurling host East L.A. College to a 1-0 triumph.

The second event could not have taken place without the first.

Tidmore, who was to win his first Metro game of the season, was protecting the 1-0 lead when LBCC's Perry Maloney opened the ninth inning with a single and advanced on a groundout.

Jeff Newon was inserted as a pinch-runner and he was sent to the plate when Myers singled to center.

But East L.A.'s Ken Tillman fielded the ball cleanly and threw a strike to catcher Jess Monarrez, who tagged out Newon and then threw to second where the advancing Myers was tagged out.

The Monarchs managed only five hits themselves, but put two, two-out doubles together for a third-inning tally that spelled defeat for Greg Harris for the first time in six decisions.

Monarrez and Juan Williams had the back-to-back two-base hits.

The win was East L.A.'s fourth in 10 league games.

Patterson beats Santa Ana

Cerritos back on winning track

Dave Patterson, the pitcher of record Tuesday when Cerritos College suffered its first loss of the year, got the Falcons flying again Saturday.

Patterson hurled five-plus innings of one-hit relief and collected his sixth win of the season as Cerritos handed host Santa Ana College its first South Coast Conference loss of the year, 5-3.

The triumph, Cerritos' 16th in 17 games overall and fourth in five league outings, moved Wally Kincaid's troops back into first place in the SCC.

Santa Ana is 3-1 in league and 15-5 overall.

Cerritos lacked much of its offensive punch Saturday, collecting only six hits, three by first baseman Mark Carpenter. The Falcons were aided, however, by nine walks.

One of those free passes came with the bases loaded in the sixth inning and forced in the winning run. Carpenter drove in an insurance tally in that stanza with a groundout.

Upsets hit L.B. junior net tourney

By BOB MARTIN
Staff Writer

Upsets rocked the 20th Long Beach Junior Tennis Championships Saturday, but two national champions advanced with ease to this morning's semifinals.

Lea Antonoplis of Glendora, the national Girls 16 champion in 1975, won two matches in the Girls 18 division, beating Julie Gebhart of Pacific Palisades, 6-1, 6-0, and then ousting Elizabeth Smith of San Diego, 6-1, 6-1.

Lea, who has played in some of the Virginia Slims women's pro tournaments, is top-seeded.

Cover girl Tracy Austin of Rolling Hills — her picture graces the cover of the current issue of Sports Illustrated — led the way in the Girls 16 competition with a 6-1, 6-1 quarterfinal victory over Shelly Stillman of Leucadia.

Tracy, who turned 13 last December, won the national Girls 14 title last summer.

Two 11-year-old Long Beach stars, Carol Heynen and Brad Ackerman, won two matches each to gain the semifinals. They were the only players from the host city left in singles contention as the second weekend of competition got under way at the Lakewood County Club Tennis Center and Long Beach City College.

Miss Heynen, top-seeded in Girls 12s, blanked Carey Hagey of La Jolla, 6-0, 6-0, in the third round and then beat Anne Nasser of Pasadena in the quarterfinals by the same score. She has yet to lose a game in the meet.

In the Boys 12s, Ackerman defeated Tim Pawsat of Santa Ana, 6-4, 7-5, in the fourth round, and then eliminated Jeff Krieger of Claremont in the quarterfinals, 6-2, 6-0. He'll face top-seeded Ricky Leach of Arcadia at 10 this morning.

Semifinals and finals in all events will be played today at Lakewood Country Club.

THE BIGGEST upset was registered in the Boys 18 division when unseeded Chris Dunk of Santa Ana ousted top-seeded Curt Stalder of Rancho Palos Verdes in the round of 16 by a 2-6, 6-4, 7-6 score.

Dunk, a 6-foot, 3 ½-inch senior at Foothill High in Tustin, led 5-1 in the third set, then fell behind 5-6 before pulling out the match over Stalder, who plays for UC Irvine.

At 9 this morning, Dunk will face sixth-seeded Robert Van't Hof of Downey, who plays regularly on the La Lakewood courts.

John Stiepel of Los Alamitos also scored a major upset, as he eliminated second-seeded Randy Nixon of Coronado, 7-6, 7-6, in a Boys 16 quarterfinal.

Scheduled starting times for semifinals and finals in singles: Boys 18s, 9 and 11 a.m.; Boys 16s, 9 and 11 a.m., Boys 14s, 10 a.m. and noon; Boys 12s, 10 a.m. and noon; Girls 18s, 10 a.m. and noon; Girls 16s, 10 a.m. and noon; Girls 14s, 9 and 11 a.m.; Girls 12s, 9 and 11 a.m.

LBSU women go East for shot at national cage championship

By ELAINE RISINGER
Staff Writer

Even before the first pre-season game in December, Fran Schaafsma was calling her Long Beach State basketball team "the best I've ever coached." During last week's western regionals at San Jose State, the 49ers set about proving it.

The squad won a bid to the AIAW National Tournament by upsetting UCLA in the semifinals. UCLA had edged LBSU twice during the regular season.

Fran and the team will leave Monday for Penn State where they will meet second-seeded Immaculata College in the opening contest Wednesday. The last time the 49ers were in national competition 1972 when they finished sixth.

Cal State Fullerton, which won the regional title goes into the championship race ranked third. Delta State College of Mississippi, defending champions, are top seeded. Sixteen school will participate.

Fran is optimistic over her team's chances at Penn State. "I don't think anybody there will be any tougher than the teams we faced here. I don't plan to change anything in our game. We will just try to execute with consistency."

Two players are doubtful for the 49ers. Cardi Hicks, a starting guard, has a sprained ankle, and Debbie Cantu, reserve guard, has an injured knee.

Recounting the final game against Fullerton at the regionals, Fran quoted Billy Moore, the Fullerton coach, who described her team's night as "the best game we've played."

Fran continued, "Fullerton played superbly. Nancy Dunkle had 29 points and blocked seven or eight shots. She really looked like an all-America."

An early lead and a scoring blitz in the middle of the second half provided the victory for Fullerton. "Our big thing was to qualify for nationals," explained Fran, who feels fatigue from a three-game schedule and LBSU's victory over UCLA left her team a little flat for the Fullerton game.

LBSU gymnasts missed qualifying for the AIAW National Tournament by a mere 1.9 points at the western regionals last weekend. Coach Marion Duncan lost a team member, Marta Stolz, during her first event with torn knee tendons.

LBSU's top all-around gymnast, Denise Garber, was one of only two individual specialists qualifying for the nationals. She earned a score of 33.3. Miss Garber is entered this weekend in the Western States University Games at Cal State Hayward, and will compete at the nationals in early April at Appalachaian State University, Boone, N.C.

Top scorer for the day from Long Beach City College (the only community college to qualify for the regionals) was Susie Rapp, who had an 8.1 on the balance beam.

Only four universities, Cal State Fullerton, San Diego State, USC and University of Nevada-Reno, qualified for national competition, an indication of the high skill level demanded by judges in the area. Most conferences, coach Duncan explained, send six or seven teams, which many times finished lower in the finals than the Southern California entries.

SALLY MONSOOR, coach of the Long Beach City College tennis team, hopes Golden West College will be "worried just a little bit" after the Viking's' strong 6-1 triumph Thursday over Orange Coast College. LBCC meets Golden West Thursday on the GWC home courts.

In the winning column at the OCC-LBCC contest were Marilyn Pruett, 7-6, 6-3; Terry Berryman, 6-1, 6-1; Chris St. Schruber, 6-1, 6-7, 7-6; Laura Krebs and Terri Machado, 6-0, 6-2; Karolyn Hathaway and Joan McLean, 6-3, 6-1, and Betsy Hose and Jani Kuhn, 6-2, 6-1.

WOMEN IN SPORTS

IN A match that wasn't decided until the very last game, LBCC's coed badminton team tied L.A. City College, 12-12. "It was one of the best games we've had all season," coach Gillis Brown said.

The two schools split matches in the ladies, men's and mixed singles. L.A. pushed ahead in the ladies doubles with LBCC coming back to tie in the men's doubles.

Rhea Gram's badminton team at Cerritos College ran its Coast League record to a perfect 2-0 by stopping Pasadena College, 16-8. Greg Garrett, Henry Xang, Domible Cadena, Harmon Vincon and Jerry Baas each won three matches for the Falcons. Paul Luangraj and James Tung won two.

ALTHOUGH the LBCC softball team lost Monday to Golden West, 6-0, coach Donna Prindle was pleased with her team's play against the National Community College champions. Cindy Mast earned LBCC's one hit.

LBCC also lost to Mt. San Antonio College Wednesday. Top batters for the Vikings are Kim Doyle, .500; Kay Haggerty, .385, and Kim Kelly, 307.

Offensively, Norma Jackson was a one-woman gang when the Cerritos softball team downed East L.A., 6-0, Wednesday. Norma, a shortstop with an .880 batting average, hit two singles, a double, had 3 RBIs and scored twice.

Capably taking over as catcher for the day was Pam Wunderlich, who replaced Barbara Johnson, out with an injured back. Pam, a freshman from Mayfair High School, singled and scored a run.

Cerritos squeaked by Santa Ana College, 1-0, Monday in a nonleague game pitched by Norma Jackson, who allowed only one hit and had seven strike outs.

THE WAY things are shaping up, it appears that Thursday's basketball game between Jordan and Poly High Schools will decide the Vinnie G. Eaton title. Both teams are undefeated at this point.

Jordan downed Millikan Thursday, 45-29, with Adrienne Hamilton leading the scoring with 20 points. Rhonda Skitch added 11. Adrienne had 22 rebounds, Rhonda 13.

Launa Gaudette was high scorer in the JV game won by Jordan, 26-12. Latishue Hamilton's 11 rebounds aided the victory. Lorie Lindahl is team coach.

Prix drivers will be on scene today

By ALLEN WOLFE
Staff Writer

Grand Prix drivers, crews, and officials of the Formula One Constructors Association — all of whom will take part in next week's United States Grand Prix West — are scheduled to arrive in Southern California today following a 12-hour trans-polar flight from London.

The charter jet, carrying 240 passengers, including 40 members of the European press, is due to touch down at 6:05 p.m. at the West Imperial Terminal of L.A. International Airport.

Among those meeting the plane will be Long Beach Grand Prix president Chris Pook plus association officers Dan Gurney, Phil Hill, Don Dyer, Jack Queen, Pete Biro, John Queen, Jim Michaelian and Sumner Offill.

"We will be part of a small welcoming delegation," says Pook. "Nothing elaborate is planned. Everyone will be tired from their long flight and we will do our best to have them situated in their hotels as soon as possible."

Grand Prix drivers arriving on the flight will be Jody Scheckter, Patrick Depailler, Gunnar Nilsson, Bob Evans, Carlos Reutemann, Carlos Pace, Vittorio Brambilla, Ronnie Peterson, Jochen Mass, Tom Pryce, Jean-Pierre Jarier, Renzo Zorzi, Harold Ertl, John Watson, Emerson Fittipaldi, Ingo Hoffman, Hans Stuck and Arturo Merzario.

James Hunt, winner of last Sunday's non-championship Race of Champions at Brands Hatch, England, has been in Long Beach since Tuesday, while Brett Lunger and his bride Jo have been in town for almost 10 days. World driving champion Niki Lauda, engaged in test sessions at the Ferrari factory in Modena, Italy, will not arrive until early Tuesday. His Ferrari teammate, Clay Regazzoni, arrived Saturday.

The majority of the Grand Prix teams will be staying aboard the Queen Mary, although the Elf Tyrrell team of Ken Tyrrell, Jody Scheckter and Patrick Depailler will stay at the Breakers Hotel, and the French Ligier Gitanes team with driver Jacques Laffite will reside at the Buffums Apartment Hotel.

For the first part of the week, the Grand Prix troupe will be engaged in sightseeing ventures around Southern California, including trips to Disneyland, Marineland and Knott's Berry Farm, plus accommodating the media at numerous functions.

The Grand Prix cars will be shuttled to Long Beach via two Tradewinds Airlines CF-44 freight planes, one scheduled to arrive at Long Beach Airport at 9:30 p.m. Tuesday, the other at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday. Both planes will clear customs in Bangor, Maine, refuel and fly non-stop to Long Beach.

Once the cars arrive in Long Beach, they will be dispersed to seven auto dealerships in town, where they will undergo registration and technical inspection Thursday from 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Jamestown Motors, 1350 Long Beach Blvd., will house the cars belonging to Team Tyrrell, McLaren, UOP Shadow, John Player Team Lotus, Frank Williams and Penske. Team Surtees will be at Import Auto, 1460 Long Beach Blvd.; Team March will be at Salta Pontiac, 1545 Long Beach Blvd.; Copersucar-Fittipaldi will be at Coast Cadillac, 1501 Long Beach Blvd.; Ferrari will be at Bob Autry, 1860 Long Beach Blvd.; Team Hesketh will be at Holiday Motors, 1427 Long Beach Blvd., and Martini-Brabham will be at Mel Burns Ford, 2000 Long Beach Blvd.

The public is invited to see the cars on display during registration and tech inspection, although the cars will be on formal display later Thursday at the Concours d'Elegance on Pine Ave. between First and Fifth streets. The affair is scheduled from 3 to 4 p.m.

Competition begins Friday with the first round of practice and qualifying, followed by additional time trials Saturday to determine the 24 starters for the race Sunday.

The United States Grand Prix West is for a duration of two hours, starting at 1:15 p.m.

Andretti will sample drag boat

Mario Andretti, who will be driving through the streets of Long Beach next Sunday in the U.S. Grand Prix West, is about to discover what it's like to go over 150 mph in a drag boat.

Andretti will ride with lady driver Mary Rife in her blown fuel hydro "Proud Mary" to start today's Kidney Foundation drag boat racing benefit at noon at Marine Stadium.

Rife, a Mission Viejo housewife who doubles as a machinist in Gardena to help finance her racing program, went 168 mph Saturday during qualifying to earn a berth among the 16 finalists for today's event.

The 3,000-plus spectators who tuned out Saturday saw seven boats surpass 180 mph and two exceed 190. Top speed of the day was turned in by Doug Hilton, Redondo Beach, at 192.42 mph.

World record holder Sam Kurtovich of Fresno managed a 188.07 clocking in his "Hot Jawz" while Mike DuBiel of Santa Ana recorded a 186.27. Other good times included Dennis Pollaccia, Redondo Beach, 182.17; Casey Reno, Mt. Shasta, 181.67; and Frank Matthews, Fresno, 180.08.

Millionaire mare Dahlia tests males, Santa Anita turf today

Dahlia, racing's millionaire mare, gets her first look at Santa Anita's grass course today when she faces seven male rivals in the $100,000 San Luis Rey Stakes.

Sandy Hawley, Santa Anita's top rider this meeting, will be aboard Dahlia, who will carry 121 pounds in the 1½-mile event.

The six-year-old daughter of Vaguely Noble can become the richest mare in racing history with a victory or even a second-place finish in the San Luis Rey. She needs less than $20,000 to top Allez France's money-winning mark.

Dahlia's top contenders in the event, worth $66,300 to the winner, are expected to be Top Command, ridden by Bill Shoemaker; Avatar, the Belmont Stakes winner, ridden by Laffit Pincay, and grass specialists Announcer, ridden by Fernando Toro, and Top Crowd, with Frank Olivares aboard.

Completing the field are Gai Hai, with Don Pierce up; One On The Aislo, Jorge Tejeira up, and Copper Mel, with Francisco Mena aboard.

All starters, with the exception of Dahlia, who receives a five-pound sex allowance, will carry 126 pounds.

In Santa Anita's feature race Saturday, the $56,800 San Bernardino Handicap, Hawley piloted Martin Ritt's Zanthe, who commanded the pace from the start and lengthened his lead in the stretch to draw out to a seven-length victory.

Second choice of the crowd of 35,459, Zanthe carried 118 pounds, equaled the course record of 1:45⅘ for 1⅛-miles on the turf and returned $7, $3.40 and $2.80.

Favored Riot In Paris, with Shoemaker in the irons, paid $3 and $2.60 for second place and Mateor, ridden by Don Pierce, paid $3.60.

Bingo II, Copper Mel and Cruiser II completed the order of finish in the field of six four-year-olds and up.

The winner, trained by Bobby Frankel, picked up $34,000 as he won his second stakes of the season. Earlier at Santa Anita Zanthe captured the San Gabriel and also placed in both the San Marcos and the San Luis Obispo.

"It was a good race for him," Hawley said. "He rates so well, but I think he could have done just as well if he wasn't on the lead. Turning for home, I hit him a couple of times just to keep him from loafing."

The victory was the seventh stakes win of the meeting for Hawley.

U.S. RACE ROUNDUP

GULFSTREAM—Hail The Pirates ($11.20), purchased earlier this week by John A. Bell III, caught Legion in the final stride to win a three-horse photo-finish in the $122,600 Gulfstream Park Handicap. Ridden by Braulio Baeza, the winner was a nose in front of longshot Legion, who was a head in front of Packer Captain. The 6-5 favorite, Hatchet Man, was fourth in the field of seven and Foolish Pleasure, who would have been an overwhelmingly favorite, was not entered because trainer Leroy Jolley did not like the weight assignment of 131 pounds. The winner's time for the 1¼-miles was 2:01⅕.

AQUEDUCT—Bold Forbes ($5.40) bolstered his Kentucky Derby credentials by running away from seven other three-year-olds and winning the $56,300 Bay Shore Stakes in stakes-record time. Ridden by Angel Cordero, the winner crossed the finish line 7¾-lengths ahead of Eustace and was clocked in 1:20⅗ for the seven furlongs. The victory was Bold Forbes' second in four starts this year and his ninth in 12 career starts.

OAKLAWN—Jorge Tejeira, aboard his third winner of the day, rode heavily-favored Royal Glint ($2.60) to victory in the $50,000 added Razorback Handicap. Winner of the $250,000 Santa Anita Handicap, Royal Glint defeated Marauder by four lengths in 1:42⅕ for the mile and 1/16.

NEW ORLEANS—Johnny Appleseed ($21.40) came from far off the pace to win by a neck in the $100,000 Louisiana Derby. Ridden by Marcos Castanedas, the winner charged along the rail at the head of the stretch and outdueled Glassy Dip in the final eighth of a mile. Favored Princely Game faded to 12th in the 1⅛-mile contest, timed in 1:49⅘.

GOLDEN GATE—Nice To Have ($8) began to circle her competitors at the turn, then cut loose in the stretch to win by a head in the $32,350 Golden Poppy Handicap. The leading four among eight fillies and mares were separated by a head, a neck and a nose. Silverlark was second and Our First Delight ran third. Randy Schacht was the winning jockey for the mile and 1/16, timed in 1.43.

PIMLICO—Zen ($3.40) defeated Cojak by 2¾-lengths in a field of four Triple Crown nominees to win the $26,950 Hirsch Jacobs Stakes. Ridden by Jacinto Vasquez, the winner ran the six furlongs in 1.11⅕.

Inflation hits state parks; fees will go up, April 1

DONNELL CULPEPPER

Inflation has hit the California State Parks and the use fees for most of those will rise on April 1. Herbert Rhodes, director of State Parks and Recreation, says the increases are necessary because of a 200 per cent rise in the costs of maintaining and operating state park units since the last general increase in 1967.

Although the acquisition and development of land and facilities for the park system are supported by all people of California, those who actually use the park facilities are expected to support about 50 per cent of the operating and maintenance costs, Rhodes pointed out.

He said that all tickets purchased before April 1, including future campsite reservations, will be available at the present rates. Fees for tours of Hearst Castle were revised in March 1974, and will not be changed.

Here is the schedule of changes for camping:

Campsites with facility hookups for camping vehicles, $5 per night, up $1 from the present rate. Most family campsites, $4, up $1, which include a table, stove and food cupboard. Such sites also are provided with flush toilets, piped drinking water, improved roads and in most cases, hot showers and laundries.

Primitive (undeveloped) campsites, $2, up 50 cents. Such sites normally includes cleared access roads. chemical or pit toilets and, in sme cases, a table and central water supply.

CHARGES FOR GROUP CAMPS will remain the same—50 cents per night for each person in adult groups, and 25 cents per night for each person in youth groups (17 years of age and younger). The minimum charge for any group is $10.

Reservation fees for campsites and group camps remain the same—$1.50 per campsite for each period reserved, payable when reservations are made; $2.50 per group camp for each period reserved.

Horse camps, $3 per campsite per night, up $1, with up to two horses; 50 cents for each additional horse (up 25 cents); $4 per campsite per night for Los Caballos Campground at Cuyamaca Rancho State Park (up $1).

Boat camps, $2 per campsite per night (up 50 cents).

Off-season camping permits, $20 (up $10). Each permit is good for 10 nights of camping at designated units in the off-season (winter at most state units, summer in desert units).

Additional motor vehicle, $1 per night (no change).

Dogs in campgrounds, $1 per night (up 50 cents); no charge for seeing-eye dogs.

Trail camps (hikers and bicyclers), 50 cents per night per person. This is a new category of campground being established this year. Most of those will be situated near the coast.

THERE ALSO ARE CHANGES in the day-use permits:

Persons entering by private vehicle, $1.50 (up 50 cents); on foot, 25 cents (no change); by bus, $5 per bus (up $2).

Horse camps, $1.50 for each vehicle, with up to two horses (up 50 cents); 50 cents for each additional horse (up 25 cents).

Annual day-use permit, $15 for the calendar year (up $5). Valid at all state-operated parks with day-use facilities; may be restricted to one entry per day at some parks.

Special use permits are available as follows: Boat facilities, including all day-use facilities, $3 per boat and vehicle (up $1); boat facilities only, $1.50 (up 50 cents); annual boat and day-use permit, $30 per calendar year (up $10), valid at all state-operated boat-launching facilities. There are increases for Angel Island boat mooring, also at Brannon Island State Recreation Area for overnight and holding tank pumpout.

Admission prices at most state historic units and museums have been increased from 25 to 50 cents, with those 71 and under free. There is no change at the San Francisco Maritime State Historic Park—75 cents for adult s and 25 cents for youths.

Motorcycles 80 cc and under, $1.50 (up 50 cents); motorcycles over 80cc, $3 per day per vehicle (up $1).

THE WILDERNESS SOCIETY'S trips, which start as early as mid-April, continue into the late summer and even the fall, says Jill Rowland, director of "A Way to the Wilderness Trip Program. Miss Rowland reminds all persons interested in such trips—and there are dozens to choose from—that they may a folder giving all details from the Wildnerness Society, Trip Department, 4260 E. Evans Ave., Denver, Colo. 80222. Send 25 cents to assist with mailing costs.

Boat Owners Buying Guide for 1976 has been released to the marine and book stores by Yachting Publishing Corporation. The book has been revised to make it easier to use. There are eight special tab pages to designate certain sections of the book so that you don't have to thumb through the entire volume for one bit of information. The book sells for $2.50.

The McDonnell Douglas Rod and Gun Club will hold its annual spotfin croaker fishing derby at Newport Bay on April 10, and has extended a challenge to all fishing clubs in this area to participate. The host club already has a large array of awards for the derby. Rich Lucero (714-826-1736 at night) or Ron Brousseau (593-7560 daytime) are handling reservations for the derby.

Secret Witness case summaries

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 65 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $43,000 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial. Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the case list below, one of the selected and varying summaries of Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information DIRECTLY through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing in care of the Secret Witness post office box.

Today's summaries follow:

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 49-year-old deaf mute Kenneth Lawrence Willis, found stabbed to death in his Long Beach duplex at 6042 Orange Ave. on Dec. 30, 1975.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 59-year-old David E. Smith, of Downey, shot to death during a holdup at Lucy's Restaurant, 5096 Long Beach Blvd., shortly before 2 a.m. on Nov. 24, 1975.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the torch slayer of Alice Olay, 52, of Downey, whose charred body was found in a blazing auto in a lot at Pioneer Boulevard and Rosecrans Avenue in Norwalk early on the morning of Sept. 19, 1975.

—A $1,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and manslaughter conviction of the hit-run driver who struck and killed Myrtle Taylor, 88, of Gardena, as she was crossing Vermont Avenue at 149th Street in Gardena at 7:15 p.m. on Oct. 24, 1975. The driver was described by witnesses as a tall, thin black man about 30 years old, driving a 1969 Chevrolet Impala or Caprice, blue with a matching vinyl top.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Robert L. Boone, 28, of Long Beach, who was found shot to death in a Signal Hill field at 23rd Street and Junipero Avenue on the morning of Aug. 18, 1975.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the holdup slayer of Benjamin Wallace, 48-year-old San Pedro taxi driver who was found shot to death and slumped over the wheel of his cab parked at Seaside Avenue and Terminal Way on Terminal Island at 3 a.m. on Sunday, Aug. 3, 1975.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of James Hamilton Macgenn, 50-year-old employe of King's Imperial Restaurant in Lynwood at 1004 Atlantic Ave., stabbed to death in the restaurant parking lot as he was leaving work at 3:30 a.m. on June 1, 1975.

—Rewards totaling $3,500 — including $2,000 guaranteed by Secret Witness and $1,500 pledged by store owner Christopher Saunders — will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Duane Fettig, 29-year-old clerk shot to death during a holdup at the Melody Liquor Store, 20716 S. Normandie Ave. in the Torrance area, on the morning of Feb. 5, 1975.

—A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest of Douglas Lee Thompson, 23-year-old fugitive from a murder warrant in connection with the holdup-slaying of David W. Arouette in his television repair shop at 6465 Long Beach Blvd. on Dec. 30, 1973, with an additional reward of $1,500 to be paid when and if Thompson is convicted of the murder.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of Graydon James Smith, 42, stabbed to death in the living quarters behind his dry cleaning shop at 3937 Long Beach Blvd. during an apparent robbery attempt on Nov. 4, 1974.

THE SEAL BEACH PIER, ON THE QUIET OF A LATE WINTER DAY

'A little bit of someplace else'

Seal Beach: city of many hamlets

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

SEAL BEACH'S GREEN BELT ALONG THE OLD PACIFIC ELECTRIC ROUTE

Pick a nice subdivision somewhere. Say in Reseda or Northridge. Or La Palma or Anaheim.

Then plunk yourself down in College Park East, a large but tidy tract of single family homes in the northeast corner of Seal Beach, and see if you can tell the difference.

Chances are you'll think you're in Reseda or Northridge. Or La Palma or Anaheim. Or any one of a hundred middle-class subdivisions that are part of the great suburban sprawl of Southern California.

IF YOU'D like a change of scenery, though, you might try getting on Seal Beach Boulevard and driving south toward the ocean. You'll have to traverse the San Diego Freeway, of course, then cross Westminster Avenue and Pacific Coast Highway. But if you persevere, you'll end up in a section of the city that offers a mellow blend of expansive beachfront, sparkling ocean, quiet streets, pleasant homes and charming storefronts, not to mention a city hall that is modeled after Santa Barbara's and an open belt that cuts a refreshing green swath through the center of town on what used to be the old Pacific Electric right-of-way.

In Seal Beach, the section is known as Old Town; to the outsider who first sets eyes on it, it's nirvana by the sea—a nostalgic setting that borrows joyfully from the past (without being precious about it) and guards its small-town character with the same fierce if provincial jealousy that San Franciscans reserve for their town.

Unconsciously, if not consciously, Old Town is the Confederacy of Seal Beach. It would just as soon be on its own. As for College Park East, it would probably feel more comfortable as part of adjoining Los Alamitos or nearby Rossmoor.

OLD TOWN and College Park East form the Odd Couple of Seal Beach—or rather, one of its Odd Couples. But, then, that's the nature of the city: it's not "a whole bunch of small towns more or less glued together," as Laker basketball star Kareem Abdul-Jabbar said of Los Angeles recently. It's a crazy collage of disparate communities, joined in political matrimony and clinging tenuously to the sides of a huge federal reservation known as the U. S. Naval Weapons Station, which forms the centerpiece of the collage.

Although it is under federal jurisdiction, the weapons station lies within the boundaries of Seal Beach and, in fact, occupies more than half of its 12 square miles. In a sense, it represents the largest piece of open space in Seal Beach, with 1,200 of its 5,000 acres having been designated a wildlife refuge.

And while it's true that the weapons station accentuates the splintered quality of the town, it's also true that it has been a buffer against massive development. It may, in fact, be Seal Beach's last remaining barrier to amoebic growth and unrelieved suburban sprawl.

The other sections of the city include, in addition to College Park East and Old Town, the Hill, College Park West, Leisure World, Surfside and the Oakwood apartment complex, not to mention a trailer park and a fancy housing tract called Bridgeport.

COLLEGE Park West is smaller but similar to its counterpart on the east and nestles in a triangle formed by the Garden Grove Freeway, the San Diego Freeway and the San Gabriel River. It lies about three miles west of its sister subdivision and is virtually isolated from the rest of the city. Outside of the freeways, it has only one entrance and exit, and that's through Long Beach.

Just south of it, on the other side of the San Diego-Garden Grove Freeway, is Leisure World, the famous retirement community that is sealed off from its neighbors by a surrounding wall and a gate through which visitors can enter only by special permission. Leisure World accounts for almost a third of the city's population of 28,000.

No other section of the city outside of the weapons station quite rivals Leisure World for its sense of isolation as Surfside, a private community of beachfront homes and cottages with a fence around it and a guarded entrance.

Then there's Oakwood, an isolated, almost forgotten apartment compound that would feel right at home in Long Beach if it didn't sit on the other side of the San Gabriel River.

OAKWOOD has a twin (more or less) in Long Beach's Stoneybrook, a three-story superblock of garden apartments that fits right into the chic new housing pattern of southeast Long Beach, where Marina Pacifica is the reigning queen.

Seal Beachers—if they think of Oakwood at all, and they seldom do—think of it as a haven for swinging singles. It's an overworked image, though. What swinging goes on in Oakwood is far more sedate than it may have been in the South Bay Clubs that preceded it on the Southland scene. (The South Bay Clubs—they're all Oakwoods now—catered exclusively to single people.)

Today (if you don't count kids) Oakwood has a healthy mixture of singles, married and unmarried couples and oldsters. And while it seems like a glorified dormitory to someone coming in from the outside, its numerous social and recreational activities also give it an air of resort life (the image it likes to project).

You'd think that a town with as many separate identities as Seal Beach inevitably would suffer a certain psychic dislocation. And you'd be right, of course. Even Seal Beachers have a hard time trying to get a handle on their city.

Is it an easy-going beach town that suddenly comes alive each summer with swarms of visitors? Or is it a central city surrounded by residential areas?

And where does its real personality lie—in the surrounding enclaves, which form a loose confederation of middle-class fiefdoms, or in the city's old core, a proud little kingdom that seems forever on the verge of political burial?

Oldtimers in the city would like to think of it as a beach town; and, secretly, many who live in Old Town would just as soon hack it alone if it were possible—although most of them admit it's not.

You'll get a few oldtimers to concede that Surfside and the Hill (which lies just north of Old Town, above Pacific Coast Highway) are legitimate parts of the city. But the other annexed areas? God, no!

MIND YOU, the old timers don't begrudge the outlanders their well-trimmed lawns and backyard barbecues. They're "fine citizens," says Ray Gise, a pipe-smoking resident of Old Town with 50 years of Seal Beach history under his belt. It's just that the outlying sections belong elsewhere—in Long Beach, Los Alamitos or Rossmoor. Neither their roots nor their hearts are really in Seal Beach, the old timers will tell you—Seal Beach in their lexicon, of course, meaning Old Town.

Nowhere is the split personality of the city so evident as on the city council, where a four-to-one vote seems to be the rule rather than the exception—the lone vote usually being Old Town's.

Blind hit-run victim mourned at funeral as 'friend to everyone'

By KRIS SHERMAN
Staff Writer

An estimated 500 mourners, including several members of the Guide Dog Boosters of America accompanied by their dogs, attended funeral services for Raymond La Belle in Long Beach Saturday.

La Belle was struck by a hit-and-run driver as he crossed San Antonio Drive at Atlantic Avenue last Sunday evening. He died of internal injuries two days later at Memorial Hospital.

His wife of 10 months, Marsha, 26, also was injured. She was listed in satisfactory condition at Harbor General Hospital in Torrance, where she underwent surgery Tuesday for a fractured pelvis.

Both have been blind since birth.

The two, guided by Marsha's dog, Tad, were crossing to the east side of San Antonio Drive with the green light when they were struck by the hit-and-run driver, who was northbound on Atlantic Avenue.

County prosecutors have filed a three-count criminal complaint against a 50-year-old Long Beach man, Harry Lee Lyles, of 2103 Orange Ave.

Lyles, arrested Wednesday after a car matching the description of the hit-and-run vehicle was found near his home, is free on $1,500 bail. He is scheduled for arraignment Tuesday in Long Beach Municipal Court on one count of felony manslaughter and two counts of felony hit-and-run driving.

La Belle's funeral in the Long Beach Fourth Ward of the Mormon Church was conducted just a few blocks from the accident scene, and mourners noted with more than usual sadness that their friend, who loved automobiles, was ironically killed by one.

RAYMOND AND MARSHA LA BELLE, ON WEDDING DAY

'Bill of Increased Rights' due for aged

By MOLLY BURRELL
Staff Writer

A "Bill of Increased Rights" for senior citizens—including pioneer legislation which prohibits listing age on applications for state jobs—is emerging in the California Legislature, Human Relations Commission conferees learned Saturday in Long Beach.

The legislative review came from Assemblyman Fred Chel, D-Long Beach, chairman of the Joint Committee on Aging. He was one of six speakers at a meeting at the Queensway Hilton where about 400 HRC members from throughout the state held their third annual conference.

Other proposed bills would mandate training and utilization of an older-worker specialist in each state employment office, change the Office on Aging to the Department of Aging, and make an independent Commission on Aging responsible for advising the state on all matters of concern to older persons.

Already enacted is nursing-home legislation that sets up an ombudsman program and mandates unannounced inspections by the health department, which then can issue citations and assess fines.

Chel also stressed the need for liason in all matters that concern the elderly—health, housing, education, nursing care homes, transportation and consumer affairs. He said this is a major objective of the proposal to give the Department of Aging co-equal status in order to coordinate with other state departments.

"California has the largest pool of aging population of any state in the union and will probably continue that way," he said.

"Funding for senior citizen programs has increased from $132,904 in 1967 to $20,640,000 this year," he said, adding: "I see it as my personal as well as committee responsibility to see that this money is spent in the best possible way."

But, he warned, all money programs are going to have tough sledding in the Brown administration and advocates should agree on a small number of specific priorities rather than press for everything at once.

Earlier in the meeting, Loretta Peterson, a state ombudsman from the California Office on Aging, told the group "This is the Day of the Seniors. They are breaking out of stereotypes, opening doors, expanding horizons—including job expectations and sex."

George Toll, chairman of the Long Beach Advisory Committee on Senior Citizens Affairs, Cora Cocks, chairman of the state Commission on Aging, Helen Wakefield and Esther Jackson of the Long Beach Senior Opportunities Services (SOS) were the other speakers.

Other panels Friday and Saturday dealt with affirmative action, gay rights, housing and zoning, Chicano concerns, black feminism, urban Indians, "redlining," inter-ethnic conflict, human resources, and employment.

People Talk

J.C. Anderson

"SPRING HAS come, the grass has riz—and I know where a 27-inch catfish is." He's in the frying pan of the anonymous Long Beach fisherwoman who caught him unawares at El Dorado Park and invited him to a no-host lunch.

Moonstruck schoolboys write spring on cement block wall, and Russell W. Shoup of Long Beach commits its magic to paper in a poetic letter to the editor. Kites sky dance to spring's music, and homemakers with dustcloths in their hands semaphor the season's arrival to husbands mooning over six-packs as baseball diamonds turn into Woolworth's rhinestones.

Spring is a time for rebirth—for nature and for my venerable Pinto, the troubles of which finally came to a stop with a new emergency brake. No longer does the little wagon cower in its garage, afraid to risk the freeways and highway patrol safety citations. The full moon has appeared, bringing with it the magical ministrations of Jack Wixom, owner of Pacific Ford, who passed the right word to his mechanics.

The Pinto I once swore at I now swear by. My regard for the restored little wagon is equal to the sum of all its parts—working parts, that is.

SPRING is a time to make amends to a Cub Scout wronged when I inadvertently omitted his name from a column I did about the pupils in Room 1 at Mark Twain School. So let's hear it for Scott Bushman, gentleman, scholar and one of teacher Gail Schack's brightest lights. Great Scott! How could I have been so remiss? I'm sorry, young Master Bushman. It won't happen again—Cub Scout honor on that.

Certainly I should be as kind to Scott as he was to me. For as he wrote in a letter to me a few days after my visit:

"Dear Mr. Anderson: Thank you for coming to school. It was nice. I learned a lot. I like the paper. I never knew it was that good."

And now that I have at last mentioned Scott Bushman's name, I hope he will think even better of the paper.

It's been a balmy week, spring feverish to the nines. It's been a week of playing hookey, of day dreaming on the sands beneath the bluffs at Cherry Avenue, a week of shooting basketballs by moonlight and grinning back at the nightime joggers in the park.

I could fix my driveway gate, but I'd rather dawdle this day over cups of tea and reread the letters sent me by the youngsters at Mark Twain. One in particular comes to mind. It was signed Kathleen Wilmshurst, and she noted.

"YOU ARE one of the few adults who can talk to children very well."

If that sentence were a rose, I'd press it in my memory book of spring. For if it is true that I can talk to children, then perhaps one can speak to tomorrow, can know the future and see its genesis in the eyes of the young

One of the letters from the children, a message from Shani Ostella, posed a puzzle, albeit unintentionally. Shani wrote:

"Now I read your articles almost every night. Last night I got halfway through it and I lost the paper."

What happened to the paper? Was it a victim of the winds, pressed into service as a clown's cap or a lining for the parakeet's cage? Will it be reincarnated as a string of paper dolls or a flour paste dolly for a Camp Fire cookout? One wonders. Shani, I await your answer.

In spring, a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of love. But there are other thoughts abroad, thoughts which give life to service. Let us consider this message from Ranger Art Toth at El Dorado Nature Center:

"Thanks to a lot of people caring, a total of $300 to date has been contributed by women's service clubs to purchase plants and trees for the nature trail for the handicapped at the El Dorado Nature Center.

"Altrusa Club got the ball rolling, and Pilot Club and the Soroptimist Club responded quickly. Phil Peterson (city parks) and Chief Ranger Hal Boley are selecting plant materials that are particularly aromatic or of an unusual texture so that they may be enjoyed by the blind."

THAT'S GOOD news for all of us—a sharing of spring through the senses of touch and smell. The eyes of God provide the sight for those who have none.

Go out to the nature trail for the handicapped, touch the nylon cords that lead the blind along the path. The handhold of spring wends the way from darkness to light as winter surrenders to budding trees and birds that sing their hearts out with the joy of a new start

Yes, spring is made for daydreams, wonder and thanks

What if Jerry Brown goes to Washington?

Bob Schmidt

View From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO—If "different" is the same as "good," then Jerry Brown is a good governor of California and perhaps could be a good president of the United States.

Of course, if that were the only quality required, Evel Knievel could be a good president, too.

Certainly other qualities are necessary. Certainly Jerry Brown has other qualities. Do the qualities Jerry Brown possesses at least approximate the qualities required of a president?

Jerry Brown says he wants to be President. He has asked that his qualities be examined. He is asking more than that. He is asking that people compare his attitudes and concerns with theirs. And if they are similar, he is saying, that is reason enough to entrust him with the presidency.

Voters are no longer going to respond, the governor thinks, to "candidates (who) hold out 52 or 21 programs and say 'because of these, elect me.'

"If you look at this country today, (people) are looking for vision.

"I'm offering people not years of expertise but the energy and the openness of someone who has come rather late to the process."

And so, he says, he will not "string out a laundry list or a set of boxes and packages of things that have been done. A lot has been done in the last year in this state, but that's not the point.

"It's a process, it's an energy, and it's a commitment to a particular style of government, and an approach, and that's all, and people can make their choice."

Two years ago, gubernatorial candidate Brown was saying pretty much what he is saying now. The right answers can't be found until the right questions are asked, he said, and the right questions are not being asked.

So what was being done wasn't working, and a New Spirit was needed in Sacramento.

The New Spirit was elected, and the questions being asked do indeed seem to be different, and the people looking for the answers do indeed appear to be different in background and style from their predecessors.

Whether what is being done is different, too, is not known yet.

Certainly few if any changes which might have been accomplished in state government's method of doing things, or even in its choices of things to do, have filtered down to the people.

Pretty pictures are now on the walls of some local Department of Motor Vehicles offices, but, to ask a Jerry Brown-type question, is that the way to a better world?

It is, apparently, the way to higher ratings in public opinion polls.

But somewhere along the road between Jerry Brown's downtown Sacramento apartment and the White House, the relative responsibilities of a governor and a president are going to have to be examined.

A governor is a Very Important Person, without doubt. His budget decisions, his appointments to key offices, his support or opposition to legislative proposals, his leadership generally can have significant impact on the lives of people in his state.

In the national or global or even cosmic scheme of things, however, the President of the United States is quite something more than a Very Important Person.

A president can ask that war be declared. He commands the military and can, as Richard Nixon said, make a decision which would end the lives of millions of people in a matter of minutes. He can influence the value of the dollar and the pound and the mark and the lira and, hence, the price of a loaf of bread or a cup of rice. He can make jobs happen.

What he causes to be done can impact on 200 million people, on three billion people, on the dust of the moon, on all of this generation, and on the next, and on the ones after that.

A president is to a governor, it might be suggested, as a governor is to a grammar school hall monitor.

So that while a governor is a Very Important Person, people in his state might feel they can tolerate a little strangeness in him, allow him a little experimentation, give him room to depart from what has been the traditional way of doing things.

California, perhaps, can afford to be a pilot project for development of a New Spirit. It can afford to stop and think things over, to allow problems to simmer and policies emerge, to re-examine its expectations. For awhile.

Can the country afford to do those things? Can the world?

Jerry Brown would probably ask, Can the country and the world afford not to?

The more immediate question is, Is Jerry Brown wise enough to ask the right questions and, more important perhaps, is he wise enough to recognize the right answers?

It will be a different kind of business, this 1976 Democratic presidential primary in California.

Ford uses the media

President Ford has been granting lots of interviews to newspaper and television reporters recently.

By coincidence, he decided to honor an old Chicago Tribune interview request just before the Illinois primary. The same sort of coincidence had brought reporters for Florida newspapers to the Oval Office for a chat with the President just before the Florida primary. On Thursday 32 North Carolina reporters journeyed to Washington for an interview. Their state's Republicans choose between Ford and Ronald Reagan on Tuesday.

But by Thursday's meeting, journalists were beginning to have second thoughts. Three of North Carolina's leading editors—in Raleigh, Charlotte and Greensboro—politely declined the White House invitation.

"These are not command performances," presidential press secretary Ron Nessen said in response to criticism that journalists were unwittingly being used in the President's primary campaigns.

"We're not out there beating the bushes, dragging people kicking and screaming to the White House," Nessen added. "They can always say no."

They can. But it is hard for a journalist to say no to an interview that might produce real news. It is especially hard when the journalist knows that at least some rival journalists are certain to accept the invitation to talk with the President.

The compromise position, and the best one under the circumstances, we suspect, is for a newspaper or television station to agree to the interview, to send a regular Washington correspondent, if it has one—and then to give the result the newspaper space or broadcast time that its news value warrants.

There are signs this is beginning to happen. That was the way the Raleigh, Charlotte and Greensboro newspapers handled it. The editors declined to be used by the President, but they sent reporters. Chicago television station WMAQ sent a crew to Washington and joined in the interview, but then broadcast less than a minute of the half-hour session. The Chicago Tribune ran its interview story on page 3. The Miami Herald ran its interview story on page 19.

The temptation to put a report of an "exclusive" presidential interview on the front page or the evening news will still be irresistible for some small papers and small television stations. The rest of the press, we suspect, will decide not to become that big a part of anybody's election campaign.

Cover-up mentality continues

Clark Mollenhoff

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Malicious and premeditated destruction of evidence of political crimes in the Action agency demonstrates that Watergate cover-up mentality still permeates the highest levels of government.

The theoretically nonpartisan Civil Service Commission sat on a report showing systematic application of political standards imposed on Action agency appointments, in violation of the law.

ONLY RECENTLY has the Justice Department, prodded by Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., and Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., initiated an investigation in the District of Columbia under U.S. Attorney Earl J. Silbert.

The mass of complaints from Action employes and Congress finally stimulated a Civil Service Commission investigation.

Although the commission, early in its investigation, "obtained testimony concerning a purge of files in the Office of Staff Placement and Training to remove evidence of political screening activities," Civil Service Commission Chairman Robert Hampton did not ask for a probe of these obvious crimes. He leisurely finished the investigation and wrote a report. Then the commission sat on that report for months until Moss and Hawkins obtained a copy and sent it to the Justice Department with an analysis of the possible criminal law violations.

THAT REPORT, recently released by Moss and Hawkins, establishes these points:

1. Illegal political screening of candidates for appointment to theoretically nonpolitical high level posts in the Action agency was taking place systematically from 1971 through 1974 with the knowledge of some top Action officials.

2. Personnel records and documents related to those questionable hiring practices were destroyed with the approval of some people in top management.

It took Atty. Gen. Edward Levi's Justice Department two months after first seeing the report to conclude that "possible criminal violation may be indicated."

Assistant Atty. Gen. Richard L. Thornburg, who heads the criminal division, notified Moss and Hawkins on March 11 that the investigation was being referred to the United States attorney's office "for appropriate disposition."

THE ACTION agency was created in 1971 by President Nixon in a merger of the domestic VISTA program, the Peace Corps and a number of other voluntary agencies, and there were reports from the outset that the new agency was being highly politicized.

The Civil Service investigation established that personnel officials at Action were keeping track of political preference through "code forms" in which "P-I" indicated the highest political priority of "must be hired" and "P-V" was the lowest indicating "political unreliability" or a person "recommended by a political opponent of the President."

The Civil Service report cited evidence that one employe had taken incriminating records from the office, placed them in his car trunk for several months, and had finally dumped them in a trash can at a department store.

IF THERE IS more delay in the follow-through on these political crimes because they may involve persons still in government jobs, the statute of limitations might bar prosecution. Any unusual delays will be as much a part of the cover-up as the efforts of Action agency officials to destroy relevant records.

The politicizing of the Action agency demonstrates again the need for some type of nonpartisan special prosecutor to move objectively and aggressively when evidence points to crimes by political appointees where there are obvious conflicts of interest for any politically appointed attorney general.

Why Ford, Carter lead

James Reston

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The success of Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter in the presidential race so far cannot be explained adequately by computerized analysis of voting districts or by the prestige of the presidency or the tireless energy and administrative skill of Carter.

There is apparently another factor in their progress, which is harder to define and impossible to prove. They are quite different in many ways, but they are both touching some longing in the American mind and spirit for something we have lost.

MAYBE THE voters in the early primary elections are trying to tell us something. They have not responded to the appealing personality or theatrical conservative ideology of Ronald Reagan. Or to the angry domestic complaints of George Wallace or the anti-Soviet, anti-Kissinger tirades of Senator Jackson, or to the liberal or populist appeals of Mo Udall and Fred Harris.

The voters in the primaries have been very cautious and moderate. As Eric Hoffer says in his new book, In Our Time, they don't quite know what is happening to them. They are "separated" from the past, "a different people in a different country," but somehow he thinks they still believe in believing and yearn for the values of the past.

It is easy and even popular to sneer at these philosophic imponderables, and try to calculate the outcome of the election in terms of power blocs, big-city bosses like Mayor Daley in Chicago, Big Labor leaders like George Meany, and Big Business lobbies like the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, but Carter is leading in the Democratic race, not because he has the Democratic establishment with him, but because it is against him, and because he believes he can appeal to a different and more powerful constituency among the increasingly disenchanted and independent voters of the country.

THE CHANCES are that he won't make it all the way to the top, and will have to settle for the vice presidency. He starts from scratch and Ford starts from an accidental presidency, which is quite a difference, but even so, Carter might just be closer to the longings of the people for new, younger leaders and ideas than anybody else, and take the Democratic Party over, against its will, as Jack Kennedy, with different values and few ideals, did in 1960.

Carter is not talking about "confrontation" with our adversaries, like Jackson, or about ideology like Reagan on the Right and Fred Harris on the Left, but about cooperation, reconciliation and even about "love." He is very romantic about all this, and it infuriates his opponents, but it still touches some longing among the American people.

"We are not enemies but friends," Lincoln said in his First Inaugural Address. "We must not be enemies. Though passion may have strained, it must not break our bonds of affection. . . ." Lincoln did not argue the particular issues that divided the American people, but avoided these divisions and appealed to their common ideals.

IN A TOTALLY different and more complicated situation, Ford and Carter are succeeding by making this same cooperative appeal.

The tragedy of the Kennedy, Johnson, and Nixon administrations has been the decline of decency. All three of them may have been more intelligent and more cunning than Ford and Carter, but if the voters are saying anything in the primaries this year, they are apparently asking for simpler, more honest and more moderate men and policies.

IT SEEMS A strange comparison, but DeGaulle held France together in its critical post-war years not by telling people what they wanted to hear, but by setting a moral example. During that crisis in the life of a nation, when you asked why the women of France always supported DeGaulle on the great issues put to a vote of the people, they gave a plain and human answer. Particularly the women.

"We don't quite know whether he is right or wrong, but we trust him," they said. "He is our regret—the symbol of values we regret we have lost. So we support him. We would like to believe in his values, even if we don't live by them."

I think there is something of this same yearning in the success of Ford and Carter in our own elections. Whatever else they are, they are the opposite of the fancy articulate ways of Kennedy, the cunning techniques of Johnson, and the illegal, unspeakable outrages of Nixon.

The American voters seem to be responding to these plain and undramatic campaigns of Ford and Carter, and this could in the end be important, or even decisive. The other politicians, the universities and the press may not like it, but maybe the majority of the American people do.

Alternate transit plan urged

While choking on smog and tightening our financial belts, is now the time to buy Baxter Ward a new set of trains to play with? His toy San Diego line hasn't been wound up to go yet!

The people of Los Angeles County deserve a choice—not rail or nothing. A freeway conversion can be built for much less.

Mr. Ward's rail scheme does nothing to remove traffic or smog caused by too many cars. It merely duplicates existing freeways as another passenger carrier. Rail will do nothing to cause the average motorist to stop using the car to commute to work. With everyone still using the automobile, who'll ride your train, Mr. Ward?

Freeways can be converted to a very satisfactory rapid transit system for less than one-third the price of rails.

I would build rapid transit transfer stations over the existing freeways at two-mile intervals to connect freeway flyers to local feeder lines. Transfer stations would be four-level structures: one level for freeway flyers, one for a passenger lobby with shops and ticket offices, one for the local feeder vehicles, and the original level, which would be the freeway itself. Large aircraft-carrier-type elevators would be used to move large numbers of passengers from one level to another.

Using the high-speed lane for 120-passenger electric trolley double-decker super coaches will make it possible to carry up to 72,000 passengers per hour over one lane of any freeway in each direction. Rapid Transit District estimates given out at the last transit election called for up to 40,000 per hour by rail.

These super coaches would stop on the top level of the transfer station, taking advantage of gravity to help them stop going up a ramp to that level. This will store energy for the acceleration on the down ramp while getting under way again. Local area feeders would have shorter ramps from local streets, and would stop on the level next to that occupied by the freeway. The passenger exchange lobby would be next to the upper or flyer level.

Preliminary plans are available from me. I ask no fees for the studies I have made, just consideration.

A one per cent sales tax can build the freeway conversion as a pay-as-you-go project. It is my belief this can be done in about 10 years. As each section is completed, it can be serviced with existing coaches until the super coaches can be built to take their place.

As soon as the majority of the transfer stations are built, or possibly alternate stations at four-mile intervals, my plan calls for a parking tax to be levied on all employe and other full-shift parking spaces in all business and commercial areas. Mr. Ward plans a sales tax forever to support his loser. I feel that all who use our freeways and streets should pay for that privilege, and no one else. This includes both the driver of the private car and the user of public transportation.

It is my estimate the whole plan would cost under $3 billion if carried to completion. With all stations in but rolling stock kept to the probable starting minimum, the cost should not exceed $2 billion.

With this system, real freeways will once again be freeways in the real sense of the word. Transportation will be good for those who do not choose or cannot afford to drive their own vehicles. I ask the taxpayers to consider this plan very carefully before they jump into—or should I say in front of?—the RTD railroad train.

Arthur Rubinstein

With the vast degree of editorial focus being centered upon the strife-ridden, often cataclysmic international hot spots, along with the multiple national and sttate political epicenters of interest, it was heartening to see the beautiful thoughts presented in the I, P-T's "89 young years" editorial March 17. There is room indeed for such ruminations concerning the legendary Arthur Rubinstein.

"I know that the legion of admirers of this towering figure of classical romanticism share my sadness at learning that this virtuoso of the keyboard may be forced through failing eyesight to terminate an unparalleled career that has brought him international acclaim for seven decades of superlative performances for a public that has never ceased to marvel at his art.

"Over the years, I have ever been enthralled with maestro Rubinstein's literally ethereal communicative sense in bringing forth the essence of each composer—from Chopin, his sublime specialty, to Bach, Brahms, Debussy, etc. The keyboard mastery of this genius continually created a tonal tapestry of magic that was ever fresh, ever new and always exciting. Music lovers the world over can relish the times they have heard Rubinstein, for an artist like this passes our way but once. May the joy he's provided others be his the rest of his young years."

Hayden's struggle

It is painfully evident that some of your readers make false and cursory accusations that are intended solely to buttress their own biases. I am specifically referring to one Klaton Chapman (letter, March 19) who labeled Tom Hayden as a Marxist-Leninist. If Mr. Chapman would take the time to read the Tom Hayden literature, he would find that Mr. Hayden is not against our free enterprise system.

Conversely, Mr. Hayden is a firm believer in democracy but feels there is ample room for improvement. Any criticisms he has of our society occur within a patriotic framework. Tom Hayden feels the voters should truly have a voice in their govenment—and this is what he is denigrated for.

Tom Hayden is a modern-day Don Quixote. Unlike Cervantes' Quixote, however, Mr. Hayden is not fighting windmills but is struggling against narrow and closed-minded people. In my opinion it is time to give someone else a chance to work on the formidable problems we face in this state. Tom Hayden offers the most refreshing breath of air we have felt in this state in a long, long while.

Realtors praised

It has been impossible for me to write earlier, so at this time I wish to express my thanks to the members of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors who worked so diligently to defeat the real property transfer tax the city council adopted late last year.

I was delighted that the Realtors stood firm and did not bow to the unethical way the council attempted to deprive the taxpayers of their constitutional right to petition against any issue which is unjust, unfair or discriminatory. In my opinion, there was an attempt by the city council to brainwash all the residents of Long Beach into believing they were going to have either a transfer tax or a sewer tax, with no other alternative. Their action made the job of obtaining the signatures doubly difficult, but the Realtors came through with more than enough signatures in spite of their little scheme.

The city council partially redeemed themselves by dropping both the transfer tax and the sewer tax.

A state decision

I disagree with your editorial of March 16 regarding Proposition 15. I believe the polls are the place for Californians to have a say about nuclear power in this state.

It is not unreasonable to ask the power companies to demonstrate to the Legislature that safety systems are adequate, that highly radioactive wastes can be safely stored, that full financial coverage would be provided in the event of a major accident, that feasible evacuation plans are available. There is no other industry with the potential for such far-reaching devastating effects should a mishap occur.

Our most valuable nonpolluting short-term energy source is conservation. Not "going back to the caves" but using the energy we already produce more efficiently and less wastefully. In the longer range, solar and geothermal energy look to me to be more promising sources than trying to reprocess radioactive wastes commercially—which is not being done at present, either, and which thousands of people find morally indefensible anyway—or getting into the breeder reactor with an even greater potential for disaster.

How Californians decide to get—and conserve—their energy is up to Californians, not the federal government. I support Proposition 15 because it asks our State Legislature to take a good hard look at the nuclear industry. Why are proponents of nuclear power afraid of a good hard look?

Try gambling

When I proposed about two months ago that the city of Long Beach designate a portion of the land around the Queen Mary, about the size of the Hollywood race track including the parking lot and stable grounds, for gambling, the answer I received was that gambling was not permitted in California.

When I walked out of the old Arcade railroad station 58 years ago, I found that Los Angeles had but two places that one could go to spend his weekends. They were the Long Beach Pike and the Venice Pier. Horse racing was not permitted except at fairgrounds, and dog racing was not permitted, either.

Not long after that San Francisco had two tracks: the Tanforan and the Bay Meadows. Then in 1934 came Santa Anita. Soon after that we had five tracks.

If gambling is permitted at the races, why not in a designated part of Long Beach, as it is in Arcadia?

I am now 91, and I do not gamble. But the Queen is not enough attraction to pull Long Beach out of the red.

Purse snatching

Somehow I do not feel any compassion for the victims of purse snatchers who lose great sums, or a sizable amount of money to them.

Many banks have free checking account service, plus the fact that any Social Security check or paycheck can be mailed to that person's account, to be drawn upon at any time.

I never have more than $3 or $4 in my purse and have never been refused a check-cashing privilege. Naturally I have proper identification, which is easy to obtain.

Why can't normal, intelligent people understand this and stop the daylight money grabbers?

Tiny-screen nightmares

NEW YORK — Nightmares by a roaring television screen:

I am wandering in the desolate wilds of the American stomach. It is located at the southern extremity of the American esophagus, and it would be harder to imagine a more forlorn place. Stomach acid sloshes about at all hours. The entire landscape is obscured by impenetrable vapors, which I instantly recognize as the notorious "stomach gas."

FROM FAR above I hear the esophagus shouting to the stomach. "Potato chip with cheese dip coming down!" it cries. The stomach groans furiously. In an instant there is a thunderous roar overhead. Potato chip and cheese dip shoot through the gas like meteors from blackest space and plunge into the acid.

Then, without warning, a drenching torrent pours down upon me. The stomach snarls in rage at the esophagus. "Why didn't you warn me this bum was about to drink half a martini?" it cries. "I'll fix him."

In a murderous act of treachery, the stomach produces a dense mass of stomach gas and forces it back up the esophagus. I am caught in the updraft and am forced up, up, up, until I am wedged right under the breastbone. There, trapped, I hear the esophagus calling again. "Brace yourself down there! A whole anchovy coming down!"

LOOKING UP, I see a gigantic salted fish plummeting upon me. I struggle to race back down the esophagus, but my feet are stuck in cheese dip, and the anchovy is gaining rapidly. . . .

I am jolted briefly into blessed wakefulness, then doze again. I have retained a baby sitter named Mrs. Marsh for the evening. She has brought a huge suitcase containing toothpaste, toothbrushes, sticks of chalk, glasses filled with dyed water and a Thompson submachine gun, which she is pointing at me with one hand while dipping chalk into dyed water with the other.

She is determined not to let me go out to the movies until she has showed me how deeply her toothpaste will penetrate the enamel of my children's teeth. She is demonstrating with the chalk sticks. Sure enough, the dye is turning the chalk bright hues all the way through.

"You wouldn't do that to my children's teeth?" I am pleading. She cackles insanely, "Hah!" I cry. "Your toothpaste may penetrate chalk, but chalk isn't tooth enamel!" Mrs. Marsh fires a burst of machine-gun fire over my head to remind me to keep my hands up.

"My toothpaste," she gloats, "will penetrate anything. Look!" And she rubs it on the television set, which turns bright purple.

IS THERE nothing I can do to stop her mad plot? One thing, she tells me. If I agree to stay home and sit with her until midnight while she demonstrates her toothpaste's penetrating power on the Queen Anne chairs. . . .

I open my eyes and close them again, then reopen them wide because, standing right there before me, is my blue pinstripe suit. It is in an ugly mood. "I've got something to tell you, stupid," says the suit.

"What's holding you up?" I ask. "Do you have the invisible man inside?"

"I wish I did," says the suit. "He's probably got enough sense to realize a man needs twice as much protection."

"Where do you talk from?" I ask the suit. "Your voice seems to be coming from your right pocket, but I don't see the flap moving."

THE SUIT SAYS it has not come there to talk about suit anatomy. "Well, flip off then," I say. "I don't hold with wool that talks."

The suit makes a terrifying grimace with its left lapel and calls for reinforcements. In an instant, I am surrounded by angry clothing — sweaters, underpants, socks — all prancing around the room and jabbering furiously. I swing a right hook at a pair of socks, and miss, and in the next moment the clothes have all leaped on me and are about to break my arm, when I awake.

Breathing heavily, I lumber off to bed and put out the light. There is a stranger in the room. I demand to know what he is doing there. He says he is looking for the washing machine so he can surprise me next time I do the sheets by showing me a soap that gets white things twice as white. I lead him to the cellar. He thanks me. On the stairs I am mugged and robbed of all my vacation cash. When I get back to bed Karl Malden tells me always to carry traveler's checks.

Politicians get payoffs

WASHINGTON — At least $8 million in illegal corporate payoffs have disappeared into the pockets of Washington politicians during the past decade.

While the spotlight has focused on corporate bribery overseas, we have investigated payoffs to politicians here at home. We have determined that political bigwigs collected the $8 million from four corporations alone: Ashland Oil, Gulf Oil, Northrop Aircraft and Phillips Petroleum.

THE DIMENSIONS of the scandal indicate it may develop into a corporate Watergate.

Our reporters, Terry Repak and Marc Smolonsky, dug through Securities and Exchange Commission documents in an attempt to trace the money. They contacted 15 congressmen who were identified in the documents as recipients of illegal payments.

Jack Anderson with
Les Whitten

Our investigation even led to the White House itself. President Ford allegedly received an illegal $1,000 contribution from Phillips when he was the House Republican leader. A White House spokesman told us there was no way to verify the payment now. But he conceded the money was never returned.

When Richard Nixon occupied the White House, his campaign aides were caught accepting an illegal $100,000 contribution from Ashland in 1972. The money was returned with a big show of piety. We have now discovered that the Nixon campaign accepted an earlier $100,000 from the same oil company in 1968. But this money, since it was never publicized, wasn't given back.

OF THE 15 members of Congress who are identified in SEC documents as receiving illegal money from corporate lobbyists, only six have returned the loot. They are Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., Carl Curtis, R-Neb., Henry Jackson, D-Wash., James McClure, R-Ida., J. B. Johnston, D-La., and Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark.

They paid back a total of $15,600 in illegal gifts. But Mills did not return another $50,000 Ashland contribution, strictly illegal, which was given to him to distribute to Democratic colleagues.

Sen. James Eastland, D-Miss., admitted receiving a $5,000 payment from Ashland but said he had no intention of returning it. House Democratic leader Tip O'Neill, D-Mass., acknowledged he got $200 from Phillips. He also felt no obligation to return it. Both men explained that they didn't realize the contributions had come from corporate funds.

Most of the 15 legislators, whose names appear on the SEC lists of illegal recipients, refused to acknowledge that they got any illegal money from any corporation. Many have received letters from Gulf demanding restitution. They won't give back money, they said, that they don't recall receiving.

ONE GULF letter, for example, went to Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn. Through a spokesman, he denied receiving an illegal payment but acknowledged the gifts may have gone to his campaign committees. Our information indicates that Humphrey collected $30,500, all told, from Gulf and Ashland.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., according to the documents, received $11,000 from Phillips and Gulf. But a spokesman insisted that Hatfield never got any illegal payments.

Another $1,000 illegal donation from Phillips allegedly went to Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C. A spokesman said there's no record of the illegal payment but acknowledged it might have come in from a corporate bagman. The money, in any event, won't be returned.

There are reports that Speaker Carl Albert collected $3,000 from Phillips. A spokesman said the speaker vaguely remembers receiving contributions from Phillips but can't recall the exact amount. The money won't be returned.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., according to the records, accepted $3,000 from Ashland. An aide said the money won't be paid back. "It's between Ashland Oil and the man who made the contribution," he said.

WE FOUND records at the SEC of illegal payments to members of Congress of $1.4 million from Gulf, $800,000 from Ashland and $500,000 from Phillips. We couldn't find how another $4 million from Gulf and $1.5 million from Northrop were distributed.

Only four corporations accounted for these staggering political payoffs. The SEC is investigating many other companies that were also slipping money to politicians. But no one is investigating the politicians who accepted the payments.

LAST LAUGH: In 1972, we told how Thai government leaders were helping to hustle heroin to U.S. markets. The Thais accused us of "slanderous accusations," and the State Department, more delicately, backed them up.

Now we have found out who was slandering whom from some newly declassified State Department cables. They show our reports were so accurate that U.S. Ambassador to Thailand Leonard Unger thought they had been leaked from his classified cables to the State Department.

Unger told the State Depasrtment in a "confidential" cable that our stories "appear to be unmistakably attributable to executive branch documents or conversations with executive branch personnel privy to this and other missions reporting on events and conversations in Thailand.

"I realize," he went on, that this sould come as no surprise to me since apparently Jack Anderson has access to whatever he wants in Washington today."

IF NATURE is so smart, how come she dumps the snow on cities rather than on the wheat fields that can use it?

Seal Beach: a town of many hamlets

At bottom, the one issue that, more than any other, fuels the fires of political discontent in Seal Beach is growth. Should the city, with the few remaining open spaces it has left, continue to use the state redevelopment law as a tool for continued growth and improvement, or should it leave well enough alone?

With a 35-foot building height limit in effect, and the large annexations having already been made, the current fight over the redevelopment of several smaller parcels of land would seem to be a tempest in a teapot.

YET, SEAL Beach, true to character—it had a dandy of a fight over gambling in the postwar years—is in another political uproar.

On the one piece of projected redevelopment property that could be considered sizable—a 79-acre tract of undeveloped private land just north of the Hill—a suit has been filed to block its inclusion in the redevelopment agency's jurisdiction.

Meanwhile, antidevelopment forces are hotly contesting other parts of the agency's plans, including the rezoning of a 7-acre parcel on which the city intends to build a new and more efficient police station.

Old Towners in particular want to keep the station where it is—where it's most needed, they assert.

WHILE ITS transfer to a more modern and centrally located building might serve the interests of efficiency, as city officials claim, it would also represent a concession to the city's present, as opposed to its past. And perhaps unconsciously, that's what many Old Towners are fighting: the symbolism as well as the fact of the proposed move.

Thus far, the city has found the redevelopment law an extraordinarily handy tool, using it with an ingenuity that some say is close to unconstitutional. The forthcoming court showdown doubtless will test that claim.

With all the controversy surrounding it, even its die-hard critics are willing to concede that redevelopment hasn't been all bad or all good. As one of its supporters, Mayor Tom McKnew, points out, the redevelopment agency has enabled the city to do away with an antiquated waste treatment facility, help the downtown area with a new sewer system, improve the city's drainage, put in new water lines and buy the old Pacific Electric right of way, which is now the gently rolling green belt running through Old Town.

"Unfortunately," says McKnew, "many are uninformed as to what the agency has done and can do. It's a bridge between the private and public sector."

BY STIMULATING the private development of so-called blighted areas, and thereby raising the value of the developed land, the agency has been able to use the additional tax proceeds for public improvements (such as the green belt).

Realistically, there's little prospect of any sizable growth in the city's population, even if the 79 acres and the city's old equipment yard (which is due to be vacated) are used for new homes.

Seal Beach has pretty well reached its population limit, having banned high-rise structures and committed itself in policy to low-density housing.

In 1965, before the new policy was established, then City Manager John Williams predicted that Seal Beach's population would almost triple within 20 years. It was 20,000 at the time, and Williams said it would reach 58,600 by 1985.

AT THE same time, he forecast the development of high-rise apartment towers on the Seal Beach side of the San Gabriel River.

Since then, the Oakwood Garden Apartments have gone up (to a level of three stories), and the city's population has risen by 8,000, which is far off Williams' predicted pace.

In the last six years, during which 2,000 dwelling units were added to the city's housing stock, the population grew by only 200, according to Mayor McKnew.

McKnew gives two reasons for the slow growth rate: many older people who moved into Leisure World in the past decade or so have lost their partners through death, and, elsewhere in the city, families have gotten smaller.

THE CITY'S modest growth notwithstanding, many Old Towners are saying—in effect—that they've had enough. Rueful over past annexations, which were more than they could swallow, they're now ready to draw the line on any further development, however small or large it may be.

The key to the city's charm, they feel, is its small-town character. And to continue to develop an increment here and an increment there is to further destroy the essence of what they're trying to preserve.

What's more, they still remember their own close brush with redevelopment a few years ago, when the council was considering a number of plans for improving and refurbishing Main Street.

To carry out the improvements, it was proposed that Main Street be placed under the redevelopment agency's jurisdiction, but the notion struck terror in the hearts of Old Town merchants. Fearful of possible large-scale changes, they led a public outcry against the scheme and convinced the council that if there was to be any improvement at all, it would have to be less than massive and done with city money, not redevelopment agency funds.

SINCE then, many of the storeowners have spruced up their places to the point where even the minor improvements that are planned might seem excessive to some. (The plan calls for new street lamps, some repavement, the introduction of uniform trash receptacles and some benches.)

Whether the improvements are made or not, one claim can be made for Main Street: it is unquestionably one of the most engaging shopping districts in Southern California. Its natural, small-town ambience, the diversity of its shops (including its liquor stores, taverns, offices and restaurants), the friendliness of its merchants, its proximity to the ocean—all conspire to make it a thoroughly charming yet unaffected place. (All this in the space of three blocks.) Which explains why Old Towners feel so damn jealous about it.

Nor can you blame them, given the jewel they have.

POLICE BEAT

Three held in cocaine bust

Three men were arrested and cocaine with an estimated street-sale value of about $40,000 was seized in a Pico Rivera drug-selling probe, sheriff's investigators said Saturday.

A sheriff's department spokesman said an undercover narcotics officer had arranged to buy the cocaine, and met the men Friday night near Rosemead Boulevard and Telegraph Road in Pico Rivera.

The purchase reportedly was made and the suspects taken into custody at the scene, the spokesman said.

Booked on suspicion of sale of a controlled substance were Francisco Mendoza, 35, of 7242 Pico Vista Road, Pico Rivera; Orazo Fernandez, 28, an alien; and Romualdo Torres, 35, of Mountain View.

He orders cash at Colonel's

A bandit armed with a pistol which he kept under his shirt took more than $70 from a Kentucky Fried Chicken store at 1601 W. Willow St. after ordering a 17-year-old clerk to put the money into a bag, Long Beach police said Saturday.

The clerk told officers the bandit pulled up his shirt and showed the gun stuck under his belt, then told her, "See this? You know what it is. I don't want to use it. Put the money in the bag."

Off-sale robbery nets $100

Two bandits, one of them armed with a pistol, took more than $100 from the cash register at Joe's Liquor Store, 3806 Santa Fe Ave., after ordering two employes to go to a back room at 1:15 a.m. Saturday, Long Beach police said.

The clerk told police one of the bandits bought beer and wine, then handed him a $20 bill.

As he was making change he heard the man say, "Let's have the rest of it," and looked up to see the pistol.

Two customers approached the counter during the holdup and the gunman turned to them and said, "Would you gentlemen be so kind as to go back to the rear where you came from?"

The customers complied, and the bandits escaped in a car they had left with its engine on in front of the store.

Girl with boa returns home

A 14-year-old Bellflower girl who ran away from home with her pet boa constrictor returned home late Friday, Lakewood sheriff's deputies said.

The girl, Julie Marie Janssen, called her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Janssen, on Thursday to say she was in Long Beach, had bought a rat and fed it to her snake, and would return home soon.

Julie, a niece of actor David Janssen, left home after an argument with her 17-year-old brother.

Blind hit-run victim mourned at services

"He loved cars," said La Belle's "home teacher" and fellow church member Ralph Brown. "At times, we would be walking across a parking lot together when a nearby car would start. Ray could tell from the sound of the engine what make of car it was, often even pinning down the year."

Brown eulogized La Belle as "a person who had a natural talent to meet people. He was open and honest, always quick to make a friend.

"Ray also had an excellent memory. . .he would remember special things about people he had met long ago," Brown added.

"Ray and his wife were champions of the cause of educating sighted people to the capabilities of the blind," Brown said quietly. "He opened up a whole new world to me, as a sighted person."

Bishop Veater Barton characterized La Belle, who had belonged to the Fourth Ward for 10 months, as "a boy who knew no boundaries. . .an energetic person who was a friend to everyone he came into contact with."

La Belle, a native of Long Beach who was blinded when given too much oxygen after a premature birth, graduated from Wilson High School in 1970.

He and Marsha, blind since birth as a result of the same medical procedure, were married last May 17 during a Mormon service in Los Angeles.

(Ray has a twin brother, Richard, also blind since birth, and Marsha has a twin brother, Mark, who is partially sighted, according to friends.)

La Belle's mother said they had known each other since childhood, having met at various functions for blind children.

"They were incredibly happy together," said Ed Meier of Los Alamitos, national president of the Guide Dog Boosters of America.

"They had so many plans," he added. "Marsha took a new job about four weeks ago as a medical transcriber at a Long Beach hospital, and Ray was to have begun a new job Monday as a field representative for the Fuller Brush Company. He had gone through the training and bought two new suits. He was all ready to go."

Meier and other members of the Guide Dog Boosters said Marsha credited her golden retriever, Tad, with saving her life. He said she and Tad graduated from the training school of Guide Dogs for the Blind in San Rafael about two years ago.

"They do very extensive training there in traffic situations," said Diane Walker, president of the Los Angeles Guide Dog Boosters chapter.

She said the dogs are trained to recognize danger situations and avoid them by quickening their pace, stopping altogether or pulling back. There are cases of some guide dogs being killed while successfully protecting their masters, added Ms. Walker.

"Tad pulled Marsha back out of the car's way," she said, "but he apparently couldn't pull Ray back too."

She said the dogs are trained to guide only one person but "feel a responsibility" to other members of the family.

Meier said La Belle, also a Guide Dog Booster, was "between dogs" at the time of the accident.

"Ray had a dog up until a couple of months ago," Meier said, "but they just didn't work out together. He was to have gone back to school (Guide Dogs of the Desert in Palm Springs) to get another dog next month."

Marsha's dog, Tad, was not seriously injured in the accident, but his future is in doubt, friends said. The dog has been taken back to San Rafael for interim training, but officials there won't know for some time if he has been psychologically damaged or if his training was broken by the accident.

"We've been told that they're holding Tad up there until Marsha is well enough to see if they can be reunited," said Ms. Walker.

"We hope with all our hearts that the two will be walking together again soon," Meier added.

La Belle's mother, however, said doctors are not yet sure, but some of Marsha's injuries could result in permanent disabilities.

A fund for Marsha has been set up at Union Federal Savings and Loan Association, 4500 Atlantic Ave.

Cella, 3 others named in suit alleging embezzlement

Orange County political contributor Dr. Louis J. Cella Jr. and three of his associates, already under indictment by the Orange County Grand Jury and a federal grand jury, now face a lawsuit filed by two hospitals from which they allegedly embezzled money.

The suits, filed in Santa Ana Superior Court, ask $2 million in actual damages and $10 million in punitive and exemplary damages.

Named in the suits and the indictments were Cella, Stephen R. Evans, George Louis Ollendorf and Theodore Schiffman.

They are scheduled for a pretrial hearing Monday before Judge Jerrold S. Oliver in Santa Ana Superior Court.

The indictments charged that the $2 million was used by the defendants for political and personal purposes.

Cella and his associates allegedly skimmed the money from the two hospitals when Cella controlled both institutions. He is a major stockholder in both but does not hold majority control.

Also named in the civil suit but not indicted is Richard O'Neill, Southern California Democratic chairman.

Cella and O'Neill were the largest individual contributors to 1974 California political campaigns. Cella is a registered Republican.

The civil suits were filed on behalf of Mission Community Hospital in Mission Viejo and Mercy General Hospital in Santa Ana.

Artist's rendering points up spacious and open-styled motif of Smoke Tree townhomes community in Irvine

Family environment a feature of Irvine's Smoke Tree homes

The new Smoke Tree community in Irvine offers a selection of large townhome plans ideal for families, according to the builder, Warmington Development.

The maintenance-free townhomes lifestyle also provides an excellent family environment, with more leisure time to enjoy the many recreational activities available in this Orange County residential area, Warmington noted.

Among Smoke Tree's spacious and open-styled family townhome designs is the Plan 4, offering 1,578 square feet of living space in two separate levels devoted to the privacy and activity of the family lifestyle.

THE UPPER LEVEL is a secluded sleeping wing, available in two versions to suit family needs. Plan 4-A has four bedrooms and two full baths, including a comfortable master suite.

Plan 4-B features three bedrooms and two baths and the oversized master suite has twin walk-in closets and stretches the home's full width to provide a large adult privacy area.

The lower level of Plan 4 offers luxurious space for hospitality and a variety of family activities. A large living room is enhanced by a fireplace "conversation corner" and a huge family room/kitchen makes indoor/outdoor entertaining easy.

Deluxe built-in kitchen appliances and a first-floor powder room add to the convenience of this home. Plan 4 and other Smoke Tree models feature a private fenced patio, enclosed double garage and wood-trimmed exterior with shake roof.

There are five Smoke Tree floor Plans in one-and two-story designs with two, three or four bedrooms. Prices range from $42,990 to $53,500 with conventional financing at 7½ per cent interest (7¾ per cent annual percentage rate).

Landscaped greenbelts surround the townhomes and an oversized swimming pool, hydro-therapy pool and luxurious clubhouse are provided for Smoke Tree residents.

The private clubhouse is a refurbished $110,000 home retained on its original site by Warmington. The massive, sprawling residence (now being used as a sales facility) has one wall of solid marble, an oversized fireplace and spacious kitchen for residents' entertaining.

THE IRVINE RESIDENTIAL AREA is within minutes of beaches and marinas of Newport-Balboa, the University of California, Irvine, and Newport Center.

Smoke Tree is convenient to schools, shopping, recreation, Orange County Airport and the Irvine Industrial complex, with easy access to the Santa Ana and San Diego Freeways.

Furnished model homes are open daily from 10 a.m. at 15115 Jeffrey Road in Irvine. Smoke Tree may be reached by taking the Santa Ana Freeway south to the Jeffrey Road exit, then left on Jeffrey one-quarter mile to the development.

Typical living area in phase two home in La Mirada Landmark

'House-of-the-Week' specials remain

La Mirada Landmark rebates to end

La Mirada Landmark sales counselor Frank Randak reports the $1,000 rebate/allowance program now in effect will end next Sunday.

The savings program he said, has been successful in helping at least 30 families purchase La Mirada Landmark homes.

Randak advised homeseekers to visit quickly for a choice selection of units adding that some "House-of-the-Week" specials, including draperies, are still available.

WITH PRICES still held at 1974 levels, substantial savings are possible at La Mirada Landmark, Ed Olson, Professional Community Management, sales director at the homesite, advises.

Prices have not been increased since the community opened phase two, Randak added.

The $1000 customizing allowance program will allow purchasers in the second phase to receive an allowance of from $750 to $1,000.

The allowance may be used to upgrade carpeting, add draperies, wardrobe mirrors, or may be applied toward the closing cost requirement.

A moving allowance is also possible, the salesmen added. Details on this program are available at the information center.

The homes feature two or three bedrooms and two baths, plus large living and separate dining rooms, patios or balconies and enclosed garages.

Also included are central air conditioning, shag carpeting, vinyl kitchen flooring, individual utility rooms within each unit with an installed washer-dryer, deluxe-equipped kitchens with range, oven, disposal, dishwasher and pantries.

Walk-in closets are available in two of the four plans. The privacy and security of residents is enhanced by a 24-hour-a-day security guard at the main entrance.

IN ADDITION to a close-in, energy-saving location, the all-adult community emphasizes its recreation facilities, Olson added.

The $1.5 million recreation complex, with approximately 14,000 square feet under roof, includes a clubhouse with kitchen, lounge, game rooms, and huge billiards room. A separate building features a wood shop, ceramic and art room, lapidary, sewing room, photo lab, multi-purpose room and gym.

Outdoor attractions include two regulation-size, night-lighted tennis courts, putting green, large swimming pool, hot water swirlpool bath, gas barbecues, gas fire ring, gazebo and spacious main patio area.

The entry is off Santa Gertrudes Street between Imperial Highway and Rosecrans Avenue. It may be reached from the Santa Ana Freeway by taking the Imperial Highway exit east to Santa Gertrudes and turning south.

The sales office and model complex are open daily from 10 a.m. For information phone (714) 521-2440 or (213) 947-2505.

Seal Beach Chateau offers trips to East

As part of the Bicentennial celebration, the Chateau in Seal Beach is including a vacation for two to any, or all of the eastern colonial states.

A limited time offer will include scheduled round-trip air transportation to the Bicentennial city of the buyer's choice, plus hotel accommodations for seven days.

Details are available at the sales center for the Chateau adult condominium.

FIFTY-SEVEN units, representing a sales volume of $3.2 million, have been sold, and 15 units remain at the development, which is adjacent to the Rossmoor shopping center. Furnished models are open daily from 10 a.m. at 12400 Montecito Road, between St. Cloud Drive and Bradbury Street.

The Chateau has two newly decorated model homes open for viewing. Immediate occupancy is available.

The models were decorated by professional co-ordinator Fanny Bollen, who is available to assist homeseekers who desire to customize their units.

The newly decorated models, featuring upgraded decorator carpeting, wall covering, draperies, hard-surface flooring, and mirror treatments, are also available for purchase. The models are decorated in the new vignette fashion, currently the popular decorating vogue nationally.

Prices for the two-bedroom, two-bath units range from $47,950 to $49,950. Visitors are invited to ask about a VA — no down program being considered at the Chateau.

"Lowest interest rates, excellent location, a current 10 per cent down plan, and quality product are cited by most viewers as their reasons for buying," said co-developer Bernie Solomon of National Mills Associates.

A SECURITY system of lobby television scanners has attracted particular attention to the unique security building features at the Chateau.

"We have installed a building security "lobbyvision" system, Solomon said. "It provides a combination of closed circuit television of both lobby areas and special monitor screens that are tied into a built-in intercom system," he added. Parking is safely underground, accessible through electrically controlled security gates.

The condominium concept of carefree, leisure living is made possible through the homeowners association, whereby exterior maintenance landscaping, and care of the recreational facilities is handled for residents by a professional firm. No permanent residents under 16 may reside at the Chateau.

Recreational amenities include a heated swimming pool, sauna, swirlpool bath, a fully equipped gymnasium and outdoor barbecues.

INTERIOR appointments include a selection of nylon carpeting, central air conditioning, and luminous all-electric kitchens that feature range, oven, disposal, dishwasher, cast iron terraced sinks and copper plumbing.

The development is located less than five minutes from the Old Ranch Golf and Tennis Club. Houses of worship, health care facilities and major shopping are within minutes of the project. Public transportation is close by.

To reach the Chateau from the San Diego Freeway, take the Los Alamitos Boulevard (Seal Beach Boulevard), exit north to St. Cloud Drive. Then left to the furnished models at St. Cloud and Montecito Road. For information phone (213) 430-8832. Evenings, (213) 596-7119.

La Linda homes visited by hundreds

Sales aides report more than 300 visitors toured the La Linda model area over the past weekend in Orange.

Opened just a few weeks, 15 of the 24 individual patio-style homes have been sold. The units are situated in a rural setting, yet are within walking distance of the Bullock-Fashion Square shopping and financial complex.

Almost all the one- and two-story homes feature a different exterior style that give the overall community a custom look, developer Richard Hall says.

Measuring 1,550 to approximately 2,100 square feet, the units are available in four floor-plan arrangements. They contain three to five bedrooms, and two or three baths.

ONE PLAN at La Linda receiving impressive comments from visitors, according to sales aides, is the big two-story, 18 plan. The four, or more bedroom plan features a recreation room, fourth bedroom and full bath on the upper level.

The lower floor contains three bedrooms, two full baths, formal dining room, spacious living room with fireplace, kitchen with informal dining area, and a generous utility room off the oversized two-car garage.

A walk-in closet and wet bar are also receiving favorable attention in this big plan.

Prices range from $56,950 to $71,950 with conventional financing. Occupancy is planned by month's end.

The $1.5 million dollar, six-acre, planned unit development is being built by Richard Hall, Orange County developer of quality new home communities.

ARCHITECT is Roy Kiter and Associates, Newport Beach.

The community is accessible via a single entrance off Palmyra Street, just west of Main Street. The homes are clustered architecturally in just two oversized cul-de-sac streets.

A decorative block wall along the Palmyra Street frontage will add privacy to the development. Perimeter wood fencing will enclose the site.

Hall says this La Linda community is the most complete family home he has ever built.

Features included in the purchase price are carpeting, draperies, central air conditioning, fireplaces, mirrored wardrobe doors, decorator wallpaper, rear- and side-yard fencing, front-yard landscaping with sprinklers, deluxe equipped kitchens with trash compactors and nutone food centers, sunken bath tubs and smoke detector systems.

This package of features will save the buyer thousands of dollars, and eliminate after move-in costs the builder added.

ALTHOUGH individual, detached homes, the patio-home concept will apply. All common properties are maintained by a professional firm through a homeowners association.

A leisure lifestyle will be provided residents in their own, huge 25 by 50 foot swimming pool, a recreation building, shuffleboard, court and two huge professionally maintained park areas.

Sales counselors add that the location is convenient to all of Orange County. Just five minutes away are the Santa Ana Freeway, Orange Freeway, Garden Grove Freeway and the Newport Freeway.

From the Santa Ana Freeway the project may be visited by exiting north on Main Street just beyond Bullock to Palmyra and west two blocks to the site.

For information phone 997-4765 (714).

Builder receives Assembly honor

Orange County builder William J. "Bill" Krueger, president of Showcase Homes, has received a certificate of commendation from the California State Assembly for his contributions to the homebuilding industry and to the community.

The citation followed a resolution to the Assembly by Paul B. Carpenter of the 71st Assembly District.

In the resolution, Carpenter said Krueger "in his capacity as master builder, has been at the forefront of the tremendous population expansion in Orange County, offering more than 3,800 various types of quality construction dwellings in order to fill the resident's needs since 1960."

He noted that Krueger served his nation during World War II in the United States Navy, retiring as a lieutenant commander, and is a former director of the Home Builders Association.

"Working with his son and daughter on his current project, Showcase Homes in Westminster, he continues to strive for 'customer satisfaction.'" (Steve Krueger, the builder's son, is project manager for the Westminster development and his daughter, Sally Hayden, is associated with the decorator).

The resolution continued: "Mr. Krueger is to be highly commended for his valuable contributions to the home building industry."

Mariner Village started

Site preparation began last week on 30 acres in San Juan Capistrano, breaking ground for Westport's Mariner Village, at Del Obispo and Blue Fin Drive, 1½ miles from the Dana Point Marina and the ocean.

Construction for the $12 million development is scheduled in phases, with 67 two and three-bedroom homes planned for Phase One. When completed, the new residential project will contain 199 homes.

Designed as a planned-unit development, the community will feature five floor plans with two and three bedrooms and separate dens, to contain from 1,270 to 1,650 square feet of interior space.

"PRICE FOR the ocean-close homes are anticipated to range from $55,000 to $65,000 in the private, maintenance-free community. An Olympic-size swimming pool, jacuzzi, two tennis courts, volleyball court and a clubhouse with gym and billiard room are planned for residents," said Merrill Pugmire, marketing director for Westport Home Builders, Inc.

Extensive greenbelts at Westport's Mariner Village also will contain a security storage yard for recreation vehicles as well as gardens and parklands.

The firm has pioneered residential developments in the Capistrano Valley through the planning and construction of Capistrano Villas, now sold out, and Las Brisas Garden Homes and Mission Village condominiums, currently being marketed in the area.

The communities have added 1,200 residential units.

Sales for Westport's Mariner Village have begun, with completion of Phase One predicted for early spring.

Second St. E. has two left

In two months, 22 of the 24 homes at Second Street East, an adult-oriented condominium at 2538 E. Second St. have been sold.

The Wilcraft Development Inc. project is a four-story full security building, two blocks from the ocean. The two remaining units priced at $54,900 feature two bedrooms, two baths, private patios, formal dining rooms, walk-in closets, all electric kitchens, gas-log fireplaces and two-car garages.

The Tennessean sells home a day

An exclusive North Tustin Avenue address in one of Santa Ana's best residential areas has contributed to impressive sales at The Tennessean, according to Warmington Development, builder of the new adult townhome community.

Sales are averaging one home per day and the development of park garden townhomes is now two-thirds sold, the Warmington spokesman said.

Outstanding value and the spaciousness of the contemporary residences are also cited as prime success factors at The Tennessean. Prices of the air conditioned, one and two-story townhomes begin at $29,990.

FOUR distinctive Tennessean models offer from 1,252 to 1,428 square feet of living area and feature one bedroom and den, two bedrooms or two bedrooms and den, with 1½ or 2 lavish baths.

Each townhome includes a long list of price-included quality features such as one or two fireplaces, carpeting, enclosed garage, fenced patio and deluxe kitchen complete with range, self-cleaning oven, dishwasher and disposal.

An abundance of glass adds to indoor/outdoor living enjoyment. There are generous linen and storage closets and master suites feature double wardrobes of walk-in closet. One home features a spiral staircase.

Luxuriously landscaped grounds surround the townhomes and the maintenance-free community includes a huge swimming pool, therapy whirlpool, sauna and clubhouse for residents.

THE PRIME location is within walking distance of shopping and community services including a medical center, banks, churches, parks and the Santa Ana and Newport Freeways for commuting to metropolitan and employment centers.

Three newly furnished Tennessean model homes are open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at 1404 North Tustin Ave. The development may be reached by taking the Newport Freeway to the 17th Street exit in Santa Ana, then west on 17th to Tustin Avenue. Turn south on Tustin two blocks to the entrance of the adult townhome community.

Country Club Gardens homes

floor plan is a huge master suite with private den and lavish dressing room/bath, secluded on the top level and overlooking the living room below.

Two secondary bedrooms and bath, plus sundeck are located on the third level and a lower-level activity area features a formal living room with fireplace and cathedral ceiling, dining room and kitchen with pantry and breakfast nook.

The first level of the "Brookfield" includes an oversized two-car garage with inside access and laundry area and the home also features an atrium-balcony and garden patio, ceramic tiling, plush wall-to-wall carpeting and deluxe Tappan appliances.

Another split-level plan with three bedrooms and two baths is also available among the limited number of homes remaining at Country Club Gardens where sales have passed the 75 per cent mark, according to the builder. Prices begin at $52,950.

Each home has a trellised entry, private garden patio and rustic contemporary exterior styling designed in keeping with the area's fine homes.

Immediate occupancy and excellent conventional financing are available now at the community of 72 townhomes. The sales office and model homes are open daily from 10 a.m. at 3655 Country Club Drive and Cedar Avenue.

The development may be reached by taking the San Diego Freeway to the Long Beach Boulevard exit, then north on Long Beach Boulevard to 36th Street and west on 36th (which becomes Country Club Drive) for one-quarter mile to Cedar Avenue and the new community.

FLOOR PLAN II OF SINGLE-STORY DEERFIELD PARK HOME

Homes 60 pct. gone in Deerfield Park

Designed for the compact family or professional couple is the single-story Plan II of Deerfield Park Homes, located in The Irvine Co. award-winning community of Deerfield in Irvine.

Plan II homes provide 1,850 square feet with strong formal entertainment zones and totally separate family activity areas within the arrangement of the three-bedroom, two-bath residences.

Priced from $63,495, Deerfield Park Homes are already more than 60 per cent sold out, according to Roy Humphreys, project manager for Century Community Developers.

RESPONDING to market surveys, new buyers expressed a desire for spacious family rooms which were separated from the formal living room. In Plan II, the family room is located off the front entry hall with a wood-burning fireplace highlighting the spacious dimensions of the area.

From the entry hall, the natural traffic pattern for guests is to move to the formal sunken living room visible from the front door. The long vista includes the rear patio accessible through sliding glass doors.

Adjacent to the living room is the raised dining room galleria with an elegant crystal chandelier appropriate to the formal entertainment zone. Wide corner windows in the dining room add a garden view to the formal dimensions.

Other Deerfield Park homes are available offering from 1,655 to 2,557 square feet with three or four bedrooms in single-story and tri-level plans.

Furnished models displaying Plan II and five different floor plans available at Deerfield Park Homes are located at 17 Deerspring in Irvine. A sales information center, directed by Coats and Wallace Realty, is open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

To see the homes, exit the San Diego Freeway at Culver Drive and travel north to the new Deerfield Park Homes near Irvine Center Drive and Culver Drive. From the Santa Ana Freeway, exit at Culver and drive south to the parkside homes in Irvine.

Woman-built Malibu Estates homes ready

Construction of three houses in Malibu Country Estates has been completed under the supervision of German-born Lisa Smith for Continental Developers of California, a subsidiary of Southern California Savings and Loan Association.

Her European training is apparent in her construction styling, with detailing of stained glasses, plantons, picture tiles and crystal fixtures. The daughter of a German industrialist, she emigrated in 1955.

Malibu Country Estates, overlooking the ocean adjacent to Pepperdine University, has a limited supply of lots. The homes are in excess of 3,000 square feet with living room, dining room, four bedrooms, four baths with two or three fireplaces and numerous built-ins.

Mrs. Smith has plans for five additional homes.

She said she was particularly complimented when two of her prospective buyers for new homes were workmen on the job. One of the subcontractors told her she was a "grinder," but he respected her insistence on quality work.

Add a middle-man and you'll multiply misunderstanding

By DON CAMPBELL

A deal is a deal is a deal. Unfortunately, though, it takes two people to enter into a deal of any kind — in real estate, or in any other field — and the possibilities of misunderstanding are enormous.

Add a middle-man to this arrangement, in this case a real estate agent, and you multiply the likelihood of misunderstanding several times over.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

Early last fall we received a notice to vacate an apartment we had been living in for 15 years, and, for a couple of senior citizens, it was quite a jolt. I went to a nearby town to see if there might be something there to purchase. I contacted a real estate agent. He suggested a place to look at, and so, a few days later, I returned with my wife.

We were shown the property and liked it, so we put earnest money down and signed a purchase contract that was to run for five days. The seller wanted cash but the broker said he would see what he could do. A few days later we filled out a credit form and an application for a loan. The broker pointed out that the purchase contract was for only five days. I suggested inserting the figure "two" before the figure "five" so it would read 25 days instead of five. This he agreed to do and made the suggested change, which I initialed at his request.

A week went by with no action, and we had to start work finding another apartment. Finally, I managed to contact the broker's wife who told me that the property had been sold. She asked what I wanted to do about the return of the earnest money.

My wife was terribly upset by the news as she had wanted the place so badly. What if we had decided, during those 25 days, that we had seen something we liked better — do you believe they would have returned the earnest money to us? I am sure we would have forefeited the money. It would have been a breach of contract — or is it to be followed by just one of the parties and not the other? — C. H., Huntington Park, Calif.

ANSWER: Something sure got fouled up here! In the first place, I find nothing in your letter to suggest that the seller ever accepted your ORIGINAL offer (the five-day deal). And I certainly find no evidence that he indicated his approval of your moving the time limit from five days to 25 days — initials or no initials.

What baffles me is why the real estate agent was so non-communicative with you. If the seller simply, and flatly, turned down your offer (which seems likely in view of his desire for cash) in the first place, why didn't the broker tell you this? It sounds to me like the deal was dead before you (admittedly, now, rather arbitrarily) hiked the duration of the contact another 20 days. But, why didn't the agent tell you THAT?

Yes, you're quite right. If you had found something that you liked better and had reneged on the deal (if it had been valid), you would have lost your earnest money, all right.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

I would like to know what is involved in buying a home and assuming the mortgage. We've been told that this is the easiest way to do it, but we don't know the details. — W. D. N., Allentown, Pa.

ANSWER: It's not all that complicated and, in nine out of 10 cases, the real estate brokers involved can handle the whole thing for you. The paper work and the cost of doing it this way are a fraction of what is involved in assuming a new mortgage.

Let's say the seller has his house on the market for $60,000 and still has a mortgage of $45,000 on it — in other words, he has an equity of $15,000 in the house. You assume his mortgage (as the name implies) simply by taking over where he is dropping it, and paying him for his equity — $15,000.

What stops most people from going this route is the fact that the longer a family has occupied its home, the more the value of it has depreciated and the bigger its equity has become. And so, between the two, a lot of assumable mortgages have simply got to the point where they require far more cash-out-of-pocket for the owner's equity than the average home buyer can swing.

But, if it's possible, it's still the easier and cheaper way to take on a mortgage.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

I own a 16-unit apartment complex that I have managed since my husband's death a couple of years ago. Fortunately, this is in a nice area where apartments are at something of a premium, so I have very little trouble keeping it filled.

What bothers me, however, and I'm not at all sure you can give me any guidance here, is that I had a very proper upbringing — which my husband and I tried to instill in our own children — and I have trouble accepting some tenants simply because I don't consider them "right."

This has led to some awkward situations and now a friend tells me that I might get into trouble with the law by simply refusing to rent to some people because of these feelings I have. Is this possible? — Mrs. P. K., Long Beach, Calif.

ANSWER: In an extreme situation, it's possible. If the point might be made, and proved, for instance, that you are refusing tenancy simply on the grounds of race, religion or national origin, it could get a little sticky.

I somehow sense, though, that this isn't the case with you and, in many respects, it makes it tougher for you. Times have changed — for better or for worse — and it's difficult to have standards that keep getting in the way of what should be cold, business judgments. I'm afraid that you are going to have to work hard at the tolerance bit.

(Campbell welcomes your letters and comments, but can answer only questions of general interest. Write him in care of the I.P-T.)

Building boom in Anaheim

During the first 60 days of 1976, new construction in Anaheim has reached an unprecedented valuation of $25.8 million, Daniel Van Dorpe, chief building inspector, has reported.

The amount is three times greater than for the same period in 1975, when the total for the entire year was $99.5 million, the second highest annual total in the city's history. In 1973, $106.5 million was recorded for new building construction.

The February activity amounted to $17,762,002 on 375 permits for new buildings, signs, pools and mobile homes. In all, 1,361 permits were issued by the building division and a total of $155,729 was collected in fees.

This included 327 permits for plumbing, 230 for electrical and 330 for mechanical inspections and installations, Van Dorpe added.

Lob Hill Almost sold out

Lob Hill had its grand opening last weekend and five of the seven townhouses were sold, Coast Equities, sales agency for the State-Wide Developers project, announced.

Located at 100 Belmont Ave. in Belmont Heights, the development was designed around a giant avocado tree and features panoramic ocean views from each residence, with 2½-car garages.

Only a two-bedroom unit, selling for $81,900, and a three-bedroom, priced at $98,900, are still availabe. All units have two baths, spacious dining rooms with wet bars and living rooms with exposed beam ceilings.

LANDSCAPING, PATIO AT MONARCH SUMMIT II

Monarch Summit 'logic' cited

When people decide to buy a new home it is usually done for one of two basic reasons — it's logical or it's emotional — noted Frank Babcock, sales manager for Monarch Summit II in Laguna Niguel.

A decrease in the size of the family, taking on a new job or retirement are among the most logical reasons given for buying a new home, Babcock said. Seeking a better neighborhood, a new lifestyle or an improved social status top the emotional reasons for buying, he added.

"Whatever the reason," Babcock continued, "unless a new house answers all of a potential buyer's needs and requirements that buyer will continue looking elsewhere."

Babcock pointed out that "location, price, quality and the design of a home are overriding factors in the final decision to purchase. So the competition in today's market in these areas is keen. Styles, options and features are also extremely varied."

"Many prospective homeowners report that buying a home can be a traumatic experience," he added. "However, it needn't be. When a particular home development is a winner in all categories buyers quickly sense it and react positively."

"Monarch Summit II, a $23.7 million all-adult townhome neighborhood that looks more like single-family homes, is such a development," according to Babcock.

There are three distinctive floor plans, designed for comfortable adult living, and priced from $59,900 to $79,000. Homes have two bedrooms and two baths. And a den is included in the two larger models.

Each home has a brick fireplace with gas log lighter, cable TV outlets, prewired telephone outlets, brand name builtins including two continuous-cleaning General Electric ovens, dishwasher and disposal; old-fashioned kitchen pantries and ceramic tile kitchens, baths and showers.

Winding throughout the development are broad streets and a lush greenbelt. Mature landscaping is growing everywhere, and each home has a shaded, private rear patio. Enclosed entryways are part of each home, plus a two-car enclosed garage.

To reach the Monarch Summit II models at 22956 Solera Drive, take the San Diego Freeway to Crown Valley Parkway in Laguna Niguel, and turn west to Pacific Island Drive. Turn north up the hill and follow the signs with sea gull.

Privacy stressed at Captain's Hill

Privacy, location, and plans that appeal to the adult lifestyle are finding favor with buyers at Holstein Industries' Captain's Hill planned community in San Juan Capistrano.

Located on a hillside that overlooks the San Juan Capistrano valley, the development stresses private entry, boat and trailer storage, pool and open space all in a motif of a Mediterranean seacoast village.

"The floor plans, in a choice of two, three and three-and-a-den designs, are all adult-oriented with spacious master suites, open living rooms, luxury baths, built-in kitchens, privacy walls, iron gates and other luxury touches in the Spanish theme," relates Dan DeMille, Holstein vice president.

Priced from $60,000, some of the cluster homes are available for near immediate occupancy. A wide range of financing is also available, DeMille pointed out.

To visit the Captain's Hill hillside development, take the Pacific Coast Highway to Dana Point and turn at the Marina Entry (del Obispo). Or take the San Diego Freeway to the Ortega Highway off-ramp. Drive through San Juan Capistrano on Del Obispo and follow the curving street to the Captain's Hill entry.

Hunting for unsafe buildings

By JAMES M. LEAVY
Staff Writer

"How would you like to have this crummy job?"

Edward M. O'Connor, director of the Long Beach Building and Safety Department, just threw that question out, sort of an exchange for the half dozen or so questions he was asked about the collapse of the swimming pool ceiling at the YWCA.

It's a crummy job because nobody likes to have city officials poking around their buildings, finding things wrong with them, writing nasty letters, perhaps even condemning them.

It's a crummy job because the man who has it presides over an area described as "seismically active". That means there is a strong possibility the ground under the buildings the department inspects will someday begin to rumble, shake, make ungainly lateral movements and bring some of those buildings down.

It's a crummy job because many of the buildings in the city do not meet the earthquake standards defined in the building code.

It's even crummier than the tax assessor's job, O'Connor says, looking a bit vulnerable under the high ceiling in his first-floor office at City Hall.

DESPITE ALL THIS, O'Connor seems to like his crummy job. He's been at it 30 years and for the last 26 he's been department director. When he retires in a year or so he plans to keep right on working with his favorite problem . . . making buildings in Long Beach safe against the next earthquake.

Since 1971, the heart of his department's inspection and enforcement program has been an ordinance called "Subdivision 80 - Earthquake Hazard Regulations for Rehabilitation of Existing Structures Within the City."

It is a model law, perhaps the only one of its kind, and it puts Long Beach ahead of most other cities in the state. It is aimed at strengthening or eliminating buildings which might not withstand the force of a quake.

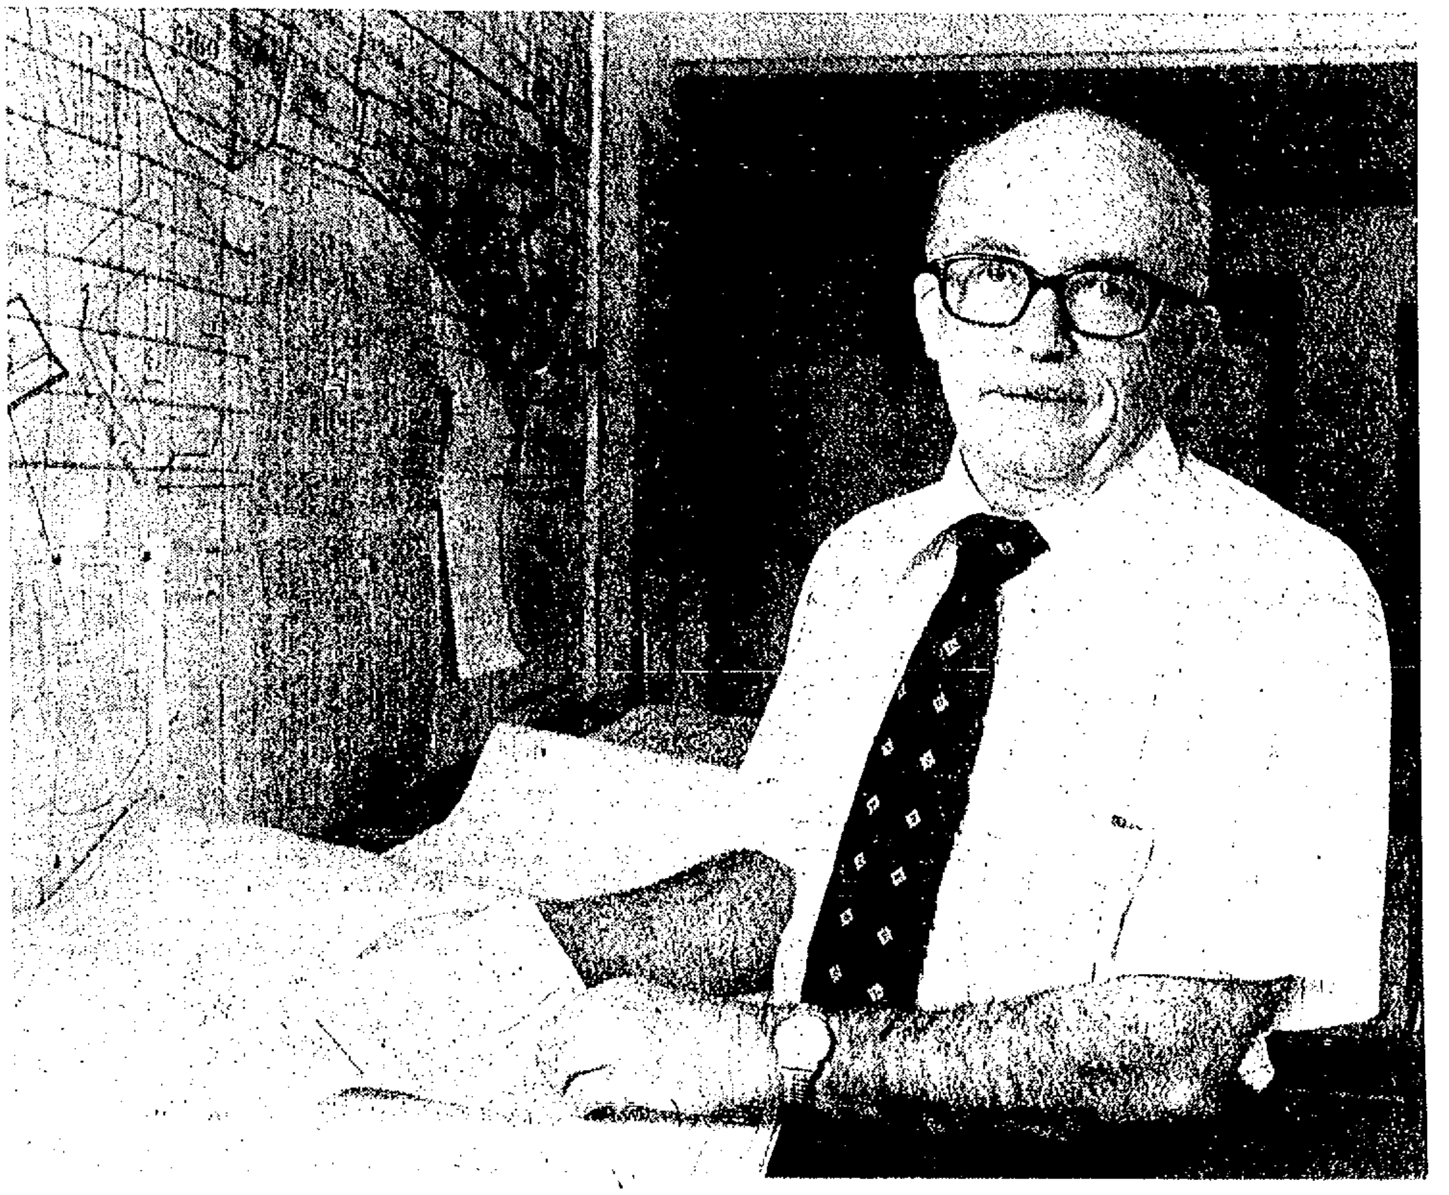
Armed with this and the general building code ordinance, the 58 members of the department have changed the face of the city.

Since 1952 O'Connor's office has issued 3,176 condemnation notices which resulted in the demolition of 2,582 buildings and the reconstruction of 393.

It is a record of performance which has produced a kind of knee-jerk defensiveness in O'Connor. "A lot of people are under the impression that when the building official is appointed and serves at the pleasure of the city manager, you can't get anything done."

"You can't get anything done," he explains, "if the environment is hostile. It's hostile but not to the degree that it has burned me up."

THE ENVIRONMENT he is talking about includes his boss, the city manager; the city attorney who provides the legal clout for enforcing the codes; the Board of Examiners, Appeals and Condemnation to which building owners appeal their cases; and the city council which is the court of last resort for those who think they have been treated unfairly by the department.



HAUNTED BY THE possibility that an earthquake will strike Long Beach again, Edward M. O'Conner is working to eliminate the city's substandard buildings. He believes it is possible to build a quake-proof structure. Staff photo by KENT HENDERSON

O'Connor is apparently happy with his environment. "The only way you know if the board will support you is to crank them up. I've got a good board."

The city council has reversed only one department action and O'Connor has no complaint about the city manager or the city attorney. "I am satisfied with the ability of this department to enforce the ordinances," he says.

He is not, however, satisfied with the laws governing building inspection in Long Beach. There is no periodic inspection of buildings in the city, no systematic plan. And as a result it is possible for a building to escape inspection indefinitely.

The department acts on referrals from the city manager's office, the health department, the fire department or on complaints from individuals.

O'CONNOR THINKS top priority should be given to a law which would require an inspection each time a building is sold. The law might require that an escrow remain open until a report by the building department is available.

He says the department could charge a fee for each inspection and the program would pay for itself.

A buyer may request such an inspection at the present time, but O'Connor says the department obtains the seller's approval before it is done.

If such an ordinance were passed, a buyer would purchase a substandard building with the full knowledge of its condition and know he would have to fix it up.

A second O'Connor proposal would bring all buildings in the city under the scrutiny of his inspectors. He advocates a sweeping law which would develop a pattern of periodic inspections by providing for certificates of occupancy which would expire regularly (every five years, for example) and be renewed only after the building was inspected.

Laws like these, O'Connor says, would "do quite a bit to clean up the city."

UNFORTUNATELY, they would have done little to avert the tragedy which occurred at the Long Beach YWCA Feb. 27 when the ceiling over the swimming pool collapsed, killing one person and injuring several others.

The building had been inspected and a letter of excessive hazard sent to Y officials in early November. It gave the organization the option of vacating and demolishing the building or submitting a plan of action for its rehabilitation. A month later a plan of action was presented to the city. Before the city could rule on the plan the collapse occurred and last week Y authorities decided to abandon the 50-year-old building.

Rusting and corrosion of steel cable supports caused the ceiling to collapse, O'Connor said. He

Co-ops: an old concept spells new freedom

By LINDA ZINK
Staff Writer

The speaker summed up her feelings simply:

"I couldn't have survived without it."

Despite the regulations, the chart-keeping, the hours on the telephone, "it's worth it."

She'd recommend it to any mother with pre-school children. After weighing the pros and cons — and overcoming her initial opposition — she decided "it just made sense."

The speaker was Diane Yankelevitz, a six-year veteran of the Belmont Heights Babysitting Service, and the topic was child care cooperatives. Mrs. Yankelevitz is obviously a proponent. As a woman who's been there, she believes in the inalienable right of housewives to have time for themselves. At the same time, she's convinced that most women can't have that time without some kind of outside help — help like a babysitting co-op can offer.

"It works like this," said Ms. Yakelevitz, describing a co-op program. "If I leave my children with someone for five hours, I know I'm going to have to take care of someone else's children for five hours. It's an exchange of time, not money.

"I can get away by myself for half a day without worrying about either my children's well-being or the expense of a sitter. I know my children are in good hands and happy. And it's not costing me a cent."

THE IDEA OF babysitting co-ops isn't new. Throughout history, women have banded together to care for their youngsters. Usually the organization was casual and the participants were relatives. But the idea was basically the same.

Recently, co-ops such as the Belmont Heights Babysitting Service have been gaining in popularity. Part of the explanation is the high cost of everything, including child care. Another factor has been the new-found cooperation among women stemming from the feminist movement.

Co-ops such as the one in Belmont Heights tend to be more formal than the traditional family-centered child care system. Like others of its kind, the Belmont Heights Babysitting Service has set rules and specific obligations. But the essential element is still trust — and the willingness of members to go along with the group.

"You'll find that the hardest thing is finding the right people," Ms. Yankelevitz told the dozen women who had gathered at the Women's Community Resources Center for her presentation on how to start a child care co-op. "You don't want anyone in the group you wouldn't trust your children with.

"If you find later that someone isn't working out, don't hesitate to tell the person that he or she can no longer participate. It isn't worth it if you have to worry about who your children are with."

FOUNDERS OF THE Belmont Heights Babysitting Service announced their intentions to form a babysitting cooperative on bulletin boards at laundromats and supermarkets, in church notices "and to total strangers just walking by." They talked to friends, neighbors, relatives..."anyone who might know of anyone who might be interested in a co-op in the Belmont Heights area."

The founders also set geographical boundaries — Ocean Boulevard on the south, Fourth Street on the north, Cherry Avenue on the west and Bayshore Drive on the east.

"It's best to keep the boundaries small — about one square mile. You don't want to be running all over town just to drop your kids off so you can go to the supermarket.

"We have made exceptions — but only small ones," Ms. Yankelevitz continued. "The co-op doesn't work well if it's inconvenient to get to some members' homes."

Ms. Yankelevitz suggested setting a date for a planning session "about two months after you start publicizing the event." Fifteen members is enough to get the co-op started. She believes 30 is about the maximum any co-op can handle.

"You'll have to work out some rules...like whether people with swimming pools can participate, if you want to let children play in the front yard, what to do if a child is sick, what to do about disciplining a child, how many children a sitter can stay with at one time

"Rules vary from co-op to co-op. We used another group's rules as a model for our own, but we changed them somewhat to reflect our particular needs and concerns."

GROUPS WITH which Ms. Yankelevitz is familiar have a chairperson and a secretary. Chairperson of the Belmont Heights service, who is elected for six months, interviews prospective members and serves as an arbitrator in disputes. Each person serves as secretary for a month.

"Being secretary is the big job," Ms. Yankelevich explained. "You have to find the sitters and keep track of all the hours.

"It's a headache" Ms. Yankelevitz added. "But it's worth it. And, after all, if you're in a group with 25 people, you only have to do it every two years."

In six years only two members have been asked to leave the Belmont Heights Babysitting Service, Ms. Yankelevitz said. And there have been few controversies, even over disciplining children.

"Most of our members are pretty conscientious. If someone says she'll

ACTOR Marlon Brando and secretary Alice Marchak — her book tells ALL about the "real" Brando.

Glad you asked that!

Q: I'm curious. Does Marlon Brando have any unfulfilled ambition? — Eleanor D., Scranton, Pa.

A: Yes. "To pose for a Playboy centerfold wearing Mary Poppins shoes and holding an umbrella," says his Girl Friday, Saturday, Sunday, etc. — Alice Marchak.

On tour to publicize her book, "The Super Sees," Alice (who's worked for the temperamental actor for almost 20 years), came up with some choice conversation-making memos about Brando. He didn't even ask to read the manuscript before it was published, she tells us. And since she's still on the job, apparently he had no objection to anything she wrote.

Among other titillating trivia, she reveals that he wears ear plugs when he's making a film, to avoid noise and help concentration. Also that he refreshes his memory of a script by lettering key phrases of dialogue around the set to cue him into the scene. "Once in a love scene," she recalls, "he wrote words on his leading lady's forehead while the camera angles made it appear he was gazing into her eyes."

Alice also writes about the practical jokes he pulls when on location and elsewhere. Such as the time the headlines reported he was thrown off a plane he boarded in Los Angeles. Sporting long, sun-bleached hair and a full beard he "humorously" asked a stewardess: "Are you sure this is the plane to Havana?" After the flight took off without him the captain was informed: "That was not a skyjacker! That was Marlon Brando!"

THE LATE comedian Buster Keaton — alcohol his nemesis despite long life.

TV'S Jimmie Walker — his life not always "Good Times."

hy gardner

One of his favorite pastimes is to call people and disguise his voice. "If he wanted to," his faithful and favorite paid-fan told us, "he'd make a brilliant mimic. Though no threat to Rich Little."

She relates the inside story of how that attractive actress named Sacheen Littlefeather was asked to deliver a speech of refusal at the Academy Awards. Alice had to type the statement a few hours before it was delivered and Roger (the Saint) Moore lugged home the rejected Oscar.

Alice bristled like her boss when we asked how come he was an "Indian giver" — generously gifting the Indians with a piece of acreage not fully paid for. "The media certainly made hay with that incident," she said saucily. "But how come they never printed anything when Marlon made good his gift and paid the several hundred thousand dollars needed for a clear title to all the land?"

Q: Didn't Jimmie Walker of "Good Times" have some bad times in a reform school? — Mrs. Lou Brown, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

A: No. Mr. Dyn-O-Mite dropped out of Manhattan's DeWitt Clinton High School to work as a delivery boy for a supermarket. He palled around with an East Bronx bunch of guys, but while they got into trouble, he kept in the clear. He recalled some of his playmates: "Poppo, a fantastic character; he wound up in jail for armed robbery. Then there were the Jackson Brothers. They could have been the black Marx Brothers. But Billy Jackson went to jail for assault with intent to kill."

Writing his own material, which included many racial jokes, Jimmie played many bistros such as The Bitter End, Improvisation, Champagne Gallery and the Apollo, a Harlem honky-tonk where Nipsey Russell matriculated into stardom. He also played the college circuit for eating money. Then he met producer Norman Lear and helped write TV history.

Q: Was famous funnyman Buster Keaton really an alcoholic? — B.R.M., Lansing, Mich.

A: Unhappily, yes. Though he lived to be 71, his addiction to drinking apparently shortened his career. One of his last comedy films was, ironically, titled "What, No Beer?"

ACTRESS Elizabeth Taylor — after five husbands, she offers definition of love!

Q: With her many soap-opera kind of marriages, I wonder if Elizabeth Taylor ever expressed her definition of love? — Gusti H., San Jose, Ca.

A: "I don't know how to express it," the recently separated Mrs. Richard Burton once said. "If you feel something so deeply and personally it's like advertising. You just can't capsulize love — you can't put it into a category. There's mother love, child love, man and woman love. It must encompass everything as well as things you're proud of."

SINGER-dancer Charo — Mrs. Xaviar Cugat still Mrs.

Q: A couple of questions about Charo. Where did she come from before she became Mrs. Xaviar Cugat? And if they're still married how come they no longer work together? And when you see her regularly on TV's "Hollywood Squares" does she get the answers before she's asked the questions? — Mrs. L. Denture, Columbus, Ohio.

A: "Ohhh, ohhh, no," Charo chortles. "Sometimes they don't even brief me on the kind of questions I'll be asked. 'Don't think too much, just talk,' the producer tells me . . . and my — what you call it — batting record is pretty good."

Charo, who's got a mind as sharp as a scalpel, learned to play classical guitar in a convent home in Spain. She hasn't performed with Cugie since he was felled by a severe stroke several years ago. But they remain merrily married. While his wife makes personal appearances on TV and in nightclubs or theaters, Cugie relaxes elsewhere. For example, when we relayed your questions, Charo was performing in Miami while her showman-husband was enjoying a month's vacation in Tokyo.

SINGER John Denver — overenthusiastic on honeymoon.

Q: John Denver broke up Merv Griffin relating what happened to him on his honeymoon. Can you repeat the story? — Ms. Sally Balough, Oakland, Ca.

A: Yes. "In our enthusiasm the first night," he said, "I cracked one of Annie's ribs!"

Audrey Hepburn — a rarity among stars

She came and went, breezing softly through New York like the petal from a cabbage rose, carried aloft on a moonray. And for a short time, in her presence, the city went mad, touched by her magic.

Audrey Hepburn is still the kind of star marquees light up for.

She flew in a snowstorm from her country house in Switzerland, first to Hollywood to pay tribute to William Wyler, the director who made her a household name in her first big picture, "Roman Holiday," then to New York to open "Robin and Marian," her latest picture after an eight-year absence from the screen.

"It's not a comeback," she blushed shyly. "I had no idea I would be away so long. It's just that I remarried, had a baby and found a new life. Those things take time, and you just have to decide what's important in life."

At the premiere, the photographers blinded her. Somebody stuck a fountain pen in her eye. And eager autograph hounds spilled ink all over her clothes. "It's not so funny when the clothes are by Givenchy," she grinned.

BUT AUDREY HEPBURN is that rarity among stars — unpretentious, unspoiled, realistic and wise, with her priorities in the right place. She's rare as a blue giraffe.

On the morning after the premiere, she met the press for breakfast, answered a thousand boring questions between muffins, and when it was over, she met me in a private suite at the St. Regis, breathless and exhausted, but still smiling in Technicolor.

She is more beautiful at 47 than any other star imaginable, and warm as a kitten's tongue.

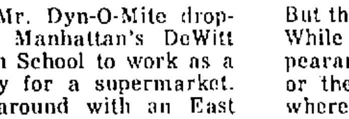
In a long-sleeved silk blouse under a Renaissance jumper, her lithe body is fresh and slender as a new spring tendril popping through the ground for a look at the sun. It's the shape that made her the envy of a million women on a million diets, and there's nothing she can do about it. She eats plates of pasta every day and can't gain weight.

And the uncreased face gives no indication that there's ever been a day or an hour of unhappiness. It might be an illusion, but the illusion works.

To be truthful, she is going through an anxiety attack even as she kicks off her shoes and curls up on the sofa for a chat. Her husband, Dr. Andrea Dotti, was assaulted by kidnappers in broad daylight a few weeks ago in Rome. They forgot their chloroform, so he screamed until they ran away, but he was badly injured, requiring seven stitches in his head.

"I tell you, it's a very anguishing period in Rome. They're even kidnapping tourists for $50 apiece, ransacking apartments and breaking into cars. There are so many different groups — some do it for political reasons, some for money, and others are just delinquents who do it for kicks.

"If you're a famous person, it's especially worrying, but I can't let fear dominate my life. I get up in the morning, do everything like everyone else, and it's second nature, really."



rex reed

SEAN, HER SON by Mel Ferrer, is 15, 6-foot-3, and away in college. Lucca, the baby, is 6 and in a very safe village school in Switzerland near the country house. "I worry less now. But two years ago, the joy of Rome was to walk around in the streets at night, enjoying the charm. Not anymore. The whole world has changed. Now I shuttle back and forth between my husband and his work in Rome and the children in Switzerland. It's not an ideal way to live, but it seems the best thing to do for the moment."

All of which has kept her away from the screen and the fans who love her. "It's all geography," she sighs. "I only work if I can combine my family's holiday with the shooting schedule. Acting is something I love to do and will do again, but I'm not having a career. Movies will always be an occasional thing now. It's hard to say this, but I am sincere when I tell you I really haven't wanted to work.

"For many years, ever since I was a child, and all through my first marriage to Mel, I was always traveling around making films. So I wanted and needed a rest. I hated the idea of leaving the children once they started school, and my husband must be near his clinic. I had to rearrange my life."

She's returning to Hollywood for the Academy Awards, and her husband and youngest son will accompany her. Givenchy has designed a knockout for her to wear, which will be a change from the blue jeans she wears at home.

But even then, she says, "there will be no movie star talk. I'm not a movie star to my family. Far from it. Not that I've hidden it from them. The children know what I do for a living.

"Lucca was with me in Spain during 'Robin and Marian,' and it was a grand experience for a little boy, watching Robin Hood come to life. He kept saying 'Why isn't Daddy playing Robin Hood?' I told him that was impossible and he said, 'I know why — because Daddy doesn't have the right suit.'

"Sean's friends know more about my career than I do, and they're always coming around for a photograph or something, but I think it amuses him. They don't think of it in terms of having a famous mother because I don't think of it that way. They're very natural children.

"I think I worry more about their future than they do. They'll take their period the way we took ours. All you can do is give them affection and what you hope is a background with the right values."

IF THERE'S any negative reaction to her appearance in the lushly romantic "Robin and Marian," it's seeing Audrey Hepburn playing her age. "Well, I AM 47, and I think it's silly to play younger parts. People have been youth worshippers too long. This is by far the happiest period of my life, even with all the tragic changes in the world. I'm less restless, and I no longer look for the wrong values. If I only knew then what I know now.

"I've had so much more than I ever dreamt of. It's not as though I've had great disappointments or unfulfilled hopes that didn't work out. So much more has happened than I ever thought possible. I didn't expect any of this. I am the most un-bitter person in the world.

"I decided ages ago to like life unconditionally. I've never expected life to do anything special for me, yet I've accomplished more than I ever hoped for, and most of the time it just happened without my even seeking it. I was asked to act when I couldn't act, I was asked to sing in 'Funny Face' when I couldn't sing, and dance with Fred Astaire when I couldn't dance, and do all kinds of things I was not expecting and was not prepared for. Then I tried like mad to cope with it.

"Now I make a real division — when I'm at home, I'm really at home, and I don't do anything. I haven't done any interviews in the past eight years. Of course, I can't do anything about the photographers who follow me around in the street and wait outside my door.

"I don't have a secretary. I don't have attack dogs. My dog is a gorgeous mutt my father-in-law picked up in the street, and she's madly sentimental and gushes all over everybody. I don't go to parties or official functions, and I answer my own telephone. I cope."

It seems impossible, for few stars have ever achieved the kind of supersonic international stardom Audrey Hepburn has. Yet she honestly does not view herself as anything special. (She must have removed all the mirrors from her house.)

"Truly, I've never been concerned with any public image. It would drive me around the bend if I worried about the pedestal others have put me on. And also I don't believe it. I've never thought of myself as glamorous or anything. I think Ava Gardner and Elizabeth Taylor are glamorous, but I don't fit into that category at all, at all.

"There's never been any question of my not being me. I'd be schizoprenic if I worried about

Remember when...

It's been called the sleepy lagoon, the vanishing lagoon, the dreary lagoon and, even more unkindly, the muddy lagoon, mud puddle and what lagoon?

But in its heyday it was proud Rainbow Lagoon, a semicircle ringed with lights of many colors that reflected at night in the twinkling water.

Rainbow Lagoon opened with as much pomp as Long Beach could muster in 1932 — a long motorcade led by motorcycle officers. They drove from Rainbow Pier's encircling arms, entering at the foot of Linden Avenue and exiting at Pine Avenue.

The water reached to the still new Municipal Auditorium which was demolished last year, giving way to Pacific Terrace progress.

Small electric boats plied the lagoon waters, carrying laughing children, sailors on leave escorting pretty girls, starry-eyed lovers. The little boats, riding in the moonlit water, heard their share of love talk and wooing and dreams.

THEN CAME PLANS for an auditorium annex, a huge one for large sports events, ice shows, circuses. A huge land-fill was necessary for the structure, now known as the Long Beach Arena, and the original Rainbow Lagoon was a casualty of this progress. Radical changes were ahead for the 120-acre Rainbow Lagoon-Auditorium project.

This was in the early 1950s. At Sunday midnight, September, 1954, the last electric boat was tied to its dock, leaving fun and gaiety and romance of the lagoon docked, too.

By 1955, tons of fill to repair subsidence and provide for the Annex site and parking lots were changing the character of the lagoon. First it shrank to a third of its original size, becoming a mere 6.8 acre still water lake. Some small bridges were constructed, Japanese style, but the Rainbow Lagoon and Pier were gone, part of the city's past.

You can see the lake — pond? — now, just barely, as you follow Shoreline Drive. Some seagulls settle on the water now and then, oblivious to the demolition and construction in the Pacific Terrace area.

Someday there may be a park-like area, picnic tables, a swimming lagoon, as once was suggested in a master plan. But for the present, the pond-lagoon belongs to the seagulls.

SOCIALLY SPEAKING

From Colonial times forward, all in costume

GOOD NEWS and bad news today.

The good news is that my flu went in to pneumonia and the doctors can cure pneumonia.

Bad news is that after weeks on fruit juice I didn't lose a pound.

ALSO LOST OUT on the Fine Arts Affiliates' Bicentennial Celebration at the Elks Club. I am told that it was THE party of the year and perhaps of the whole Bicentennial.

Nearly 200 ladies and gentlemen turned back the clock 200 years for the costume ball which was duly registered with the Bicentennial Committee in our nation's capitol.

I interviewed ball chairlady Peggy Jo Moore who told me she chose to represent Dolly Madison and her husband Perry went as General Rufus Putnam Howe, an ancestor of Perry's family.

Guests entered the ballroom through a corridor of massed flags from all 50 states and flags commemorating just about everything you could think of.

Each couple was formally announced by the Lord Chamberlin, Gilman Rankin of the Theater Arts Department at Long Beach University. If you thought his resonant voice sounded a bit familiar, he played the Lone Ranger on radio.

Everyone was in costume. The ball committee provided mop caps for the waitresses, red white and blue string ties for the bus boys and white wigs for John Prince and his Americana Orchestra from the University.

Jan Simonian, as president of the affiliates, couldn't quite liberate her role in today's culture s-o-o-o husband, Dr. Ralph, went as the first President of our country and Jan, in a pink and blue gown and powdered wig, went as his First Lady.

A couple of British generals crashed. One of them looked like Dr. Ed Cruchley who came with his wife, Bev. Bev had a little difficulty getting together a maternity Bicentennial gown but she looked authentically pregnant.

carolyn mcdowell

Other redcoat was Richard MacKay there with his wife, Dr. Nan.

Two Ben Franklins showed up although Don Gill had the edge since he brought along a kite. Dennis Murray was the other Ben.

It was fitting and proper that the learned head of our University, Dr. Steve Horn, dress as Thomas Jefferson. Wife Nini was in an elegant ball gown. Which is somewhat redundant as all of the ball gowns were elegant. Especially the pink one worn by honorary ball chairlady Isabel Patterson.

Someone commented that Assemblyman Fred Chel was made to wear knee breeches and Elizabeth was prettier than her gown.

Dr. Sel and Sheri Beebe were in matching blue brocade. If there had been prizes, the Huffstetlers, Forrest and Gertrude, should have won for the most authentic. Forrest even went off to the hairdresser to have his white wig combed on his head.

There were some peasants attending.

Councillady Renee Simon went as the mother of humorist Will Rogers. You have to know that Rogers' mother was a full blooded Indian. Husband Harry went as Will Rogers' father, naturally.

Jack and Connie Shainline dressed as an Amish couple. Jack having first hand knowledge as a Pennsylvania native.

Reed and Harriet Williams also chose buckskin outfits. Andy and Bonnie Heck were Pilgrims.

Dick Kussman was an authentically wounded (his leg is in a cast) soldier and wife Bunny was his nurse.

Do you suppose we will have to wait another 200 years for such a great costume party?

MEMBERS AND GUESTS of Dames Club slipped into something comfortable — glasses of wine provided by Brookside Winery.

After a suitable amount of wine was sampled, imbibers adjourned to Castillo Real Restaurant for dinner.

Adjourners included Frank and Joy Grand, Ewing and Gerrie Turner, Dick and Gloria McWilliams, Decatur and Linda Dilday and Paul and Faye Burrus.

More were Bill and June Sells, Howard and Inez Volen, George and Shirley Gre Green, Ken and Marilyn Johnson, J. B. and Mary Lou Dixon, Larry and Nancy Schima and Dean and Betty Eastman.

A NEW HOUSE in Naples for Kirk and Mary Bannerman caused a party.

They termed the barbecue a "Going Into Debt" party.

Housewarmers included Marty and Carol Shober, Rich and Kay Howard, Bo and Tina Lang, Ron and Beverly Batson, Kathy Miller, Al and Inge Larson, Dennis Headrick, Mike Emrick, Ron Sainard, Chuck Lennox, Ed Muehl and Stephanie Ardist.

Let us know when you have the mortgage burning.

ANOTHER HOUSE warmed...

A new one in Belmont Heights for Bob and Dee Pellkofer.

On hand for buffet dinner and three — count them, three — desserts, were their sons, Bob and Mike, Dee's parents Glen and Lorraine Miller, Miles and Virginia Kingsley and Dee Lewbel all of San Diego.

Also Bob and Mary Ann Machan (Bob did a formal portrait of the Pellkofer's airdale, Jenny, as a house gift), George and Vicki Blake, Wayne and Linda Ebare, Donna Lipp, Rpm and Diane Hauser, Alex Ramirez and Pat Knee.

FLEA MARKET FINDS

Judge pewter by wear signs

Only age can give pewter a rich patina

Q. "Are there any guidelines for distinguishing old from new pewter? — Harry, Thomasville, Ga.

A. Pewter reproductions abound in sufficient numbers to furrow the brow of an expert. Marks found on antique pieces have been well documented, and as a general rule they can be found on the base of an object. Some modern English plates have the mark on the front of the piece. Any article bearing the word "Pewter" is a contemporary object.

A country of origin suggests a date of production subsequent to 1891. Old pieces invariably show dents, scratches and other sign of wear. The surface will feel rough to the touch when you run your hand over it. There is also the distinctive patina of antique pewter which can only be acquired with age.

Q. "What firm produced that fantastic Strawberry-Diamond and Fan cut glass design?" — Sybil, Little Rock, Ark.

A. This beautiful pattern was marketed by some of America's foremost glass companies during the so-called Brilliant period (1880-1915). A partial list would include such industry giants at T.G. Hawkes, Dorflinger, Sinclaire and the Mt. Washington Glass Company. Complete tableware settings of this beloved pattern graced table-tops around the turn-of-the century. Tip: Signed pieces are particularly prized. Strawberry-Diamond and Fan value guide: Cruet, original stopper, $100; master salt, $70; water pitcher, signed Hawkes, $250.

dan d'imperio

Q. "Do original Broadway cast albums excite flea market shoppers?" — Sarah, Spokane, Wash.

A. Some aware record collectors have posted profits in show albums that would make theatrical angels turn green with envy. They can often be purchased at discount prices, and should always be stored in their original cellophane wrappers. Original cast albums of "Saratoga" and "Golden Rainbow" currently fetch between $20 and $25. Flop shows frequently become box-office winners within collecting circles. A smaller pressing can result in a particular title becoming somewhat scarce. Converting discs into dollars can be a might profitable hobby.

Q. "I'm on the prowl for Coronation items pertaining to Elizabeth II. How are prices on these collectibles?" — Peg, Streeter, Ill.

A. Items issued to commemorate the crowning of Elizabeth II are still hovering in the affordable range. Many finds currently retail for under $10. However, please to not procrastinate as these items may suddenly attract a royal following and start escalating majestically. Elizabeth II value guide: China bowl, 7-inches diameter, $9; cup and saucer, $8.50; mug, crystal, $29; plaque, ceramic, $10; plate, 10-inches diameter, $14; scrapbook, $11.

Appraise your antiques with the aid of Dan D'Imperio's book and value guide "The ABC's of Victorian Antiques," Dodd, Mead & Co., $9.95. An autographed copy may be ordered from the Star-Telegram Syndicate, Inc., 400 W. 7th St., Fort Worth, Tx. 76102.

Women are asking...

'I do exercises, but don't seem to see much benefit. Is there something I'm forgetting?'

By REBA and BONNIE CHURCHILL

"Test your technique!" That's the advice of a physical conditioner. As he explained, "It's not enough to go through the movements of exercise. For them to prove beneficial, add concentration.

"For instance, the waist trimmer, which begins by standing with feet apart, hands grasping yardstick in outstretched hands, and swinging upper torso, demands attention.

"TEST: Do you bend forward from the waist, with back flat, abdomen contracted? Do you feel muscles along the waist go to work as you swing from side-to-side? Do you breathe rhythmically instead of holding your breath? Are elbows flexed? Are you enjoying yourself? RESULT: If you answer, 'Yes', you're doing something right!"

Next, let's consider the conditioner's suggestion for a "body balance" routine. Again, he reminds it's the thought as well as the muscle power you put into the workout that is important. Stand tall, hands holding stick so the tip rests on floor between feet. (Or, grasp the back of a chair as an exercise aid.) Bend right knee and try to place sole of foot on ruler.

"TEST: Do you wobble? Can't you hold the pose for more than two seconds? RESULT: You need some help!"

The conditioner recommends, "If you learn to stand in a balanced condition, weight resting on feet evenly, with body weight directed toward the front of each foot, the routine will be easier to perform. Then, when you raise your knee, the weight should quickly shift and your equilibrium should be easier to maintain." Naturally, check with your doctor for advice on exercising, or if you have a special figure problem.

P.S. Like to eat it up, and still see the pounds go away? Check the new 12 page booklet on how to eat your way thin. Send 50 cents (in coin) and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Reba & Bonnie Churchill, "Eat and be Thin", Independent Press Telegram, P.O. Box 46-181, Hollywood, Ca. 90046.

MEDICINE AND YOU

Hypoglycemia latest fad

THE PRACTICE of diagnosing all sorts of ill-defined malaise as hypoglycemia (low blood sugar) has become practically a cult in the United States today, a doctor says.

Actually the condition is quite rare and is seldom a cause of the discomforts for which it is blamed, says Dr. Rachmiel Levine, executive medical director of City of Hope Medical Center, Duarte.

"Hypoglycemia has taken the place of much of the group of psychosomatic illnesses of 15 to 20 years ago" as a medical fad, says Dr. Levine.

In a report in the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. Levine says it is undoubtedly satisfying to believe in one plausible biological explanation for feelings of fatigue, weakness, dizzy spells and exhaustion.

The modern concept, he says, is to blame it all on low blood sugar levels.

Low blood sugar can cause these symptoms — but so can many other health problems.

In reality, he continues, low blood sugar as a cause of disability in the adult is rare.

THE PROCEDURE of amniocentesis is both safe and accurate, according to a major study conducted by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development.

Amniocentesis is needle puncture of the bag that encloses the developing fetus. The needle is inserted through the mother's abdomen. A sample of fluid is drawn off for testing.

The test is recommended for all pregnant women over the age of 35 years, those who have already had a child with a genetic defect, those with a family history of such defects and women known to be carriers of serious genetic diseases.

Dr. Theodore Cooper, assistant secretary for health, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, says that amniocentesis has moved from the realm of a research procedure "to a part of clinical practice."

A VACCINE for the prevention of gonorrhea has been developed by a team of scientists at the University of Pittsburgh.

Experiments on animals and human volunteers indicate the vaccine may well provide a degree of protection not available up to now.

Announcement of the vaccine's development was made by Dr. Charles C. Brinton Jr., professor of microbiology.

Much work remains before the preparation can satisfy government efficacy and safety requirements and thus be released for general use.

In one experiment, Dr. Brinton and an associate were injected with the vaccine. Three other faculty members who joined in the experiment were not immunized.

All five were injected with gonorrhea organisms until all showed symptoms.

The two who received the vaccine showed a level of protection about 60 times as great as those who had not.

Then all five volunteers were cured with antibiotics.

Scientists estimate that the vaccine can reduce a person's chances of being infected with gonorrhea from the current rate of 30 per cent per contact to about one per cent.

WEARERS OF THE Earth Shoe walk no differently than wearers of tennis shoes or persons walking in bare feet, a California study reveals.

A study of the biomechanics of the Earth Shoe was made at the gait analysis laboratory, Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children, San Francisco.

Dr. Roger A. Mann, laboratory director and an Oakland orthopedic surgeon, says the study shows that an individual's gait pattern is not measureably affected or altered by the Earth Shoe.

The Earth Shoe has a "negative heel." That means the heel is lower than the toe. There is a wide toe box and an elevated arch.

A CONDITION once thought to be that only of elderly persons has been found to be not uncommon in young persons.

It is sigmoid volvulus — a twisting of the bowel upon itself.

Three doctors at Guy's Hospital in London, England, report that nine young persons suffered recurrent attacks of the disorder and that there was a long delay before correct diagnosis was made.

All were treated successfully by surgery, according to the British Medical Journal.

REGULAR consumption of salicylates has detrimental effects in pregnancy, a new study shows.

Salicylates have been widely used for the relief of pain and to reduce fever and inflammation for more than a century.

A study in Australia shows that among salicylate users there was an increased incidence of anemia, hemorrhage before and after birth, complicated deliveries and infant mortality.

The findings are reported by Drs. Edith Collins and Gillian Turner of Women's Hospital and Children's Medical Research Foundation in Sydney, Australia.

Details are in the journal Lancet.

TAMOXIFEN appears to be a promising drug in the treatment of women with advanced breast cancer, researchers say.

Women who are more than five years past menopause are more likely to respond to the drug, a New Orleans doctor says in Ob. Gyn. News, a medical newspaper.

The drug is taken by mouth twice a day.

Benefits, pitfalls described

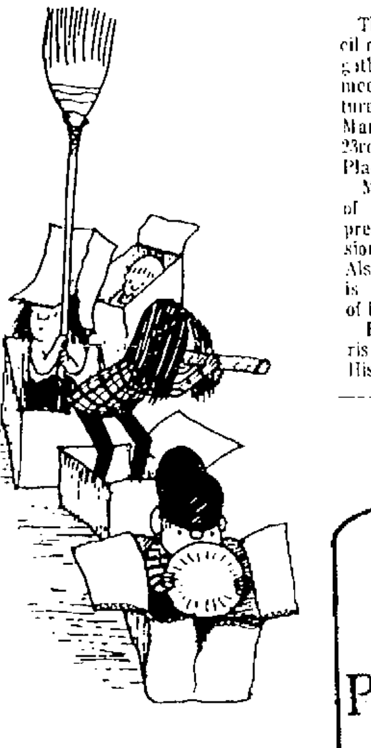
keep your children, she does. Oh, some of our members are kind of picky — like they won't stay with a child who has a slight illness. But it all works out pretty well."

Babysitting co-ops are not practical for women with fulltime jobs, Ms. Yankelevitz admitted, "unless a group of working mothers got together and worked something out for evenings and weekends," and are probably not for women who are turned off by structure and regimentation.

Ms. Yankelevitz said that at first she had some problems "with all the charts and rules and things." But as she thought about it more, she explained, her reservations lessened.

"Among other benefits, participation in a co-op enables you to get to know people in your neighborhood that you might not otherwise get to know.

"You meet people who have the same concerns you do. The more I thought about it, the more sense it made."



ACCW sets quarterly meet

The Archdiocesan Council of Catholic Women will gather for its quarterly meeting Friday in the lecture hall at Mount St. Mary's downtown campus, 23rd Street and Chester Place, Los Angeles.

Mrs. Harold Ramsden of Long Beach, ACCW president, will call the session to order at 10 a.m. Also serving on the board is Mrs. Robert Beglinger of Long Beach.

Father Michael A. Harris will be guest speaker. His topic is "Liberty and Justice in the Family — for Parents and Teenagers."

All Catholic women may attend. Adjournment will be at noon.

Lore of the seas is told in art

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

At this Bicentennial time when Americans are re-examining their history, Los Angeles County Museum of Art has borrowed from local collections paintings and sculpture that tell of the enormous influence the ocean has had. "Pertaining to the Sea" will open Tuesday and will continue through May 2 in the American Art Galleries.

Nancy Moure, assistant curator of American art, organized the exhibition of 50 works which range from approximately 1840 to 1920. In addition to these paintings there are carvings from wooden ships, such as figureheads and stern boards, and examples of scrimshaw, the art that bored sailors and whalers devised in the 19th century by scratching designs on the sides of sperm whale teeth.

Says Moure, "From the very first days of European settlement in North America, the sea has played an important role in the growth of the nation; consequently, paintings depicting activities and objects associated with the sea were produced. Because they portray contemporary environments, American paintings offer more than a study of art styles and motifs."

High lights of the show include a dramatic mid-19th century portrayal of a frigate in a storm by James Buttersworth, and detailed renderings of steamships by Antonio Jacobsen and of steamboats by James Bard. Bard's boats are exact scale recreations of the originals which he measured as carefully as though he were making architectural drawings.

Among other painters represented are John Frederick Kensett, Alfred Thompson Bricher, William S. Haseltine, Paul Dougherty and Emil Carlsen.

LONG BEACH Museum of Art will open an exhibition of photo-text and video work by Fred Lonidier and Phil Steinmetz next Sunday. With the rather cumbersome title "Lonidier/Steinmetz: Narrative Social Realism" subtitled Lonidier's "The Health and Safety Game" and Steinmetz' "Someone Made a Mistake," the exhibits make use of different techniques.

Lonidier uses photo-textual blow-ups and a video-taped set of interviews to investigate abuses of workers' rights to on-the-job safety as presented in a series of specific case studies. He documents health hazards in occupations that range from petro-chemical/atomic energy industries to white collar office jobs.

Steinmetz' work takes the form of 10 handmade books to be read while seated at desks rather than viewed hanging on a wall. Explains David Ross, deputy director of television/video, "Steinmetz assumes the role of participant observer, usually associated with anthropological study, to produce a sociological investigation of his own family. With the intent of exposing the archetypal qualities observable in his family, he has documented both his own life in the context of his family and the traits of his family that he feels establish their identity within the consumer class."

The museum is open Wednesdays through Sundays from noon to 5 p.m. Admission is free.

WMC to honor young musicians

Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the patio area of Ebell Clubhouse, 290 Cerritos Ave., Woman's Music Club will honor winners of its recent Student Musician's Scholarship Competition.

First place awardees who will be given $100 prizes are Cherry Coleman, violinist; Diane Orlando, mezzo-soprano; and Naomi Nagaya, pianist.

Miss Coleman, 17, Lakewood High School senior, recently won a scholarship to Curtis School of Music in Philadelphia and will leave in September for enrollment under the tutelage of Ivan Galamian. Wednesday, she will perform the first movement of Tchaikovsky's "Concerto in D Major."

Miss Orlando, 23, of Huntington Beach, will graduate from Long Beach State University this spring. For Family Night, she will sing "Adieu, Forets" from "Jeanne d'Arc" by Tchaikovsky.

NAOMI NAGAYA, 13, a straight A student at Dwyer Intermediate School in Huntington Beach and winner of a number of Southern California awards, will play Mozart's "Sonata in A Minor."

All winners of second, third and certificate prizes will perform with the exception of Virginia Lee and Karen Carlson who have conflicting commitments.

Family Night hosts will be Mrs. Katherine Langdon, club president; members of the executive board; and Mrs. Bruce Woods, scholarship chairperson. All winners will be honored at a reception after the recital. Guests of members and performers are invited to share the evening. Others who wish to attend may call Mrs. Woods, 3014 Nipomo Ave., for information.

Super Sherlock Holmes

Leonard Nimoy is the 110th professional actor to play super detective 'Sherlock Holmes' which will run at the Shubert Theater, Los Angeles, from Wednesday through May 2. This Royal Shakespeare production is the biggest theatrical venture ever to cross the Atlantic — it has more than 40 tons of scenery and costumes. Its five sets are shrouded in fog and special effects.

Shostakovich concert innovative, unique

A marathon program, the first Shostakovich Memorial Concert to be given in Southern California, will be presented next Sunday from 4 to 9 p.m. in the University Theater of Long Beach State University, 6101 E. Seventh St.

Creator and director of the event, Julien Musafia, says, "In addition to being the first Shostakovich Memorial Concert in Southern California, this concert is historic. It will be the only marathon Shostakovich concert ever given anywhere and we will use an original system of 'simultaneous translations' to heighten the dramatic effect and to give an instant comprehension of the Russian text during the vocal parts of 'Symphony No. 14' and song cycles 'From Jewish Folk Poetry.'

"This will be only the second time the symphony has been performed on the West Coast. Grace-Lynne Martin, soprano, and Roger Ardrey, bass-baritone, will be sololsts."

The program will feature works ranging from Op. 1 through Op. 135 and will include piano music and chamber music. Other performing artists will be the LBSU Consortium Musicum, alumni and faculty.

IN ADDITION to the symphony and song cycles, the concert will include "Twenty-four Preludes for Piano," "Three Fantastic Dances," "Sonata for Cello and Piano," "Sonata Op.12," "Concertino for Two Pianos," and "Quintet, Op. 57."

The Quintet received the Stalin prize of $100,000, the largest amount of money ever awarded for a single composition. The "Sonata Op. 12" for piano has never before been performed in this area. A relay of pianists will play the 24 preludes.

Interspersed throughout the concert will be commentary by KPFK's critic, William Malloch.

The Shostakovich Memorial Concert is sponsored by the LBSU department of music, the Louise Carlson Cultural Fund and the LBSU Alumni Association.

General admission is $5; student tickets are $2. Tickets may be purchased at the fine arts ticket office Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. or on the afternoon of performance.

DURING intermissions, dinner will be available from the University Union catering service in the theater patio.

Philharmonic due in L.B.

Daniel Lewis will be on the podium at Millikan High School, 2800 Snowden Ave., Saturday at 8:15 p.m. to conduct the Los Angeles Philharmonic.

He has programmed Haydn's "Symphony No. 92" (Oxford), Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" and Nielsen's "Clarinet Concerto."

Michele Zukovsky, the orchestra's co-principal clarinetist, will be soloist in the Nielsen work.

This will be the second orchestral concert of the Philharmonic's current Long Beach season.

Lewis, who combines an active career as chairman of the conducting department of the USC School of Music with duties as music director of the Pasadena Symphony Orchestra, also has served on the faculties of California State University Fullerton, UC San Diego and Grossmont College.

'Small War' will begin

A double romance and a spy story in a Colonial setting, Robert Sherwood's "Small War on Murray Hill," will open Friday at Long Beach Community Playhouse, 5021 E. Anaheim St.

The plot concerns the efforts of Mary Murray, played by Susan Bosler, to delay Gen. Howe, played by Terry Doyle, from reaching Gen. Washington's camp for 24 hours. In addition, young romantic leads Lt. Frederick (Michael Fiore) and Susan Lindley (Sharon Orange) are entangled in the spy drama which combines military conferences, romance and intrigue.

James Brittain directs the cast which includes Kay Shuman, Allan Ellison, Walter Orange, Homer Johnson, Owen Griffiths, David Hammond and John Vandemere.

Performances will be at 8:30 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays through May 8.

Prejudices buried too deep to ever eliminate

After one of the recent presidential primary elections, a political pundit observed that prejudice is alive and well and as potent as ever in determining people's choices at the ballot box.

That reminded me of a visit with a high-level government official some years back. Discussing some of the problems of the large cities, he asked me, "How can we eliminate prejudice?"

dr. walt menninger

Presumably he thought that because I am a psychiatrist, I had some magic answer to this question. (That's a mistaken assumption many people have.) My answer was simple and straight-forward and not what he expected: We aren't going to eliminate prejudice! Because the causes of prejudice lie too deep in the human personality.

Webster defines prejudice as a preconceived judgment or opinion, an opinion without just grounds or before sufficient knowledge, an unreasonable inclination or objection. While the term usually refers to feelings against someone or something, it can be positive as well as negative. We can be prejudiced toward certain foods or clothes or politics just as much as we may be prejudiced against some.

OUR PREJUDICES are a function of emotions — the eternal, complicating factors in life. They originate in early childhood from feelings we have about things we don't or can't understand. Indeed, as Webster notes, the roots of prejudice lie in feelings "before sufficient knowledge."

As adults, we may like to believe that all men and women are created equal. But it doesn't take the child long to realize it's really otherwise. There are real differences, and there are many imagined differences above and beyond the real differences. And many feelings are prompted by both the real and imagined differences.

One set of feelings comes from realizing that there are "haves" and "have-nots." The "haves," as they realize they have something others do not, fear the loss of what they have and try to protect themselves. The "have-nots," as they become aware of what they lack, resent the status of being without and strive to make up or compensate for their deficiency.

Being a "have" or a "have-not" relates to many conditions — sex, race, socio-economic status. There is even the basic "have-not" status which every child experiences, living in the land of the giants, being relatively helpless, not completely sure he will grow up to become a giant himself.

AS CHILDREN move out of the home into school, they become increasingly aware of differences and struggle to explain them. The basic difficulty is that a young child doesn't have the knowledge to explain the differences or understand them. But he feels them. Unable to justify the feelings in rational adult terms, he comes up with other formulations.

He may deny that differences really exist and rely on childish fantasies of magical power or hope that all will turn out equal in the end, when he is grown up (if that ever realy happens). Or he may displace feelings of inadequacy onto someone else who has "less," or who is felt to be less adequate; he thus elevates his self-esteem by putting someone else down.

Yet another complicating factor has been cited by the late Dr. Lawrence Kubie, a Baltimore psychoanalyst. The child has mixed feelings about his own body — on the one hand, he has a secret, guilty pride in it; on the other hand, he has hidden feelings of shame. And it is hard to come to grips with both good and bad in oneself. The psychological solution is to bury the inner "bad" feelings, deny their existence within, and instead to lay them onto others, putting all the "badness" outside.

How can we eliminate prejudice? We can't, any more than we can eliminate all disease or maladjustment. It is part of the human condition. We can attempt to understand our prejudices and to admit the biases we have, but we can't eliminate them.

In future columns, I will deal more specifically with several areas of prejudice — against long hair, against blacks, against busing. And I'll offer more specific thoughts of some things we can do.

(Dr. Menninger invites your comments and questions. Write to him care of the Independent Press Telegram. Because of the volume of mail, he cannot answer each individually but will handle questions of general interest in this column.)

AT WIT'S END

Perfect all-occasion sentiment

Greeting cards were originally born out of the need to say for people what they couldn't say for themselves.

I once gave my mother a card depicting a little girl in a hooped skirt knocking on the door of a cottage and saying, "You bask in the sunshine of sweetness and light...and make all my dreams come true...prithee reap the harvest of all my love...in everything you do. Happy birthday."

Mother smiled and said, "It sounds just like you."

"Prithee, mother," I said, "you've been basking in the sunshine too long. All I wanted to say was I'm not much, but I'm all you can afford."

Not so today. I've never seen so many cards for so many occasions saying greetings in so many ways in all my life.

SOME OF THEM you can even send through the mails.

If you put your foot in your mouth and are sorry, there's a card for it.

If you won a tennis tournament, a diploma in sheetmetal, a divorce, or passed your eye examination, there's a card for it.

I even saw one that said, "I love living with you because I've got a case on you."

erma bombeck

When you open it up, it threatens, "Marry me or I'm taking you to court."

There are marriage proposals, business proposals, vacation proposals and some proposals that are just plain indecent.

I was picking out a Valentine for my husband when a salesperson asked if she could help. "I'd like something a little sentimental." "Here's one," she said, handing me a card. My ears turned red. "You wanta see my I.D.?"

"THAT ONE'S not so bad," she said. "We had one that was waterproof so you could read it under a cold shower. Just tell me what you want to say and how you want to say it."

"Maybe I'll just get a Mother's Day card."

"Unwed? Underage? Unwanted? Undone? Unsung? Unexpected? Underfoot?"

"Just something that will sound like me."

"Here's one that might fit you. It's a little strange. 'You bask in the sunshine of sweetness and light and make all my dreams in accord...prithee, mother, you know I'm not much...but face it, I'm all you can afford."

Good grief.

The workshop

Now here's a way to recycle egg shells and make them beautiful conversation pieces for year-round display. Simply adding baubles, bangles, beads — even fabric and small pictures — can give you exciting "boutique" eggs that will enhance any decor. Our plans call for glittery (but economical) spangels that are easily attached.

Over 100 pictures in our step-by-step patterns take you through the entire process from emptying the egg to mounting it — like those creations shown here with actress Susan Brown.

Along with a complete materials list, our pattern even shows you how to create Christmas ornaments — plus hot air balloon mobiles. So if you've always admired egg ornaments but felt they would take more time and talent than you possess, let us "egg" you on to try it. We've made it so easy!

To obtain the Egg Decorating and Ornaments Pattern, #524, send $2.50 (includes first class postage and handling) by cash, check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Independent Press Telegram, Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, Ca. 91409.

Dear Mother Earth:

By LYNN AND JOEL RAPP

DEAR MOTHER EARTH:

I have a problem with my Pothos plant. Its leaves are turning yellow, one by one, and some of them near the base of the stems are falling off. Help, please! I don't want to lose it as "Peter" and I have become very attached.

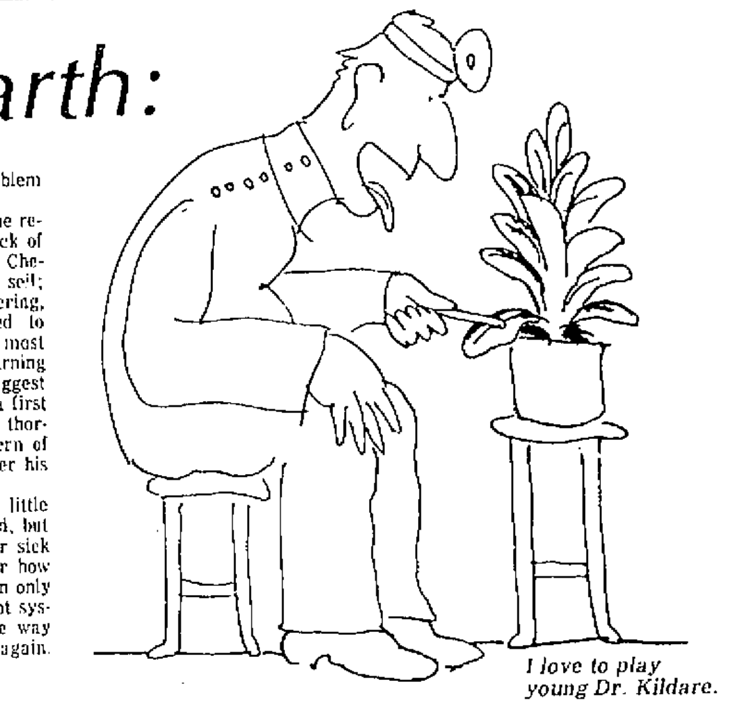
I have him hanging in front of an east window and water him every third day with about one-half Dixie cup of water. Maybe fertilizing will help, but I have no idea what kind of food to use or how often to serve it up. Please offer any advice you think might save Peter Pothos from an untimely demise.— L.D.

DEAR L.D.:

First of all, what's a "timely" death? Any time any living thing expires it must be considered untimely, so we'll do our best to help you resuscitate Peter. We've said it in previous columns, but it's such a common problem it bears repealing.

Yellowing leaves are usually the result of one of three conditions: lack of iron, corrected by adding an Iron Chelate (available at nurseries) to the soil; lack of light; and improper watering, usually overwatering as opposed to under. If it's not too late — and if most of the leaves have turned or are turning yellow it probably is — we'd suggest you cut down on the watering as a first try at remedy. Let Peter dry out thoroughly and then establish a pattern of watering him thoroughly only after his soil is completely dry to the touch.

If you want to try adding a little Iron Chelate to the soil, go ahead, but never fertilize Peter or any other sick plant for that matter. No matter how organic the food you choose, it can only harm, not help, the weakened root system. If all fails, cut him all the way back and perhaps he'll grow again. Good luck and happy growing.



I love to play young Dr. Kildare.

Systematic inspections plan needed

called it a "freak accident" because the deterioration of the ceiling supports was concealed. There was no way of inspecting it and O'Connor says that had the building been brought up to earthquake standards, the ceiling might have collapsed anyway.

The earthquake ordinance opens the door to enforcement of other codes. "If an owner chooses to repair his building rather than demolish it, we request that all other substandard conditions be corrected."

In the case of the Y, however, the portion which collapsed was suspended from the original ceiling and could not have been inspected without dismantling a portion of the building.

In general, O'Connor feels the final responsibility for the condition of a building lies with its owner.

While his office is currently moving on type three buildings - those built of unreinforced masonry bearing walls and exhibiting poor quality mortar, O'Connor thinks the poor condition of buildings in some parts of the city, particularly in the downtown area, is caused by other conditions.

"Many buildings end up being condemned because of the hostile environment in the area where they are located."

He is talking about the spiral of decay which results when an owner is reluctant to repair a building because his tenants cannot afford to pay the rent required for rehabilitation.

This is something over which the building and safety department has no control. "I would like to see private industry come in and solve the problem," O'Connor says.

He's not shirking his duty. He feels a keen sense of responsibility. "I have a moral obligation to the community...taxpayers have spent a lot of money on me."

That's why he plans to focus his 30 years experience on what he considers to be the major hazard in Long Beach, another major earthquake. "No one knows how much time we have before another major earthquake occurs."

O'Connor is dogged by the specter of a quake striking a city of substandard buildings.

What he wants, whether or not he's on the city payroll, is to close the books on the earthquake hazard program. It would be successful, he says, if on the day before the quake occurs , the last substandard building in the city is either rehabilitated or destroyed.

ADVICE TO THE TAXLORN

When capital's at zero

DEAR MR. SMITH: I am in partnership in the motel business. Over the past five years we have been taking out drawings for ourselves and about breaking even on the profit because of the depreciation. My problem is that our capital accounts are about to go into the red for 1975. How do you account for this tax wise? Do you ignore it, or treat it as income leaving your capital account at zero, or do you treat it as a capital gain? — R.E.

Capital accounts that are in the red are entered on Federal Form 1065 with the amounts in brackets. Assuming that a partner's proper share of the firm's liabilities is at least equal to his capital balance that is in the red, there is no special income or gain to be reported. Otherwise, you may need professional assistance to determine whether the excess drawings resulted in capital gain, or a reduction in ordinary loss, or if any other treatment is indicated.

jacob smith

DEAR MR. SMITH: Internal Revenue Code Section 103(a)(1) excludes from gross income interest on the obligations of a state. It does not say that the state has to be one of the United States of America. Could it be one of the states of Mexico? — L.D.

No! You misinterpret the section. The Code provision you mention refers to "The obligations of a State, a Territory, or a possession of the United States..."

DEAR MR. SMITH: We have just leased a business lot we own, and the lessee has agreed to pay the property taxes. Do we have to report to IRS the amount of the taxes that the lessee pays on the property? If so how? — W.T.Mc.

The preferred way is to add the lessee's tax payments to your rent income and also to your tax expense. It has no overall effect on your tax.

DEAR MR. SMITH: My 1975 income was $1,530 and federal income tax of $124.80 was withheld. Someone at IRS aid I owed no tax and I shouldn't file. They said if I filed I would owe $124.80, even though I am over 72. Are they right? — B.L.S.

Of course not! You may have misunderstood. File your 1040 for 1975 in order to get your $124.80 refunded.

DEAR MR. SMITH: How much can I deduct for licenses on a double mobile home? They cost $200 last year. Also, the insurance company that carried our homeowner's insurance on the home, went bankrupt and we are out $500. Is this deductible if we don't recover it? — R.K.

Property taxes are deductible, but license fees are not. If part, or all, of the $200 you paid is based on the value of your mobile home, deduct that part.

If you can compute with reasonable accuracy, the loss caused by the insurance company's bankruptcy, report it in the earliest year such determination is possible as a short-term capital loss, and refer to it as a non-business bad debt.

DEAR MR. SMITH: I have a small amount of oil royalties each year and my question is: Does the IRS continue to allow the small property owner to take 22 per cent depletion on the federal income tax forms? — F.H.

Yes. But just to make certain you and I similarly interpret the word "small," under current federal tax law, the rate of percentage depletion on oil royalties depends on the size of your oil interest. If you are not in the petroleum business, and by purchase or gift after Dec. 31, 1974, have not acquired the interest in a proven field, and your royalty interests represent an average daily production of not more than 2,000 barrels of domestic crude oil, you may claim a deduction for percentage depletion on your 1975 federal income tax return of 22 per cent of the royalties received, but not to exceed 65 per cent of your taxable income from all sources, generally computed without regard to such depletion. If your interests represent a greater average daily production you are not entitled to a deduction for percentage depletion. Different rules pertain to gas royalties.

Do you have an income tax problem? Write to "Advice To The Taxlorn," P.O. Box 49081, Tucson, Ariz. 85717, with a self-addressed stamped envelope, for information that may help you. Your identity will not be disclosed.

makeup or evening gowns. Maybe that's why I suffer double when I do have to do something like the Willie Wyler tribute or the New York premier of 'Robin and Marian.' My knees were shaking, my hands were clammy, it was terrifying.

"I'm an introvert. You'd think after all these years I'd be accustomed to all the fuss, but it never gets any easier."

AS FOR THE FUTURE, she says, "You're going to think I'm so corny, but my wish is not to be lonely. And to have my garden. I grow everything — flowers, herbs, vegetables. I'm not a city person.

"That's the basic and only disagreement between Andrea and me. He's gregarious, and he loves the noise and hubbub of a city. I love the country, dogs, flowers and nature, and I'm very bored by cement and skyscrapers.

"Don't get me wrong. I've enjoyed the klieg lights, the soundstages, the camera and the hard work making films. But if you ask me what I want from life, it's not glamour or money.

"I don't know what I would've done in the movies during the past eight years, anyway. It's all sex and violence. I don't like guns, and I can't strip because I don't have the body for it. I'm too scrawny. So I don't know what the future holds. We've have to wait and see what happens to Rome. Will there be a new election or will there be a revolution? Will we move to Switzerland or to Timbucktoo? We're playing it by ear.

"But whatever happens, the most important thing is growing old gracefully. And you can't do that on the cover of a fan magazine."

Then she put her shoes back on those dainty feet, and was off to the airport, clutching and sniffing a bouquet of spring flowers. And for a brief moment, I knew what spring was like in the middle of March.

Audrey Hepburn's radiance and spirit are contagious fevers for which there are not known or desirable cures. If they ever discover an antidote, God help us and the movies.

Dear Mr. Corn:

How should we have bid these hands? Can you also give an alternate sequence?

Dealer

♠ K 9 7 2

♣ 10 6

Responder

♠ A 8

♣ A K J 9 7 6

Missed It,
Waterbury Ct.

Answer: There are several ways to reach six or seven diamonds depending upon system. The grand slam is not ironclad, but I think it has excellent chances and should be reached.

Here are two possible sequences:

Dealer	Responder
1♦	2♣
3♦	3♥
3NT	4♣
5♦ (solid suit)	7♦

Dealer	Responder

Dear Mr. Corn:

I am confused by the new laws of duplicate bridge regarding revokes. Can you please clarify?

Sticky Cards
Watertown, N.Y.

Answer: The new laws apply only to duplicate bridge and the revoke law has been changed as follows:

If the offending side wins the revoke trick and at least one other subsequent trick, the penalty is two tricks.

If only the revoke trick is won, the penalty is one trick.

If the revoke trick is not won, a one trick penalty is invoked if the offenders win a subsequent trick. If not, there is no penalty.

Dear Mr. Corn:

Whenever we have an irregularity, our games goes to pot. We have a book on laws, but unfortunately we also have a self styled "guardhouse lawyer". By the time the arguing is over, the hand is ancient history and it's time for dinner. Any suggestions?

Long Filibusters,
Erie, Penn.

Answer: Eliminate the debates. Appoint one player the director of the day to read the applicable law and apply it.

In this connection, Abraham Lincoln was once quoted as describing a lawyer, "He can compress the most words into the smallest ideas better than any man I ever met."

Dear Mr. Corn:

We stopped at five spades after this bidding. Was it our fault or should we charge it up to aggressive interference?

West

♠ A J 8 3
♥ 7 4 3 2
♦ K
♣ K Q J 10

East

♠ K 10 9 6 5
♥ ---
♦ A Q

West	North	East	South
1♣	Pass	1♠	2♥
2♠	4♥	5♥	Pass
5♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Made Six,
Hurst, Tex.

Answer: I cannot fault the bidding up to East's bid of five hearts. The five heart cue bid was a good effort to investigate a grand slam. However, over West's five spades, East should continue on and bid six clubs.

West would correct to spades and that would be it. East gets most of the blame since East is looking at first round control of three side suits and a good five card major that has been supported voluntarily.

However, West could well have bid six spades over five hearts since he had no wasted values.

THE FORMULA

Eliminate those creepy crawlies

By NORMAN STARK

The breathtaking beauty of many moths and butterflies results from white, black, red and yellow pigments in the scales found on the wings. But don't be lulled into false security by all this beauty. When they lay eggs, all h— breaks loose. From the eggs larvae, such as caterpillars, hatch with a full-blown appetite for tender green things such as tiny new leaves on trees and shrubs. So if you're looking forward to shade from big leaves in the summer, it's wise to protect the little ones in the spring. This can be easily and inexpensively done by painting caterpillar tree bands around the trunks. You can make them yourself. Here's how you do it.

You'll need one and one-half cups (12 ounces) of POWDERED ROSIN (you can get this from an athletic supply store), one cup (eight ounces) of LINSEED OIL, and one tablespoon of ordinary PARAFFIN CANNING WAX. Put all three ingredients together in the top of a double boiler, heat and stir until melted and mixed. When cooled, transfer to a metal, plastic or glass container. To use, paint a band about three inches wide around the trunk of the tree to be protected.

RAY JOHNSON
Chicken and dumplings every Sunday

YOU KNOW what happiness is?

Happiness is a slice of tender round of roast beef at Arnold's Family Restaurant, 3925 Atlantic Ave. That's the best roast beef, medium-rare or well-done, just the way you like it.

Happiness is also the stewed chicken and dumplings featured every Sunday and Wednesday at Arnold's. That's home-style cooking with a delicious white sauce, the kind grandma used to make back on the farm. Also featured on Sundays is prime rib au jus, $4.25 on the big dinner.

Happiness is also these entrees at Arnold's: roast premium turkey with cranberry sauce, sugar-cured baked ham, Swiss steak with rich brown gravy and splendid seafood choices. From time to time there are also such entrees as sirloin tips in gravy with cornfritters, beef Cantonese with rice, fried chicken, stuffed bell pepper, liver with onions, old-fashioned beef stew, grilled Salisbury steak, roast lamb with dressing, braised shortribs of beef, sauteed chicken livers, baked meatloaf or roast pork with apple sauce.

Arnold's is one of the most beautiful cafeterias in Long Beach, luxuriously furnished, but with prices that are non-luxurious. The majority of complete dinners are less than $3. It is owned by Ray Johnson who grew up in the towns of Windy Summit and Essex, Iowa. He is a former schoolteacher and athletic coach. His approach to dining out is simple: He believes in quality food and quality service at all times and gives the credit for his success to his staff and general manager, Tim McMillan.

Ray also owns the large Queen Cafeteria, 101 Alamitos Ave. It has the same quality food and quality service as Arnold's, practically the same menu and the same sensible family prices. Tim is overall supervisor for both restaurants.

One of the nice things about dining at Arnold's or the Queen is the fact that the guest chooses exactly what he wishes. He or she is never served anything simply because "it's included." The dinners include three salads per person from a glassed display of many varieties. The guest chooses exactly which salads he wants. He also chooses two hot vegetables and is given a choice of bread or rolls or muffins and also a choice of beverage.

The Queen and Arnold's are closed Mondays but open the rest of the week from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. The daily luncheons go from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. and offer a variety of specials as well as fresh hot sandwiches and such combinations as the four-salad plate or the soup-sandwich combo. The Queen resembles a garden because it is decorated with so many live plants. It has a banquet room seating up to 75. Arnold's Family Restaurant has parking under a roof, a convenience on rainy or superhot days.

CARE TO KNOW how to keep your life serene?

Don't argue with a lobster devotee.

Don't argue with a crab devotee.

Don't argue with a halibut devotee or an abalone devotee.

You can't win an argument with any of those people. Each believes that his particular variety of seafood is better than all the rest.

So I shall state very quietly, without setting off a controversy (I hope), that I think swordfish steak leads all the rest. I'm talking about the best swordfish steak, the kind that's served at Cigo's, the famous seafood speciality house in San Pedro on Ninth Street at Pacific Avenue. It's owned by a connoisseur of ocean delicacies, Emmett Parsons, who has the knowledge, friendliness and other qualities needed to make a restaurant outstanding — and to keep it that way.

Emmett is a graduate of Banning High School, Wilmington. He has lived in the harbor and Long Beach areas since 1927. He's been a Southern Californian so long that he knows people will drive any distance to find a restaurant that features the finest seafoods. From the 1920s through the mid-1960s, swordfish steak was consistently among the most popular restaurant entrees. Then it went into decline for quite a few years because the best kind was no longer available.

In the past year or so, Cigo's has again been able to serve the finest swordfish steak — the firm, rich kind that was so popular decades ago. That swordfish comes from waters far away, free of the contamination worries that troubled swordfish suppliers. Emmett serves his steak for $4.50 on his huge dinner. That dinner is so large that many people skip their lunch so they can enjoy all the courses without restraint. Included are antipasto of salami, cheese and marinated garbanzoes; delectable creamy-style Boston clam chowder AND salad; baked potato with plenty of melted butter or mostaccioli pasta or French fries or rice; hot cheesebread, coffee or tea.

Cigo's serves Sundays from 4 to 10 p.m. The luncheons are Mondays through Saturdays, 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., offering a variety of seafoods, chowder, fancy ocean salads and rich beef dishes, including hot sandwiches. The facilities include a banquet room and cocktail lounge. On Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays there is rollicking entertainment by strolling accordionist Jack Valdez. On Sundays he entertains early in the evening.

P.S. — Cigo's also delights devotees of lobster, crab, halibut or abalone, because it offers premium quality of each plus such beauties as red snapper or white sea bass (both are $3.95 on the dinner). Also served are steaks, prime rib au jus, sand dabs, shrimp, broiled squid, scallops and steamed clams.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Good judge of compote

It's apparent from the photograph he hasn't overlooked any of the ingredients for his recipe. You can rest assured the same thoroughness applies to his profession, as well.

Today's chef of the week, Judge Charles S. Litwin, Jan. 16 was appointed to the Superior Court, Los Angeles County, sitting in Long Beach. Prior to the new appointment, he was a municipal court judge, serving as presiding judge in 1969. He again was elected presiding judge for 1976, before being advanced to Superior Court.

The name "Brown" has a real meaning for Judge Litwin. In 1966, former Gov. Pat Brown appointed him to the Long Beach Municipal Court; and just 10 years later, he was appointed to the Superior Court by Gov. Jerry Brown.

Litwin started out in Buffalo, N.Y., and lived in Detroit, Mich., before arriving in Los Angeles in 1931.

He was graduated from Los Angeles High School in 1932, and enrolled in Southwestern University Law School, graduating J.D. (cum laude) in 1938, the same year he was admitted to the Bar. He also took his undergraduate work at Southwestern.

LITWIN STARTED law practice in Los Angeles that same year, before coming to Long Beach in 1941. His law practice continued into 1966, except for a period in the U.S. Navy during World War II. He is a member of the law firms of Shibley, Wanzer & Litwin, and the firm of Wisot & Litwin.

A past president of the Long Beach Jewish Community Federation, Litwin serves on the board of directors of the National Conference of Christians and Jews. He has served on the board of governors for Long Beach Bar Association and Long Beach Jewish Family Service.

Litwin has received the Brotherhood Award, National Conference of Christians and Jews, and the Human Relations Award from the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

Litwin's wife, Helen, is a marriage counselor with the Conciliation Department of the Los Angeles County Superior Court.

JUDGE CHARLES S. LITWIN

She says, "When he is not presiding, he'd give up anything for a game of tennis. And while he enjoys gourmet foods, his favorite dish is plain ordinary chicken noodle soup, which I prepare."

His recipe today is for Fruit Compote.

FRUIT COMPOTE

1 12-ounce package pitted prunes
1 8-ounce package dried apricots
1 small can mandarin orange slices
1 small can pineapple chunks
1 can cherry pie filling
½ can pineapple juice
½ cup dry red wine

Cook prunes and apricots together in water for 5 minutes.

Drain mandarin oranges and add to the casserole and arrange in a pleasant design.

Drain pineapple chunks and arrange in casserole.

Add cherry pie filling over entire casserole.

Mix pineapple juice and wine and pour over casserole.

Place in oven and bake at 350 degrees for 50 minutes.

DEAR ABBY

Plea falls on deaf ears

DEAR ABBY: I am amazed at your chauvinistic put-down of women who accept attentions from married men. You fail to mention the men who pester married women, often without any encouragement.

And what about the wife who treats her husband like a second-class citizen and refuses sex, but is hurt and martyred when he finds another women with whom to share love and companionship?

Many unhappy marriages have been saved by the "other women," who provides a much-needed oasis for the unhappily married man and sends him back to his wife refreshed and renewed.

It's time wives assumed some of the responsibility for the reason their husbands stray. It's also time that we face the horrible truth that wives also stray with "cruel, inconsiderate, stupid and short-sighted" MALES. — FOR EQUALITY

DEAR FOR EQUALITY: If a marriage must be "saved" by the "other woman" (or the "other man") who provides a "much-needed oasis" and sends the lover home "refreshed and renewed," I think all concerned should take a good, hard look at the marriage. Such marriages are for masochists.

DEAR ABBY: I am in a terrible quandary. We are having a formal affair for my son's bar mitzvah. My brother and his wife recently separated and are living apart. I don't know whether they will eventually patch up their differences or go through with the divorce.

Should I invite my sister-in-law? We always got along well, and I am very fond of her. Should I send her and my brother separate invitations at their respective addresses? And how about her parents? I like them, too. — IN A QUANDARY

DEAR IN: Send a separate invitation to your sister-in-law and also one to her parents, and let them decide whether or not to accept.

DEAR ABBY: A waitress signed WANTS TO PLEASE wrote a long list of complaints against customers. The one that irritated me the most was, "Please do not summon the waitress by snapping your fingers, whistling or hollering 'Hey, Girlie!'"

Now I have a question. I eat in restaurants often, and I have a terrible time getting the attention of my waitress.

What is the correct procedure? I have tried the following: Signaling silently to any waitress whose eye I catch, hoping she will fill my water glass or coffee cup, or bring me my check. She gives me a stony look and says, "This isn't my station!"

Then I ask, "Will you please tell the waitress whose station this IS that I would like some attention?"

She doesn't say yes, no or go jump in the lake. She just walks away.

I have waited so long for my waitress that I have actually gotten up from my chair and have gone looking for her!

If you have any suggestions for getting a waitress' attention when she is busy making eyes at the bartender or in the kitchen gabbing with the help back there, please let me have it. I have even become so disgusted that I have started for the door. THEN someone runs after me with my check. Perhaps that is the way to get attention. — DISGUSTED IN CHICAGO

DEAR DISGUSTED: Perhaps! (P.S. Meanwhile, easy, man. You sound like a candidate for a coronary.)

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, Los Angeles, Ca. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

FASCINATING FABRICS

New crochet excitement

What does Viola Sylbert, sophisticated New Yorker and winner of a Coty award for fashion design, have in common with the history of a French noblewoman, who fled to England following the French revolution?

The answer is advancement of the art of crochet, the creation of patterns, and production of instruction books.

Mlle. Eleanore de la Branchardiere taught crochet to the British Royal family, wrote 100 books on the subject and a monthly journal, The Needle, from 1852 to 1854. Ms. Sylbert has brought her modern talents to Columbia-Minerva, one of this country's oldest suppliers of yarn, needles and instruction books. She provides a fresh look in styling.

It's hard to realize that fine crochet was little known until it was popularized by Mlle. Eleanore. True, centuries before there was a chain stitch called the "shepherd's stitch," created with a hard-carved hook and wool to make hats and shawls. Many, many years later, this chain stitch embellished fabric; a form of embroidery done with a hooked needle.

Then, in the confines of convents, nuns carried the evolution one step further by using the chain stitch and hooked needle to make lacy needlework without a fabric base. It was not lace. The French called it "crochet en air"; crochet being French for hooked needle and the effect is certainly one of stitches in the air.

IN TALKING with Viola Sylbert recently, she explained that her modern mission is bringing excitement back to crochet and knitting patterns. Judging from the lively conversation around a display of Sylbert designs, that feat has been accomplished.

Ms. Sylbert, whose fashion design background includes furs, sweaters, raincoats and sportswear, has taken color and styling concepts from contemporary ready-to-wear and home furnishings and interpreted them into hand-knitting and crocheting. She said: "That's why it looks different from a lot of other knit and crochet designs."

Part of the "difference" is in the blend of different types of yarn in one item and the melding of off-beat colors that provide a great total look. There is also a sparkling combination of techniques. For example, a crocheted filet base was interwoven with four strands of colored yarn through each row of spaces for a startling effect. The fillip of interest in a rich-looking pillow top is a double strand of yarn wrapped around loose strands to create bow knots.

A series of shawls is romantic enough to have pleased the 19th century crochet artist, Mlle. Eleanore; yet meet 20th century fashion precepts. Tanktops, cardigans, camisoles, halters and pullovers could have been designed only for a modern miss and exemplify Ms. Sylbert's unique approach.

MS. SYLBERT has traveled extensively in Europe, keeping abreast of fashion developments. In Italy, France and the Scandinavian countries there is a longer history of technical skill, which has developed as a result of tradition and through apprenticeship. But, in this country, crochet and hand-knitting styling are becoming more innovative.

Del Pett Felman, who has developed crochet into dimensional art-forms, puts her finger on a very basic point for all women in her book, The Crocheter's Art: "The techniques of crochet are accessible to anyone and are endlessly applicable. Crochet is the manipulation of fiber with a hook. This is true, whether the result is a simple garment or a highly imaginative art form, or something in between. Emphasis on embellishment and simplicity of form are the two basic elements used to achieve different effects."

DESIGNER PATTERN

Draping hides under big bow

A lovely "moves-with-you" fluidity is seamed right into this bias design by master of shapery, Charles Kleibacker. Amazingly, there are only three main pattern parts — no sewing complications to Printed Pattern M303. There are no side seams — the fabric is swept gracefully to the back and gathered beneath the soft bow detail. See how the deep V-yoke extends to form tiny cap sleeves. Notice also, the square shape of the neckline in back. Sew it long or short for spring dinners and vacation dances in drapeable knits, crepe or shantung.

Printed Pattern M303 is available in misses' sizes 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18. Size 12 (bust 34) requires 3 yards 60-inch fabric.

Please send $1.25 for Printed Pattern M303 to Independent Press Telegram, Pattern Department, P. O. Box 59, Old Chelsea Station, New York, N.Y. 10011. (Add 35 cents for each pattern for first-class mail and special handling.) Print plainly YOUR NAME, ADDRESS with ZIP, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Slow pace of Denmark attractive

Fun-loving Denmark, so popular with tourists of all ages, extends a special welcome to senior citizens visiting Wonderful Copenhagen and the rest of the Fairytale Country.

It is no secret that too many Americans visiting Europe insist on seeing too many countries in too short a period of time. A better way is to concentrate on fewer countries and spend more time in each. You will get to know them all better and have more fun yourself.

The easy way is the right way to enjoy Denmark. Don't rush. Don't plan for more than one sightseeing tour a day. You can take a tour before lunch, and in the afternoon, sit at a sidewalk cafe and watch an exciting panorama of mothers and children on bicycles, red-coated mailmen and handsome Danish boys and girls as they saunter by.

IN TIVOLI GARDENS, you can stroll at leisure or sit on a bench while you watch pantomimes, ballets, concerts, variety acts and the beautiful garden scenery. Here is gaiety and excitement at a pace you can enjoy and the Danes want you to enjoy it as they do.

Scandinavian
travel
Special

Seniors will find the whole pace of travel in Denmark a welcome change. For example, shopping for renowned Danish silver, china, furniture, textiles and furs is less rigorous.

You can get a comfortable shopper's eye-view of all the best in arts and crafts at Den Permanente and you can explore Copenhagen's main shopping street, Stroget, without being interrupted by vehicular traffic. No place on earth offers more possibilities for finding wonderful gifts for children and grandchildren than Copenhagen and at all price levels.

Copenhagen has become a very popular place for parking grandchildren while taking the long-wanted trip through Europe Grandpa and Grandma can come with children and grandchildren without the fear of being relegated to babysitting for the little ones. Plenty of competent, English-speaking babysitters are available.

SENIOR CITIZENS ENJOY PEACEFUL OLD TOWNS OF DENMARK

Good food is essential for true travel pleasure, whether you are on a diet or not. Denmark is one of the top food countries of the world with delightful restaurants from super de luxe to sandwich places and pastry shops where the delicacies make you hear the angels sing.

IF YOU LIKE to drive through a peaceful and beautiful countryside, Denmark is the place for you. The roads are excellent, the distances are short, and the scenery so picturesque and gentle that you never get tired from driving through the land that inspired Hans Christian Andersen to write his famous fairytales.

Denmark's excellent railways offer special reduced rates for senior citizens which give a great opportunity to see more of Denmark's lively provincial towns and lovely countryside.

Senior citizens feel at home in Denmark, a country that appeals to anyone who is young in spirit — young at heart.

DOWNTOWN Helsinki presents a busy scene of neat streets for trolley tour making loop in less than an hour. Tourist information is provided in four languages by tape recordings on board trolleys from May to September.

Finn summer brings early morning after

By STUART D. BYKOFSKY
Ridder News Service

HELSINKI — Finland counts 44 wars with Russia within memory. The Finns lost every one.

You might conclude Finland is easily defeated. Through Finnish eyes, history's misery proves instead Finland is not easily discouraged. Discouraging a Finn is like trying to burn down an igloo.

Finns have a word for their disposition — sisu, meaning an indomitable spirit; true grit.

Squeezed between Sweden to the west and Russia to the east, Finland's area is equal to Japan's, but its population — 4.6 million — is less than half of Tokyo's.

Since one-third of the nation lies within the frozen wasteland of the Arctic Circle, Finns bunch like birch trees in the south of the country.

UNLIKE THEIR Nordic neighbors of Sweden, Denmark and Norway, Finns are not descended from Vikings. Their language has its roots in Finnougrian and is as distinctive as their delicacy of reindeer meat.

Some 560,000 people live in Helsinki, a capital of straight lines and clean angles bowing to the functionalism of Finnish design. The city is surrounded on three sides by the gulf of Finland, beyond which lies the Baltic.

Helsinki is not the most beautiful city in Europe, but it has a sense of scale. The city pulls together neatly, its lines free of skyscraping blisters. A $3 cab ride will get you anywhere in the downtown area, although it is more fun to walk.

There are few monuments or landmarks except for the downtown Senate Square — which is quite an exception. Built between 1852-55, the square is two-block plaza rimmed by yellowfaced government buildings and an impressive Lutheran Cathedral.

THE CHEAPEST sightseeing tour you can take costs 1 Finnmark, 20 pennis (less than 50 cents). It's a trolley that makes a large and complex loop of the downtown district in less than an hour.

There is a recorded "guide" that mentions points of interest along the way in four language, including English, from May 1 through Sept. 15.

Just a few blocks east of the trolley stop at Finlandia Hall there's the Trivallahti church, a breathtaking building literally sculpted out of rock in 1969 as if by God's hand. The sanctuary is slightly below ground level and is surrounded by rough rock walls 20 feet high. The ceiling is an enormous dome of copper, which is abundant in Finland.

Don't expect to find a single room in a first-class hotel for less than $20 a night. A better room will run $30, no meals included.

The budget traveler coming during the summer can get a good break by staying in university dorms vacated by Finnish students. (For more information about hotel and budget accommodations, write Harry Jarvinen & Associates, 500 Fifth Ave., New York City 10017.)

Meals are not cheap either. At the local equivalent of a snack shop, a small pizza of four slices costs about $4. Dinner prices are steeper still.

Perhaps if you're lucky you can win back some of what you spend on meals at the roulette wheels you find in some restaurants and night clubs.

NIGHT CLUBS are a must. They, too, are expensive. One of the best, the Aquarius in the Hesperia Hotel, charges a $5 cover, but once inside it's nonstop action — music, lights and companionship — until 2 a.m. As a matter of fact, Helsinki seems to have more swinging night spots than either Stockholm or Copenhagen.

There is something eerie about leaving a night club at 2 a.m. and getting back to your hotel in time to see light streaking the horizon. At the peak of summer, night lasts only five hours in Finland.

The temperature poked into the 70s when I was there in May — a heat wave for the Finns. Normally in the peak tourist months of June through September, temperatures range from the high 50s to the low 70s.

Only one thing remains — the Finns' beloved institution of the sauna. It's fun, it's healthy, but use it at your own risk.

If you spend enough time in its suffocating heat, you might have an attendant stroll in, see you slippery with sweat and joke:

"Ah, the sauna! When you're finished, you're Finnish!"

Danish dishes take cake in Copenhagen

Copenhagen

Rainy days and a chill hint of winter. Copenhagen had an unusually long summer last year.

They left the famous Tivoli Gardens open past mid-September closing date. When we left they closed the gates. They won't open again until May 1.

Smorgasbord is what you come to Scandinavia for. In Denmark it's called Smorrebrod. There's more to it than being caught in a deli with a fork. The choice is staggering. Little pink shrimp. Lobsers. Crabs. Mussels. Caviar. Eels. Herring. Sardines.

All kinds of roast meats. Eggs deviled or curried. Horseradish and mustard in graduating strengths. Every kind of cheese. Fruit, Pastries and on and on.

You begin with fish. Danes are insistent about this. You get the idea you could be fined if you took anything else for openers.

VERY IMPORTANT that you discard the fish dish and take a new one for followups. You take a fresh dish for each course. They can tell how you're doing by counting the dish stacks.

No doggie bags.

Danes think the best smorrebrod is served in the Central Railroad Station in Copenhagen. Crystal and silver gleaming on crisp white linen. Fresh flowers. Crusty antique waiters.

They tell you that 200 million people have gone through Tivoli Gardens' fairyland since it opened in 1843. It's a street fair feeling.

stan delaplane

Beer halls full of song and raised steins. Sidewalk cafes. Dance halls. Jugglers. Clowns.

Swans glide on the lake. Dance band music floats across the water. Fine restaurants blazing with great chandeliers. A wonderful old carousel spins slowly to the music of an antique calliope.

It's a music box world.

THIS WAS a press weekend and the Danes pushed everything they could into three days and nights.

The Scandinavian airline SAS has worked out an all-included week in Denmark that is reasonable. Around $400 to $600.

But if you get off the package and go on your own, prices are stiff. The young group who adored wonderful, wonderful Copenhage, is being priced out.

Linkers show Nordic films

World travelers Hal and Halla Linker of the television series "Three Passports to Adventure" will present a film on Halla's native Iceland at the Travel Festival sponsored by Freeman Travel Service in South Gate Municipal Auditorium, Saturday, April 10.

In traditional costume, Halla will introduce the Iceland film, to be followed by another Linker production covering the other Viking countries of Denmark, Sweden and Norway.

The festival will be held in three segments, beginning with a travel fair from 2 to 5 p.m. featuring exhibits by airline, cruise and tour companies, followed by a spaghetti buffet dinner until 7 p.m. when the Linkers will headline a program of films, music and dancing by a Maori group from New Zealand.

Reservations at $3 each are required for the buffet supper and must be ordered by April 1. Tickets will be available at $2 each for the evening performance only, or $4 for the combination dinner and show.

Reservation forms and further information may be obtained by writing Freeman Travel Service, 8959 California Ave., P.O. Box 1906, South Gate, 90280.

Norway fjord tours

De luxe motorcoach tours of the Norwegian fjord country give passengers a picture of Norway 1,000 years ago. Modern villages now dot the fjord district, but the mountains and glaciers have changed little since the Viking days.

GOURMET menus provide food for thought on Royal Viking Sea.

SAIL THE VIKING WAY

To Canada and Alaska

By HERB SHANNON
I.P-T Travel Editor

Scandinavian smorgasbord will be one specialty among many on the menus of 2,400 meals served daily aboard the Royal Viking Sea on its 14-day Alaska-Canada cruise co-sponsored by Long Beach area travel agents and the Independent Press-Telegram.

Although the Norwegian-flag vessel will carry a maximum of only 500 passengers when it departs Los Angeles harbor on June 14, dining will be an around-the-clock adventure in international and American fare. From breakfast to midnight buffet the choice is virtually limitless.

On this journey to the unspoiled Pacific Northwest, IP-T readers will raise hearty appetites cruising the placid waters of Canada's Inside Passage and the spectacular beauty of Alaska's Glacier Bay. Extra meals can be squeezed in ashore during port stops at Victoria, Juneau, Skagway, Sitka, Prince Rupert Island, Vancouver and San Francisco before returning to Los Angeles June 28.

TWO LUCKY readers will win first class free passage aboard the Royal Viking Sea by claiming the Sweepstake Prize in the IP-T Grand Prix Race Game Contest. Winners will be named in mid-April, following 13 weekly drawings for a total of $7,800 in additional cash prizes.

Entry forms and details of the contest for 12 weekly $50 cash awards and the grand prize drawing will be found elsewhere in this edition.

Cost of the two-week IP-T cruise starts at $1,330 per person for an outside double stateroom. Full details and reservations may be obtained from any of the following participating travel agents:

In Long Beach: Brown's Travel, Aquarius Travel, Atlas Travel, Bixby Knolls Travel, Thomas Cook, Fenwick Travel, Martha Ford Travel, International City Travel, ITT Tours & Travel, Jack Kirkwood Travel, Los Altos Travel Service, Pierre Mason Travel, Nance Tours and Travel, Mr. Travel and Heller Travel.

Other area agencies include Bellflower Travel Service, Acme Travel, Dykema Travel, Holiday Travel Service, Alpha Beta Travel, World of Leisure Travel, Stevenson Travel Service, Cerritos Travel and Los Alamitos Travel.

Swedish American to operate Explorer ship

Lars-Eric Lindblad and Swedish American Line have signed a new five-year contract for continued operation of the go-anywhere cruise ship M.S. Lindblad Explorer.

The former owners of the world cruisers Kungsholm and Gripsholm have been operators of the 92-passenger exploration cruise ship since 1972. Capt. Hasse Nilsson will remain in command as Senior Captain. The Lindblad Explorer has a 1976 schedule of 20 cruises.

Included this year are voyages to the Antarctic, Alaska and the Galapagos Islands. The ship already has made two trips to the Galapagos this season.

Scandinavian scene wealthy in culture

Besides a wealth of artistic treasures housed in conventional museum settings, besides programs of opera, ballet and symphony concerts performed in traditional halls, Scandinavia offers numerous opportunities for visitors to experience a truly intimate view of its cultural scene.

How often does one have a chance to hear the works of a great composer played on the piano on which they were composed, attend a performance of a Shakespearean tragedy on the very site on which it was laid, or listen to ageless fairytales read at the author's desk where they were first penned?

In Denmark, Finland, Norway and Sweden, with a little advance planning, you can be invited to these and other happenings which add a "you are there" quality to cultural experiences.

A few miles ride out of Bergen, Norway, for example, will bring you to Trollhaugen, the charming white and green frame house of composer Edvard Grieg. Beautifully situated on a knoll at the edge of Lake Nordas, the home is now a museum of furnishings and personal effects of Grief and his wife Nina, both of whom are buried on the grounds.

TROLLHAUGEN'S special treat during the summer months is the weekly schedule of piano concerts of Grieg's music played on the master's own piano. At other times of the year it's possible to arrange through Scandinavian Airlines for small groups to enjoy the same type of Grieg concert at the attractive old homestead.

In Denmark the fairytale village of Odense, home of famous storyteller Hans Christian Andersen, has paid tribute to its native son by carefully preserving the house where he was born and the humble cottage where he spent his childhood.

Andersen's desk, his manuscripts, notebooks and other possessions are displayed in the adjoining Hans Christian Andersen museum.

For a really dramatic Danish evening think about asking SAS to have a special performance of Shakespear's "Hamlet" staged for you and your friends at Kronborg Castle in Elsinore, just 25 miles from Copenhagen.

NEVER MIND that Kronborg was built some 600 years after the historical Hamlet lived; the Renaissance castle with its magnificent towers, porticoes and ramparts is indeed the one in which Shakespeare placed his Hamlet and is an impressive setting for a performance of the immortal drama.

The home of Finland's noted composer Jean Sibelius is another Scandinavian setting where visitors can immerse themselves in the romantic past. "Ainola," the homestead where Sibelius lived and worked during his adult years, is located less than 25 miles from Helsinki in peaceful, birch-forested countryside.

Furnished with the same personal belongings as when Sibelius lived there in the early 1900s with his wife Aino and their three daughters, the home provided a serene background for renditions of Sibelius compositions on the piano at which he composed.

For years summer visitors to Sweden have enjoyed performances of the Royal Opera and Ballet at intimate Drottningholm Court Theater located in Stockholm's archipelago. Built in 1766 as an annex to the Swedish Royal Summer Palace, the theater was the center of theatrical and musical life in Sweden during the late 18th century under Gustaf III, whose death marked the end of its most splendorous era.

REALTOR OF THE WEEK

BILL WATILO

Bill Watilo is a product of Long Beach Schools having been born in the area. He has his BA (1958) and MA (1959) from Cal State University at Long Beach, with graduate work at Occidental College and Univ. of So. Calif. Bill was a professional musician from 1949-52, playing with the Portland, Oregon and Utah Symphonies and he spent many years with the Long Beach Symphony. He taught public school music for 12 years in Bellflower, Long Beach, South Bay, and La Canada; in Long Beach he taught at Hamilton, Washington and Poly.

Bill entered into full time real estate in April, 1972 with J. J. Hunter Associates concentrating in residential sales and specifically in the Plaza area. He acquired his broker's license in April '74 and opened the doors of Watilo Real Estate in November, 1974.

The S.W. corner of Palo Verde & Willow has been purchased for the future construction of a one-man office. This location is the exact center of an area he services with newsletters and other materials (copies of which are now on file in the Consumer's corner of the El Dorado Library). Watilo Real Estate is at present in a temporary office at 3118 Los Coyotes Diagonal.

Bill's wife, Myrtle teaches 1st grade in the Long Beach District. His sons, Eric and Kirk attend City College and daughter, Elaine, attends Millikan High School.

Bill is a member of the local, state and national Realtor Associations. He serves on the Planning & Zoning committee and Education committee of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors.

IP-T GRAND PRIX RACE GAME RULES — READ CAREFULLY

SAVE THESE RULES FOR HANDY REFERENCE THROUGHOUT THE CONTEST

1. The contest will consist of 13 weekly games beginning Sunday, January 4, 1976. Participants will be required to determine the finishing order of ten race cars. Official entry blanks will be published on successive Sundays for each week's contest.

Each Sunday, contestants will be given the names and numbers of 30 race cars, plus an entry form. Then, on Monday thru Friday, puzzles will appear in these newspapers which, when solved, will show which cars finished in the first thru tenth place.

TO SOLVE THE PUZZLES: Each day, Monday thru Friday, two puzzles will indicate the finishing place of two race cars, the number of letters in the cars' names, plus the correct positioning of at least one letter in each name (e.g. — — — T —). From the list of 30 cars, entrants must then properly determine the car's name that fits that particular blank. On any given day, more than one car name may fit a puzzle, but when all ten puzzles for the week are completed, there will be only one proper solution. It may be necessary at times to have the entire set of ten puzzles before the winning solution is apparent. No car's name will be used more than once in each set of weekly puzzles.

When all ten puzzles are completed, only one solution will give you the correct finishing order of the ten cars. Entrants will then place the correct car number on the cars shown on the entry form, to indicate which car finished first, second, and so on through 10th place.

2. HOW TO ENTER: Mail your completed race entry form, neatly trimmed, to:

Independent Press-Telegram
Grand Prix Race Game
P.O. Box 420
Long Beach, CA 90801

or hand deliver your entry form, enclosed in an envelope, to the Independent Press-Telegram main offices at 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach.

IMPORTANT: Across the end of the envelope, you MUST indicate the race number you are entering as shown in the sample to the right.

Each race course entry form will show the weekly contest deadline. All entries must be in the possession of the Independent Press-Telegram on or before that date. The Independent Press-Telegram cannot be held responsible for entries delayed or lost in the mails.

Individual contestants are limited to one entry per week. Only one entry may be enclosed in an envelope.

Do not mail in the Monday thru Friday puzzles. Only mail the Sunday race entry form.

It is not necessary to subscribe to or buy the Independent Press-Telegram to enter. Contestants may make hand-drawn copies of the official race entry form to enter. These must be legible and of the same size and style as those appearing in the newspapers. Entry forms reproduced by any mechanical or photographic means will not be accepted.

3. PRIZES: Weekly Cash Awards: The Independent Press-Telegram will award twelve cash prizes of $50.00 each week. The twelve weekly cash winners will be drawn at random from the total number of correct entries received for that week's contest.

Grand Prize: The Grand Prize winner will receive a Royal Viking 14-day Alaska/Canada cruise for two aboard the Royal Viking Sea, commencing June 14, 1976. The Grand Prize drawing will be held the week following the close of the weekly contests.

All weekly winners become eligible for the Grand Prize Drawing. In addition to all weekly winners, an additional 200 correct entries will be drawn from each week's contest to be included in the Grand Prize Drawing. No notification will be made of those drawn.

No substitute prizes will be awarded. Applicable federal, state, and other taxes imposed on any prize will be the sole responsibility of the prize winner.

All prize winners will be contacted by mail. When weekly cash winners' names are published in these newspapers, they will appear on the Wednesday following each contest deadline.

4. TRY THIS SAMPLE PUZZLE OF THE IP-T GRAND PRIX RACE GAME

From the list of car names, determine which name fits each blank. While more than one name may appear to fit some blanks, when completed there is only one possible solution. Each name can only be used once. Not all car names will be used.

34 EAGLE
95 TIGER
23 DOVE
14 RAVEN
77 BOLD

_ A _ _ _ 1st place
_ O _ _ 2nd place
_ _ V _ _ 3rd place
_ _ _ D 4th place

Once you've determined which car finished in which place, all you must do is transfer that car's number to the entry form from the previous Sunday. The correct answers for this sample would be: 1st, Car # 34; 2nd place, Car # 23; 3rd place, Car # 14; 4th place, Car # 77.

Since, EAGLE, car # 34, was first place finisher, place a 34 in the white space of the first place car.

HOW TO ADDRESS YOUR ENTRY

Your entry must be in the possession of the Independent Press-Telegram no later than the deadline shown on the entry form. It must be enclosed in an envelope addressed as the example below. YOU MUST INDICATE WHICH RACE # YOU ARE ENTERING ON THE OUTSIDE OF THE ENVELOPE.

TELEVISION LOG OF THE INDEPENDENT-PRESS-TELEGRAM AND THE EVENING NEWS

Role of Manson girl challenge to actress

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

NANCY WOLFE

Nancy Wolfe, a dark-haired young actress, majored in psychology at New York University, but she doesn't claim to understand the character she portrays in the upcoming TV movie "Helter Skelter."

She plays Susan Atkins, who was convicted with Charles Manson and other members of his "family" in the murders of seven persons on two successive nights in August 1969.

Nancy could study psychology for 50 more years and she still might not fully understand what makes such killers tick.

"I don't think anyone really understands such people," she told me at lunch the other day at the Scandia in Hollywood.

"Susan was amoral. And she got sensual pleasure from the act of killing — she said this, herself. But I couldn't explain how she got that way."

CBS will televise the four-hour movie in two parts, on the nights of Thursday, April 1, and Friday, April 2. For a while, there loomed the possibility that KNXT (Channel 2), the CBS station in Los Angeles, wouldn't carry the film, but the latest word is that it will.

The movie is based on the best-selling book "Helter Skelter: The True Story of the Manson Murders," by Vincent Bugliosi and Curt Gentry. Bugliosi was special prosecutor in the 1970 trial of the Sharon Tate-La Bianca murderers, and it's because he is now running for district attorney of Los Angeles County that a blackout of the film in this area was considered.

Bugliosi is portrayed by George Di Cenzo, and Manson is played by Steve Railsback.

Miss Wolfe's part as Susan Atkins is the biggest role she has ever had, but she told me she was reluctant at first to take it.

"Yes, I was afraid of possible reprisal from the Manson kooks," she said. "There's no telling what they might do."

Threats were received by several persons involved in the Lorimar Productions movie.

It was because she so admired the work of producer-director Tom Gries ("QB VII," "The Migrants," "The Glass House") that she finally decided to take the part, after more than a week of deliberating. One reading for the role was enough to convince Gries and casting director Bert Remsen that she was the one to play Susan Atkins.

Does Miss Atkins come across in the film as at all likable?

Replied Nancy: "I don't think the viewers will have much sympathy for her."

One of her most important scenes, she pointed out, is when Susan tells a jail cellmate about the Tate-La Bianca murders.

"The case might never have been solved if she hadn't talked about it," Nancy said. "She was in jail on another matter."

In the scene at the Hollywood Hills home of actress Sharon Tate, where Sharon and four others were killed, "I am shown chasing a man named Frykowski with a knife in my hand, but I'm not shown stabbing him," the actress told me.

"Susan is supposed to have been the one who cut up Sharon Tate, too, but it doesn't show that."

A second version of the movie was made for showing in theaters in Europe — a version with obscene language, some nudity and gore, according to reports. However, Miss Wolfe said she didn't participate in any scenes of violence or nudity.

"I didn't even have to shave my head, although some of the girls did," she said. "I just wore a skullcap."

What will the role in "Helter Skelter" mean to her career?

"I don't have the slightest idea," replied Nancy.

At 24, her only TV exposure to date has come in small parts in two dramas — "Journey From Darkness," which aired as a two-hour NBC movie in February 1975, and "Eric," a Hallmark Hall of Fame drama which was telecast on NBC last November.

In the former, she played the sister of a blind student (portrayed by Marc Singer) who is admitted to medical school, and in "Eric," which starred John Savage as a young man terminally ill with cancer, she played a nurse.

"I also have done a small part in a 'Baretta' episode that hasn't aired yet," Nancy said.

The slender brunette, who is single and lives in Hollywood, grew up in New York City. Her father is a doctor and her mother used to be a professional ballet dancer. Nancy learned ballet as a youngster and has given dance concerts.

After graduating from a private high school in the Bronx (her family lived in the woodsy area of Fieldston in the Riverdale section of the Bronx), Nancy entered Mills College, in Oakland, at 16, and studied there for two years before transferring to NYU, where she earned a degree in psychology.

She was active in drama at college and she studied with the noted Sandy Meisner at the Neighborhood Playhouse in New York for a couple of years.

Her father, for the past three years, has been working for the Jamaican government as a general practitioner, traveling around the country to serve the people's health needs. "I go down there once in a while and work with him in the clinics," said Nancy.

At the time of the Tate-La Bianca murders, Miss Wolfe recalled, she was on a tour of Europe. "It was a big story over there," she said.

"Just think, the Manson people come up for possible parole in a couple of years," she reminded me.

She appeared to shudder a bit as she said it.

GEORGE DI CENZO plays prosecutor Vincent Bugliosi, and Steve Railsback portrays Charles Manson.

Fairy tales and baseball keep Danny Kaye busy

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

When Danny Kaye was in England to conduct the London Symphony Orchestra, a reporter asked him why didn't he make some more comedy films. His reply:

"Because movies are not like they used to be, times are not like they used to be, and, most of all, I am not like I used to be."

For the same reason, Kaye rejected the notion of a return to the London Palladium, where his post-war appearances made him something of a national hero.

"Sure, I could probably go back there and do the same routines and get a fine reaction," he said. "But it wouldn't be the same. There was something about that era that made it just right, and I would never be able to recapture what happened 20-25 years ago. It would be walking backwards.

"Likewise I don't want to go to Las Vegas; I've done that. Another television series? Those four years I did on CBS were among the most enjoyable of my life. But I wouldn't want to repeat. Nowadays I just want to do the things I want to do."

RIGHT NOW he is on a fairy tale kick. He recently taped a new version of "Peter Pan" in London, playing Captain Hook to Mia Farrow's Peter, with a score by Leslie Bricusse and Anthony Newley. The special has appeared in England and will be seen here at Christmas on NBC.

Kaye has been taping "Pinocchio" in Hollywood, not the gospel according to Walt Disney but a new interpretation from the Colladi classic. Danny is Gepetto, Sandy Duncan is the boy-puppet with the expanding nose. Also in the cast: Flip Wilson, Clive Revill, Liz Torres. CBS will telecast the special Saturday night, March 27.

SANDY DUNCAN plays the title role and Danny Kaye plays the kindly woodcarver Gepetto in "Pinocchio," new musical version of the classic tale, which airs at 8 p.m. Saturday on Ch. 2.

"Who knows, this might start a series of fairy tales for me," Kaye speculated.

Baseball plays an important part in Kaye's future plans. He is part owner of an American League expansion team which will start playing in Seattle's new Kingdome in the spring of 1977. It's a natural adjunct to his ownership in radio stations in Seattle, Spokane and Portland and an outgrowth of his long-time devotion to baseball.

"THINK OF it," he marveled, "a guy who spent his youth watching the Dodgers play at Ebbets Field now owns his own baseball club. It's Walter Mitty time."

He's hoping to call the new club the Rainiers and he has his own ideas about what the operation should be: "Seattle is a major league city and this will be a major league team, but I would like the stadium to have a small-town feeling.

"I'd like to build up a family atmosphere at the games, and whoever dreamed up ladies' night and free bats for the kids had the right idea. I'd also like to see more cross-playing between the leagues. Fans miss a lot seeing only one kind of play. I'd like to bring the Los Angeles Dodgers and the Cincinnati Reds to Seattle for games."

KAYE'S other interests:

Conducting — "I've raised $4½ million for musicians' retirement funds, appearing with every major American symphony orchestra except Cleveland, and I think I'm scheduled there. And I can't read a note of music."

Flying — "I always remember what they told me in flight school: There are old pilots and there are bold pilots, but there are no old bold pilots."

Cooking — "Recently I cooked for three of the greatest chefs of France. How did I dare? They may know everything about French cookery but they don't know Chinese. So I made them a Chinese dinner."

UNICEF — "I still devote a great deal of my time to the United Nations children's fund. I just learned that I've been accepted by the Guinness Book of Records for my Halloween trip last year. I flew my own jet to 65 cities in five days, traveling 17,000 miles and speaking at each stop."

DANNY KAYE ... as Gepetto in "Pinocchio."

The BIBLE Says

J. T. Smith

GOD'S SCHEME OF REDEMPTION NO. 12

As we discovered last week, the only way to have a New Testament church is to build it according to the apostolic model. But what is the apostolic model for the church? How may we be sure the church where we are worshipping is built according to the apostolic model?

The only way to know anything about the church in the days of the apostles is to go to the New Testament and read what they did in establishing congregations of God's people.

Elders, Deacons, and Members

Every local congregation of God's people is to have a plurality of elders, deacons, and members. At least, this is what they had in the church at Philippi, Phil.1:1. In the days of the apostles, congregations met without elders and deacons until men were scripturally qualified. Then when they were, there was a plurality of both elders and deacons in every congregation (Acts 14:23; 1 Timothy 3, and Titus 1). Qualifications are set forth in these passages that one must attain before he can be ordained as an elder or deacon. But notice also in these passages that every church had a plurality when men were qualified. There is nothing in the Bible about a preacher being the pastor or bishop. Unless the preacher meets the qualifications set forth in the above passages, he cannot even be one of the plurality that is to oversee the congregation — much less the only one.

God has authorized the elders to oversee the flock which is among them (1 Pet.5:2-3). However, they do not make laws for the people of God. They just see that the instructions God has given us in His word are carried out (Titus 1:9).

New Testament churches did not have earthly headquarters. In fact, the word "headquarters" is a combination of two words, "head" and "quarters" which signifies "the place where the head resides." But Christ is the head of His church (Col.1:18,23), and he resides in heaven. So, if you are a member of a church with an earthly headquarters, you are not a part of a church that is built according to the apostolic model.

Old Congressmen Never Die—They Just Become Lobbyists

WALTER SCOTT'S

Personality Parade

Want the facts? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Want informed opinion? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

Q. I have heard the rumor in Washington, D.C., that at one time or another the Gulf Oil Corp. bought up the entire U.S. Congress via illegal campaign contributions. Is that true? And if it is, why hasn't the Senate ethics committee done anything about it?—Michael Brown, Philadelphia, Pa.

A. A Gulf lobbyist for years made cash contributions, laundered through a Bahamas bank, to many Senators and Congressmen. Allegedly Sen. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington, former Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma, every member on the Senate Watergate committee except former Sen. Sam Ervin, and many other legislators were the recipients of Gulf Oil largesse. The Senate ethics committee, chaired by Sen. Howard Cannon of Nevada, claims to be "conducting an in-depth investigation of these allegations." Gulf did not buy up "the entire U.S. Congress." That's an exaggeration. But the corporation surely made illegal contributions to many.

Q. Benny Goodman has been married to the sister of John Hammond, the man who discovered Billie Holiday, Bob Dylan and other musicians, since 1942. My question: To whom was Alice Hammond married before she married Benny Goodman?—Ed Halper, Greenwich, Conn.

A. Alice Hammond was previously married to Arthur Duckworth, a Conservative member of the British Parliament.

WIFE ALICE HAMMOND AND BENNY GOODMAN

Q. Can you tell me, please, how old Bess Truman and the Duchess of Windsor are?—Charlotte Cohen, Buffalo, N.Y.

A. Bess Truman is 91; the Duchess of Windsor is 80.

Q. Was Richard Nixon ever blackmailed by J. Edgar Hoover over an alleged love affair he had with a Chinese beauty in Hong Kong? I read about it in a Jack Anderson column.—R.E., Escondido, Cal.

A. Hoover tacitly blackmailed many Congressmen and Senators with scandalous or derogatory information picked up by his agents, which in a sense he held over the legislators, but there is no evidence about Nixon and any Chinese beauty. Richard Nixon was never a ladies' man.

COPPOLA

McQUEEN

Q. It is difficult for me to believe, but I read recently that Francis Ford Coppola, director of "Godfather I and II," offered Steve McQueen $3 million for three weeks of work in his new film, "Apocalypse Now." Can this be so?—Nancy Warren, Chevy Chase, Md.

A. It is not so. Coppola offered McQueen $1.5 million to star in the film which has a 16-week production schedule in the Philippines. McQueen countered with a demand for $1.5 million in salary and an additional $1.5 million after the film was released. On second thought McQueen decided that he did not want to stay on location in the Philippines for four months and would prefer a lesser role, one that would call for only three weeks on location. According to Coppola, "Steve still wanted the same money."

Coppola, mindful of the fact that McQueen had received $2 million for his work in "Papillon," decided that no actor was worth $3 million for three weeks of work and called a halt to the negotiations.

Since the Hollywood studios stopped signing young players and developing them into stars, those actors who have reached the top rung can pretty much call their own salaries and profit percentages. Actors like Jack Nicholson, Marlon Brando, Paul Newman, Steve McQueen, Gene Hackman, Charles Bronson, even James Caan, now demand and get a minimum of $1 million a film.

Q. Actress Glenda Jackson, who won two Oscar film awards, was recently divorced by her husband, film director Roy Hodges. Why?—L. F., Jamaica, N.Y.

A. Because of her adultery with a stage lighter, Andy Phillips. Miss Jackson, 39, agreed to pay the costs of the divorce hearing, which lasted three minutes. She and her ex-husband were granted joint custody of their six-year-old son, Daniel.

Q. Robert Foster Bennett, son of Wallace Bennett, Republican Senator from Utah—is he really the "Deep Throat" character in "All the President's Men"?—F.L. Peterson, Salt Lake City, Utah.

A. Bennett, who now works for Howard Hughes, bought the Robert R. Mullen Co., a Washington, D.C., public relations firm, in 1971. The Mullen company had served as a CIA front and employed Howard Hunt, one of the Watergate culprits. Bob Woodward, co-author of "All the President's Men," admits that Robert Foster Bennett was one of his information sources but refuses to identify Bennett as "Deep Throat."

CANDIDATE BIRCH BAYH AND WIFE MARVELLA

Q. Is it true that Presidential hopeful Birch Bayh was the only member of his law school class to flunk the Indiana bar exam? And isn't Senator Bayh regarded in the Congressional cloakrooms as an intellectual lightweight and womanizer?—Donald H. Crosby, Mansfield Center, Conn.

A. Senator Bayh flunked the bar exam on his first try, then passed it, not an unusual sequence of events. As to how he is regarded by his fellow Senators—beauty lies in the eyes of the beholder.

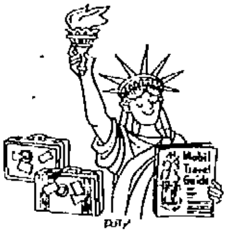
Observations™

Itchy feet. Warmer weather and the Bicentennial year are making for an America on the move. Philadelphia, for example, is expecting 19 million visitors. Washington expects 17 million or so, with Colonial Williamsburg and Boston also ready for big crowds. Disney World and Miami Beach are among more traditional vacation spots anticipating a heavy influx.



The moral? Plan ahead, reserve early, and, this year more than ever, pick up a copy of the Mobil Travel Guide. It includes special listings of Bicentennial events, with the usual tips on rooms and restaurants.

o

Ouch! In the first nine months of 1975, the worldwide income tax bill of the 29 largest oil companies exceeded $30 billion—almost double the amount paid two years ago, according to the Chase Bank. In fact, more than three-quarters of their pre-tax income went to pay income taxes. On the other hand, the companies invested more than $2 for every $1 in profits for capital expenditures and the search for new oil. That took some sizable borrowing—which will have to be repaid out of future earnings. Those earnings, of course, will be taxed…oh well, you get the idea by now.

"WHICH ONE'S THE HOMEFOLK STATION?"

Spring in your step: key in your pocket. With spring in the air and spirits rising, auto thieves are also beginning to stir. That's the word from the National Automobile Theft Bureau, which offers an easy way to reverse the trend. About 14 percent of the million or so cars stolen each year have the keys in their ignitions. So put the keys in your pocket, and let the thief do the walking.

A quote we like. John Locke said it in his Second Treatise, "The end of the law is not to abolish or restrain but to preserve and enlarge freedom."

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

LIBBY HOWIE

Female Auctioneer

An attractive 24-year-old, Libby Howie, has become the first woman auctioneer in Sotheby's 232-year history. Sotheby's is one of England's oldest and most respected art auction houses.

A few weeks ago, in her debut, Libby auctioned off $35,000 worth of prints in two hours. As the sale drew to a close, the customers broke into spontaneous applause for Libby. She had controlled the bidding in friendly but expert fashion, opening up in the process a whole new field for members of her sex, including possibly Caroline Kennedy who is taking an art course of sorts at Sotheby's.

Sex Education Needed

A survey of sex and birth control knowledge and practices among high school students in a large Northeastern city reveals that "at last intercourse, 55 percent of the boys used no contraceptive, or relied on withdrawal or their partner's douching. Half of the sexually experienced boys had begun sexual activity before the age of 13. . . .

"Clearly sex education programs offered in high school come too late for these youths. Sex education should be offered in junior high schools, and birth control programs should reach out to the younger male as well as female adolescents."

The survey was reported on by Madelon and David Finkel in an article, "Sexual and Contraceptive Knowledge, Attitudes and Behavior of Male Adolescents," in the November/December 1975 issue of "Family Planning Perspectives."

Flying Geography

Traditional high school geography courses have taken a nosedive in popularity during the last 15 years. But one Northern California school has come up with a novel way to stimulate student interest in the subject.

In a six-week course, "Flying Geography," students of Woodland High School in Woodland, Cal., take hour-long flights over the Sacramento area. During the flights, kids are quizzed by a teacher on natural land formations, Lake Tahoe, the San Andreas fault, and on patterns of land use, including agriculture and urbanization along the Sacramento River.

The course, given for the past two summers, is so popular that the kids' parents requested that it be given in adult education last spring, says Vice Principal Howard Delp.

"The kids told us the course put a lot of meaning into maps," Delp explains.

Although many colleges have used aerial field trips to bolster geography studies, only "a handful" of high schools have tried this approach, says William Elam, executive director of the National Council for Geographic Education.

But, says Elam, creative courses like Woodland's and a renewed interest in the environment may give a spurt to the study of geography in the next few years.

Increasingly, he says, high schools are discovering that geography involves more than just reading flat maps and reciting the names of state capitals. "Problems of pollution and land use are all part of geography," he says. The subject "encompasses anything man does to alter the environment."

Stop Killing Each Other

How do most Americans between the ages of 15 and 25 die? They die in automobile crashes, with at least half the deaths alcohol-related.

Do not drink or smoke pot and drive anywhere. Spend the night at a friend's home and sleep it off.

If you are hosting a party and a guest has had too much to drink, insist that the guest spend the night rather than drive drunk.

The Youths Highway Safety Advisory Committee, Box 1969, Washington, D.C. 20013, has begun advertising in college newspapers. "Stop Driving Drunk," the ad implores, "Stop Killing Each Other."

Up and Out

In Great Britain there are 150 young people each earning $300,000 a year or more in the pop music industry.

The single biggest earner is Elton John, whose records and concerts have grossed $60 million in the past 15 months.

Following John in popularity are Paul McCartney, Led Zeppelin, Pink Floyd, The Who and The Rolling Stones.

As soon as a young Briton strikes it rich, a lawyer or investment adviser suggests that he or she establish residence in some country other than Britain.

The top tax rates in Great Britain have become astronomical—83% on earned income, 98% on unearned income.

The result is a growing army of young tax exiles: Ringo Starr, Mick Jagger, writer Frederick Forsyth, heavyweight boxer Joe Bugner—practically every leading young achiever in music, athletics, drama and literature.

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

By LLOYD SHEARER

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN

THE LISTS

George Bush, new director of the Central Intelligence Agency, is problem-laden. One of his major problems concerns the exposure of CIA agents throughout the world.

In the past few months lists of alleged CIA agents, in many cases with their addresses, phone numbers, and other titles, have been published in France, England, Spain, The Netherlands, Italy, Germany, Sweden, Norway and Finland.

In Bonn, a little-known weekly newspaper, "Information Service," published the names of 15 persons it said are CIA agents. In Athens, it was the publication of the name of Richard Welch, CIA station chief at the American Embassy, that led to his senseless assassination. In Italy, "Espresso," the newsmagazine, listed 28 names, including nine women. In The Hague, the weekly "Vrij Nederland" printed seven names, including one woman. In France, "Liberation," the left-wing daily founded by Jean-Paul Sartre, blew the cover of the CIA station chief and others. In London, CIA personnel at the U.S. Embassy have been widely publicized for some time.

Why are so many people in so many countries against the CIA?

Largely because for years the CIA has interfered in their governments. Take Italy. Since 1948 the CIA has paid approximately $74 million to Italian politicians, most of it to Premier Aldo Moro's Christian Democrats. All Italian premiers have been Christian Democrats since 1945. In the 1972 general election, the CIA paid out $9 million to various Italian center-left parties on the insistence of Graham Martin, U.S. Ambassador to Rome, although the then CIA station chief in Rome strongly objected.

NEW CIA DIRECTOR GEORGE BUSH AND WIFE BARBARA

In short, one job of the CIA has been to support governments the U.S. liked and help destroy governments the U.S. did not.

What right has the CIA got to do this? How would we like it if the Shah of Iran contributed millions of dollars to elect Ronald Reagan President of the U.S. and additional millions to defeat Gerald Ford or vice versa?

The CIA is absolutely necessary to collect intelligence, but bribing politicians in a foreign country in order to negate the will of the voters -- that may very well be classified as dirty pool, a game prompting anger, revenge and exposure by the victims.

George Bush is going to find it tough to restructure the cover apparatus of his CIA agents. How many will have to be transferred, how many will have to be given new identities, how many will have to be "buried" in corporations--all of these are his problems.

Most of all, how is he going to prevent terrorists, patriots, Socialists, Communists, nationalists, friends as well as enemies from publishing future lists of CIA agents abroad?

GAMBLING FAILURE

One of the most plush gambling casinos in the world is the Metro Club on the 26th floor of the Grand Hotel in Las Vegas.

Equipped with a French gourmet restaurant, a cocktail lounge, a special band, it is designed as a gambling retreat for the super-rich. Membership is by invitation only. The minimum bet at the roulette and dice tables is $50, the maximum $2000.

The Metro Club is the pet project of Kirk Kerkorian, majority stockholder of MGM, which owns the Grand.

The club was opened Dec. 28, 1975, attracted some of the country's highest rollers and half a dozen Arab sheiks. When word of the sheiks leaked out, the hotel fired Harvey Diederich, its public relations chief and one of the most widely admired hotel executives in Las Vegas. Kerkorian wanted everything about the Metro Club to remain super-secret.

Apparently people who gamble for high stakes want publicity as much as they do privacy. Because now the Metro Club is closed. Hotel officials say the closing is only temporary, but in Vegas the word is that it's permanent. The Kerkorian concept of super-secret gambling for the super-rich is not operative, particularly in Las Vegas, to which people come not for snob appeal but to be seen and partake in the ambiance of excitement and anything-goes.

TOURIST ATTRACTION

Skorpios, the Greek island purchased by the late Aristotle Onassis, on which he was married to Jackie Kennedy and where he now lies buried, has become a tourist attraction.

The Ionian fishermen are charging a pretty drachma to ferry tourists to Skorpios where they point out the Onassis burial site. The tourists who are most curious are the Americans.

NAVAL OFFICER JOHN F. KENNEDY

CLUSTER ON KENNEDY

"I didn't know anything about Jack Kennedy's sex life," says Alvin Cluster. "In fact, for the seven months I knew him out in the South Pacific, he had no sex life. But I do know plenty about his seamanship. And I can tell you, Jack Kennedy was a damn good Naval officer. He was a good navigator. He was an excellent leader. He was a good boat-handler. His men liked and respected him. And he was courageous.

"I remember one time when the Japanese were shooting us up pretty good. I decided to convert some of our patrol boats into gunboats. Kennedy literally worked around the clock with his crew, armoring his boat. And then he started running that boat up through the Northern Solomons. And he took plenty of enemy fire; so much fire, in fact, that some of his men came to me and said, 'This guy Kennedy is too damn courageous.'

"I'm not going to get into any arguments," says Cluster, a tall, husky, handsome, gray-haired personnel expert who was commander of Motor Torpedo Squadrons 2 and 3 out in the Solomon Islands in World War II, "with writers who want to comment on Kennedy's seamanship or lack of courage. But I knew him firsthand, saw him in action, knew him under fire. I know how his men felt about him, and I can tell you he had guts and heart and humor.

"In August, 1943, after his PT-109 was sunk, he insisted upon staying out in the Pacific. There was an unofficial rule back then--if your boat got sunk you got a transfer back to the States. We transferred some of Kennedy's crew. But he wouldn't go.

"Don't let anybody sell you short on Lt. (jg) John F. Kennedy. He was as good an officer as we had in the U.S. Navy. I was his commanding officer, and we had plenty of political arguments, because I was a Republican. But he saved my bacon one night on PT-48 when we damned near sunk, and for my money, a more courageous guy never lived."

CHINESE LAUNDRYMEN

There are approximately 150 Chinese laundrymen in the British Navy. They are recruited in Hong Kong. They live aboard the British ships, sleep in bunks over their washing machines, prepare their own food in the ships' galleys.

These Chinese workers launder shirts for 20 cents each and trousers for 15 cents. They also repair clothes, press suits, and do other odd jobs such as barbering and shirt-making.

They are recruited through agencies in Hong Kong, spend up to 30 months on any one ship.

The practice of employing Chinese laundrymen began in the British Far East fleet many decades ago and spread as the Far East fleet was eventually transferred to the Atlantic and Mediterranean.

NON-ALCOHOLIC BEER

The Moslem religion prohibits its believers from drinking alcohol, which of course rules out beer.

But now the Moslems of Saudi Arabia are about to get their daily ration of beer--only it's a non-alcoholic beer especially brewed for them by a Yorkshire brewery.

Several months ago a Saudi businessman approached Dr. Richard Theakston of the well-known British brewery of the same name at a trade fair in Cologne, Germany.

Saudi Arabia, he suggested, was interested in importing a non-alcoholic beer. "At the moment," he explained, "our people drink fruit juices, lemonade, colas, mineral water, soft drinks of all types. But what they want is a drink with a taste of hops."

Beer is traditionally made from a mixture of hops and malt which is fermented with yeast. The non-alcoholic beer brewed for the Saudis will be made without the yeast. Instead the mixture of malt and hops will be pasteurized.

COOK ANGELA BADDELEY AND BUTLER GORDON JACKSON IN 'UPSTAIRS, DOWNSTAIRS'

THE PERFECT BUTLER

Gordon Jackson, 52-year-old Scottish actor, son of a Glasgow printer, has become one of the most recognized celebrities in London.

And with good reason. Jackson is the actor who plays Hudson, the perfect butler in "Upstairs, Downstairs," one of the most popular TV series ever released in Great Britain and the U.S. Last year the Royal TV Society voted him the best actor of 1975.

For an actor, Jackson is a surprisingly modest man. "Having worked in a well-received television program," he says in his soft Scottish accent, "doesn't mean I'm a star or a great actor. I'm just an ordinary bloke who has to keep acting to support a wife, two teen-aged sons, and a house in Hampstead.

"One of my worries is that the Hudson part will typecast me as the perennial butler. I hope not. Another constant worry which plagues me is that I'll forget my lines. I spend hours in my back bedroom going over and over them. I'm what they call a nervous performer. I don't mind the rehearsing and the preparation, but the actual performance truly terrifies me.

"The late Angela Baddeley [Mrs. Bridges], on the other hand, relished the shooting days. I fear them. It's like going to my own execution."

Members of the "Upstairs, Downstairs" cast claim that Jackson on camera is a perfectionist but that in real life he's not at all the pompous, pious Hudson he plays. They say he's a down-to-earth, mild-mannered man who suffers from a nervous stomach.

"When I think," Jackson says, "that 'Upstairs, Downstairs' is being watched by some 300 million people throughout the world--that makes me more nervous than ever."

When word of the sheiks leaked out, the hotel fired Harvey Diederich, its public relations chief and one of the most widely admired hotel executives in Las Vegas. Kerkorian wanted everything about the Metro Club to remain super-secret.

Apparently people who gamble for high stakes want publicity as much as they do privacy. Because now the Metro Club is closed. Hotel officials say the closing is only temporary, but in Vegas the word is that it's permanent. The Kerkorian concept of super-secret gambling for the super-rich is not operative, particularly in Las Vegas, to which people come not for snob appeal but to be seen and partake in the ambiance of excitement and anything-goes.

TOURIST ATTRACTION Skorpios, the Greek island purchased by the late Aristotle Onassis, on which he was married to Jackie Kennedy and where he now lies buried, has become a tourist attraction.

The Ionian fishermen are charging a pretty drachma to ferry tourists to Skorpios where they point out the Onassis burial site. The tourists who are most curious are the Americans.

NAVAL OFFICER JOHN F. KENNEDY

CLUSTER ON KENNEDY

"I didn't know anything about Jack Kennedy's sex life," says Alvin Cluster. "In fact, for the seven months I knew him out in the South Pacific, he had no sex life. But I do know plenty about his seamanship. And I can tell you, Jack Kennedy was a damn good Naval officer. He was a good navigator. He was an excellent leader. He was a good boat-handler. His men liked and respected him. And he was courageous.

"I remember one time when the Japanese were shooting us up pretty good. I decided to convert some of our patrol boats into gunboats. Kennedy literally worked around the clock with his crew, armoring his boat. And then he started running that boat up through the Northern Solomons. And he took plenty of enemy fire; so much fire, in fact, that some of his men came to me and said, 'This guy Kennedy is too damn courageous.'

"I'm not going to get into any arguments," says Cluster, a tall, husky, handsome, gray-haired personnel expert who was commander of Motor Torpedo Squadrons 2 and 3 out in the Solomon Islands in World War II, "with writers who want to comment on Kennedy's seamanship or lack of courage. But I knew him firsthand, saw him in action, knew him under fire. I know how his men felt about him, and I can tell you he had guts and heart and humor.

"In August, 1943, after his PT-109 was sunk, he insisted upon staying out in the Pacific. There was an unofficial rule back then--if your boat got sunk you got a transfer back to the States. We transferred some of Kennedy's crew. But he wouldn't go.

"Don't let anybody sell you short on Lt. (jg) John F. Kennedy. He was as good an officer as we had in the U.S. Navy. I was his commanding officer, and we had plenty of political arguments, because I was a Republican. But he saved my bacon one night on PT-48 when we damned near sunk, and for my money, a more courageous guy never lived."

CHINESE LAUNDRYMEN

There are approximately 150 Chinese laundrymen in the British Navy. They are recruited in Hong Kong. They live aboard the British ships, sleep in bunks over their washing machines, prepare their own food in the ships' galleys.

These Chinese workers launder shirts for 20 cents each and trousers for 15 cents. They also repair clothes, press suits, and do other odd jobs such as barbering and shirt-making.

They are recruited through agencies in Hong Kong, spend up to 30 months on any one ship.

The practice of employing Chinese laundrymen began in the British Far East fleet many decades ago and spread as the Far East fleet was eventually transferred to the Atlantic and Mediterranean.

NON-ALCOHOLIC BEER

The Moslem religion prohibits its believers from drinking alcohol, which of course rules out beer.

But now the Moslems of Saudi Arabia are about to get their daily ration of beer--only it's a non-alcoholic beer especially brewed for them by a Yorkshire brewery.

Several months ago a Saudi businessman approached Dr. Richard Theakston of the well-known British brewery of the same name at a trade fair in Cologne, Germany.

Saudi Arabia, he suggested, was interested in importing a non-alcoholic beer. "At the moment," he explained, "our people drink fruit juices, lemonade, colas, mineral water, soft drinks of all types. But what they want is a drink with a taste of hops."

Beer is traditionally made from a mixture of hops and malt which is fermented with yeast. The non-alcoholic beer brewed for the Saudis will be made without the yeast. Instead the mixture of malt and hops will be pasteurized.

COOK ANGELA BADDELEY AND BUTLER GORDON JACKSON IN 'UPSTAIRS, DOWNSTAIRS'

THE PERFECT BUTLER

Gordon Jackson, 52-year-old Scottish actor, son of a Glasgow printer, has become one of the most recognized celebrities in London.

And with good reason. Jackson is the actor who plays Hudson, the perfect butler in "Upstairs, Downstairs," one of the most popular TV series ever released in Great Britain and the U.S. Last year the Royal TV Society voted him the best actor of 1975.

For an actor, Jackson is a surprisingly modest man. "Having worked in a well-received television program," he says in his soft Scottish accent, "doesn't mean I'm a star or a great actor. I'm just an ordinary bloke who has to keep acting to support a wife, two teen-aged sons, and a house in Hampstead.

"One of my worries is that the Hudson part will typecast me as the perennial butler. I hope not. Another constant worry which plagues me is that I'll forget my lines. I spend hours in my back bedroom going over and over them. I'm what they call a nervous performer. I don't mind the rehearsing and the preparation, but the actual performance truly terrifies me.

"The late Angela Baddeley [Mrs. Bridges], on the other hand, relished the shooting days. I fear them. It's like going to my own execution."

Members of the "Upstairs, Downstairs" cast claim that Jackson on camera is a perfectionist but that in real life he's not at all the pompous, pious Hudson he plays. They say he's a down-to-earth, mild-mannered man who suffers from a nervous stomach.

"When I think," Jackson says, "that 'Upstairs, Downstairs' is being watched by some 300 million people throughout the world--that makes me more nervous than ever."

Old Congressmen Never Die—They Just Become Lobbyists

by Jack Anderson

William Minshall, who served 10 terms as a Representative from Cleveland, is one of the many Congressmen and Senators who leave office only to return to Capitol Hill as lobbyists.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

It happened last year. The House was engaged in solemn debate over which contractor would build America's fighter plane of the future. For the victorious manufacturer, the vote would be worth billions.

The speeches, nevertheless, were humdrum. Congressmen shuffled in and out. Some barged off with harried looks. Others lingered, listening.

Outside, silver-haired William Minshall waylaid the Congressional commuters as they arrived or departed. He would reach for each Congressman's hand, throw a friendly arm around his shoulder and whisper urgently into his ear.

Minshall had a message from the Northrop Corp. Apparently, members were impressed with his pitch, for when the two-bell alarm summoned them for the final roll call, they gave Northrop an unexpected 60-vote victory.

Minshall is one of those rare birds called Lame Ducks Emeritus. They are former Congressmen who do not fly home after their defeat but stay to feather their nests on Capitol Hill.

More dignity as lawyers

Most roost in the law firms around Washington. There is more dignity influencing votes as lawyers than as lobbyists.

But whether they call themselves attorneys, consultants, public relations people or Washington representatives, a growing number of ex-Congressmen remain in Washington. Sadly, if not surprisingly, they can earn more serving the private interests than the public interest.

A term or two in Congress is great training for the pressure business. Former members of Congress speak the raucous language of Capitol Hill and understand the intricacies of political dealing; they share the legislators' distrust of reform.

More important, their past membership gives them easy access to their former colleagues. They may buttonhole legislators directly on the Senate and House floors, unless they have special interest in a specific bill being debated. They are admitted, too, to the exclusive dining areas where the members eat.

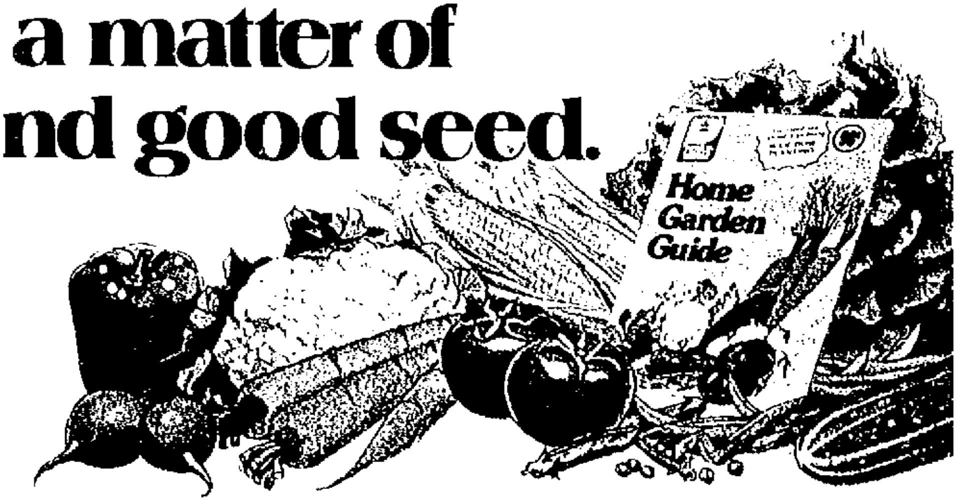
STANLEY helps you do things right

Gardening is a matter of good sense and good seed.



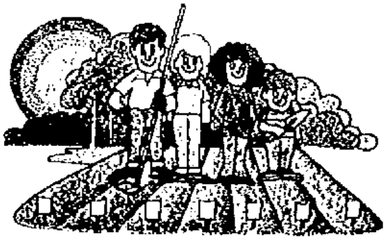
Ferry-Morse will help you with both.

There's a lot of you between seeding and eating. A lot of digging. Watching. Watering. Weeding. It takes some good common sense and good seed to turn your labors into crisp lettuce, fresh carrots, radishes and juicy cucumbers.

We at Ferry-Morse supply more seeds to professional and amateur growers than anyone else in America. We'd like to help show you how you can grow a better garden by using your good sense and our good seed.

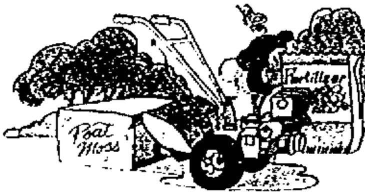
Read your yard

It has something to tell you. Look for the spot where things grow best. Grass. Weeds. Anything. If it's not in shade and not in a soggy drainage area, it's probably a good spot for your garden. Because things are already growing there naturally. Remember, your house or shrubs can make a good windbreak.



Make it family size

Small families don't need large gardens. Plan the size to fit your family. Keep a record of the amounts you harvest. You'll have a better idea next year of what it will take to keep your family supplied.

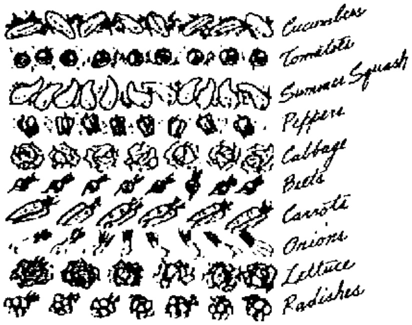


How to spread it on

Make sure your seeds have a good nourishing start in life. Mix peat moss or mulch with the soil. Use a 5-10-5 fertilizer. Four pounds to 100 sq. ft. is a good measure.

Mighty plants do not from weak seeds grow

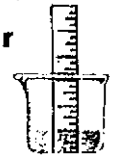
Seeds are sort of like people. Strong, healthy parents have strong, healthy children. We at Ferry-Morse have spent years developing strains of hearty seeds, resulting in delicious vegetables and beautiful flowers. Follow our instructions carefully, always planting your seeds by hand.



What should go where

Here's a guide, showing how a lot of vegetables can get along together in a 10x15' area. It's arranged so that tall plants don't shade shorter plants. Always plant vine crops at the edge of the garden so they can spread into your yard. Plant perennial crops together so they won't interfere with cultivation of annual crops.

Put a watch on the water



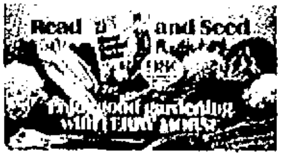
One inch of water is a good soaking for a garden. The first time you water, set out a container marked at one inch. Time how long it takes to reach the mark. Then, water for that length of time after that. One good watering every week should be sufficient.

Be cruel to weak plants

If a plant looks sick, don't nurse it. Pull it out. It may be diseased. It could affect the plants around it. It's best to get rid of it before it does any damage.

Blast those bugs

If you see bugs on your plants, don't wait until you've selected the proper insecticide. Knock 'em off. Pick 'em off. Spray 'em off with water. Be careful not to damage the plants, but don't give bugs another day or two of dining on your hard work.



Read it...and reap

Here's the top to the Ferry-Morse seed display. A display that's in thousands of food, hardware, variety, department, and garden supply stores across America. Look for it when you buy your seeds. You'll be starting your garden with Ferry-Morse. Good seed to go with your good gardening sense.

It's all in the book

Legislators who stayed to lobby

ROGER ZION

WAYNE ASPINALL

JOSEPH TYDINGS

CHARLES GUBSER

ANDREW BIEMILLER

FRANK IKARD

CRAIG HOSMER

The legislators-turned-lobbyists often specialize in influencing the committees' upon which they formerly served. This brings us back to William Minshall, a proper, well-tailored Republican who represented the Cleveland suburbs for 20 years.

He became the No. 1 Republican on the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee, which gave him insight into Pentagon spending and contracting. He learned to shake the military money tree into corporate coffers.

This is a talent worth a lot to those in the great corporate scramble for defense dollars. When Minshall retired from the House in 1974, therefore, he did not return home to Lakewood, Ohio. Instead, he joined the latest flock of Lame Ducks Emeritus and formed a consulting firm, Congressional Associates. Northrop eagerly retained him.

High tolerance

Members of Congress, perhaps because they foresee the day when they, too, might want to capitalize on their connections, are outrageously tolerant of former colleagues who now lobby. The last time any objections were raised about ex-Congressmen lobbying on the House floor was back in 1945. Then Speaker Sam Rayburn barred them from the floor and cloakrooms when the House was considering legislation affecting their clients.

Thirty years later, the corridors of Congress literally swarm with former members shamelessly plumping for clients. Frequently, the erstwhile legislators ignore the few rules that are supposed to regulate their lobbying.

Few are as blatant as ex-Rep. Roger Zion (R., Ind.), who, after a drubbing at the polls in 1974, used his official stationery to offer his services for hire. For the right price, he notified prospective clients, they could buy entrée to Capitol Hill.

Promising his contacts

"Since I will continue to be active in the Congressional prayer breakfast group, in the House gym, the members' dining room and on the House floor," he wrote, "I will maintain contact with my good friends who affect legislation."

He had the right connections, he promised, to "unravel red tape, open doors, make appointments, work with the Administration or government agencies, influence legislation and assist in any other consulting service."

Several clients rushed to retain the bald, brash Zion, including Credithrift Financial, a $300-million-a-year installment financing operation.

Former House Interior Chairman Wayne Aspinall (D., Colo.), whose antipathy to environmental legislation cost him his House seat in 1972, returned afterward for the stripmining debate. He appeared in the reduced status of a representative for AMAX, Inc., a large mining firm, but he had not lost his imperious manner. With extraordinary gall, he summoned a page to deliver a message to Speaker Carl Albert.

It was against even the relaxed rules for Aspinall, as a mining representative, to hobnob on the House floor during the stripmining debate. He assured my associate Jack Cloherty that he was not lobbying, merely paying a friendly visit.

He dispatched the page to explain this to the Speaker, said Aspinall. But other Congressmen on the floor had the impression that Aspinall was quietly pushing AMAX's views on stripmining.

Ex-Sen. Joseph Tydings (D., Md.) pulled strings for a law client who had a problem with the General Services Administration; he got a former colleague, Sen. John Tunney (D., Cal.), to fire off a hot letter to the GSA.

"You have refused recently on several occasions," complained Tunney, "to even see Mr. Tydings personally or talk to him on the telephone." Tunney solved the problem, therefore, by asking all of Tydings' questions in the four-page letter. The case is now in litigation, Tydings told my associate, Bob Owens.

Another who adroitly changed to influencer, ex-Rep. Charles Gubser (R., Cal.), recently appeared before a House Banking Subcommittee to call for the gutting of the Renegotiation Board, a government instrument that tried to prevent defense profiteering.

It turned out that the board had sought to retrieve some excess profits from an electronics firm that then hired Gubser to intervene with his former colleagues. He assured them solemnly that the public needed no protection from the kindly weapons makers but rather that the defense contractors needed protection from cumbersome bureaucracy. Of course, Gubser had more friends on the subcommittee than did the Renegotiation Board.

A question of power

From legislator to lobbyist might seem a step down. But many ex-Congressmen wield more power as behind-the-scenes manipulators. Ex-Rep. Andrew Biemiller (D., Wis.), for example, was merely a liberal Democratic voice from the back row during his two House terms. But as the AFL-CIO's chief lobbyist, he became a power.

Fifteen years ago, Rep. Frank Ikard (D., Tex.) was a low-ranking member of the House Ways and Means Committee, a small voice for oil privileges. Then he resigned to head the American Petroleum Institute. Now he is a big voice for oil privileges.

Rep. Craig Hosmer (R., Cal.) was an obscure member of the House who once called on the Air Force to drop voodoo dolls on the North Vietnamese to spook them into unconditional surrender. Now, as a lobbyist for the Nuclear Energy Council, he is organizing a formidable lobby of utility company executives throughout the country, instructing them in the fine art of influencing legislation. When a key vote comes on nuclear energy, he will pass the word to the executives to put their training to use.

It is the financial lure, however, that attracts most Congressional retreads into the influence trade.

Sen. George Smathers (D., Fla.) put it bluntly. "A person with my background," he said, "can make more money in 30 days [as a lobbyist] than he can in 15 years as a Senator."

Smathers, heeding his own counsel, quit the Senate to become a lobbyist now representing the Association of American Railroads, Pennzoil, the Chicago Board of Trade and the American Horse Council.

He is effective. Retained by a Washington real estate firm, Smathers got the legislative branch to do what the executive branch would not do—rent office space for $2 a square foot above the going rate.

Personal stake

Congress is loath to discipline the men who once served in it. Most members have an interest in keeping lobbying wide open—when the voters toss them out, they can always make a comfortable living as Potomac pitchmen.

Meanwhile, legislation continues to be shaped as much by the hidden influences as by the public debates. Occasionally, a conscientious Congressman, like the late Joseph Resnick (D., N.Y.), cries out in frustration: "Who runs Congress, the people or the lobbyists?" It is an interesting but perhaps foolish question.

Something for smokers to think about.

There are cigarettes and there are cigarettes. And if you're a smoker you certainly know by now which brand you really enjoy smoking.

So what makes us think we'll ever get a crack at switching you?

Well, we're going to try.

A lot of cigarette smokers smoke menthol. But they're probably just as concerned about the 'tar' and nicotine stories that all cigarette smokers have been hearing these days.

Frankly, if a cigarette is going to bring you flavor, it's also going to bring you smoke. And where there's smoke, there has to be 'tar.' In fact, in most cigarettes, the more flavor, the more 'tar.' Except for Vantage.

You must know that Vantage cigarettes have a special filter which reduces 'tar' and nicotine without destroying flavor.

What you may not know is that Vantage is also available in menthol.

Not surprisingly, what separates Vantage Menthol from ordinary menthols is that Vantage Menthol gives you all the flavor you want, with a lot less of the 'tar' and the nicotine that you probably don't want.

Now Vantage Menthol is not the lowest 'tar' and nicotine menthol you'll find. It may well be the lowest one you'll enjoy smoking.

Since you're the best judge of what you like about menthol cigarettes, don't just take our word for it.

Try a pack of Vantage Menthol and then you'll know for sure.

STERLING SILVER CAMEOS ILLUSTRATED ACTUAL SIZE

Issued on the occasion of the 20th anniversary of John F. Kennedy's Pulitzer Prize winning book "Profiles in Courage."

A STRICTLY LIMITED EDITION.
LIMIT: ONE PROOF SET PER PERSON.

SUBSCRIPTIONS MUST BE POSTMARKED
BY MARCH 31, 1976.

Twenty years ago, a young U.S. Senator named John F. Kennedy wrote a book which he called "Profiles in Courage." In this book, he spoke eloquently of the courage and patriotism of a handful of Americans who–in the face of disastrous consequences to their lives and careers–stood firm in their convictions to do what was right for their country.

John F. Kennedy's "Profiles in Courage" inspired millions of men, women and children, and was so highly regarded in the literary world that it was awarded the coveted Pulitzer Prize.

Now, on the occasion of the 20th anniversary of publication of this extraordinary book, The Franklin Mint–America's largest and foremost private mint–is proud to announce the issuance of a very special commemorative. The Profiles in Courage Cameo Collection.

A unique tribute to the ideals of courage

This commemorative collection will take the form of nine finely sculptured portrait cameos, to be minted both in solid sterling silver and in 24 karat gold.

Each cameo will portray one of the great men of courage singled out by John F. Kennedy in his prize-winning book. Among them: John Quincy Adams, whose support of the embargo against Great Britain branded him a "deserter" by members of his own Federalist party in Massachusetts. Daniel Webster, who abandoned his only hope of becoming President of the United States by his stand on the extension of slavery. Thomas Hart Benton, who broke with his own party and his closest friends to support the Union. Edmund G. Ross, who sacrificed a brilliant political career to save President Andrew Johnson from certain impeachment. Robert A. Taft, who incurred the wrath of politicians and the public alike for his determined stand on the Nuremberg Trials.

The collection will also include a cameo portrait of John F. Kennedy himself, a man whose own courage in battle and in political life was demonstrated many times over during his brief lifetime.

Nine portrait cameos depicting men of remarkable dedication and personal courage–permanently commemorated in the enduring strength and beauty of precious metal.

Exquisitely detailed cameos

Each of the cameos in this collection will be totally faithful to the personality and character of the figure portrayed. The profile portrait will be created in bas-relief with meticulous attention to detail. Moreover, the cameo itself will be dome-shaped, adding to its beauty and uniqueness.

The master craftsmen of The Franklin Mint will strike these authentic portrait cameos in precious metal. Each finely sculptured cameo will be struck with the mint's distinctive Proof finish, so that the raised design stands out in bold frosted relief against a brilliantly polished background.

Minted in sterling silver and 24kt gold

The Profiles in Courage Cameo Collection will be minted in the subscriber's choice of either solid sterling silver or pure 24 karat gold. Each portrait cameo will measure 1¾ inches in height. The sterling silver Proof cameo will weigh 500 grains and is priced at $25. The 24 karat gold Proof cameo, because of the greater density of gold, will weigh at least 1,000 grains and is priced at $525. Each subscriber will receive, at no additional charge, a walnut-framed display plaque to protect and display the nine portrait cameos.

In addition, a special 20th anniversary edition of John F. Kennedy's prize winning book "Profiles in Courage" will be privately printed exclusively for individual subscribers to the collection. This volume, to be custom-bound in genuine leather and ornamented in gold, will carry a foreword written expressly for this 20th anniversary edition by Mrs. Rose Kennedy, the much-admired mother of the late President.

Issued in limited edition

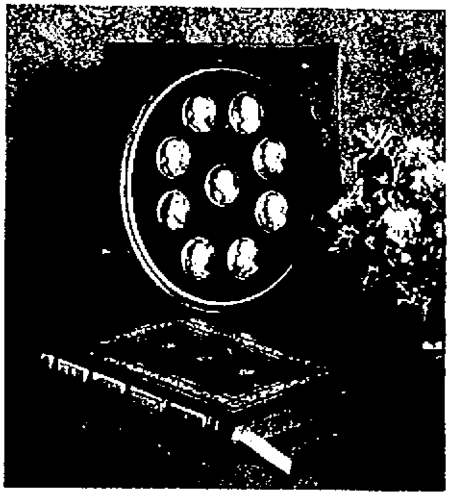
The collection will be issued in strictly limited edition–expressly for advance subscribers. Moreover, there is a limit of one collection per person. Thus, the total edition will be permanently limited to the exact number of subscribers whose applications are postmarked by the subscription deadline of March 31, 1976, plus one additional set for Mrs. Rose Kennedy.

To assure the rarity of this limited edition, the dies used to create the cameos will be destroyed when all Proof Sets have been sent to subscribers–and this collection will never be issued again.

Subscription Deadline: March 31, 1976

Because it is an official issue, an important historical commemorative for all Americans, and a medallic series of exceptional distinction–The Profiles in Courage Cameo Collection is certain to become a highly prized family treasure in years to come. One that you will gain great enjoyment and satisfaction from now, and later pass along with pride to your children and grandchildren.

Please remember that there will be only one edition of this official commemorative collection and that this is the only time you have the opportunity to acquire it. Mail the application below directly to The Franklin Mint, Franklin Center, Pennsylvania–and be sure it is postmarked by the subscription deadline of March 31, 1976.



A walnut-framed display plaque will be provided for protection and display of the complete collection. In addition, each subscriber will receive a special leather-bound 20th Anniversary Edition of "Profiles in Courage," with an introduction by Mrs. Rose Kennedy written expressly for this edition which will be privately published exclusively for subscribers to the collection.

How to Get (and Beat) the Odds on Your Life

by Lawrence Galton

SUMMIT, N.J.

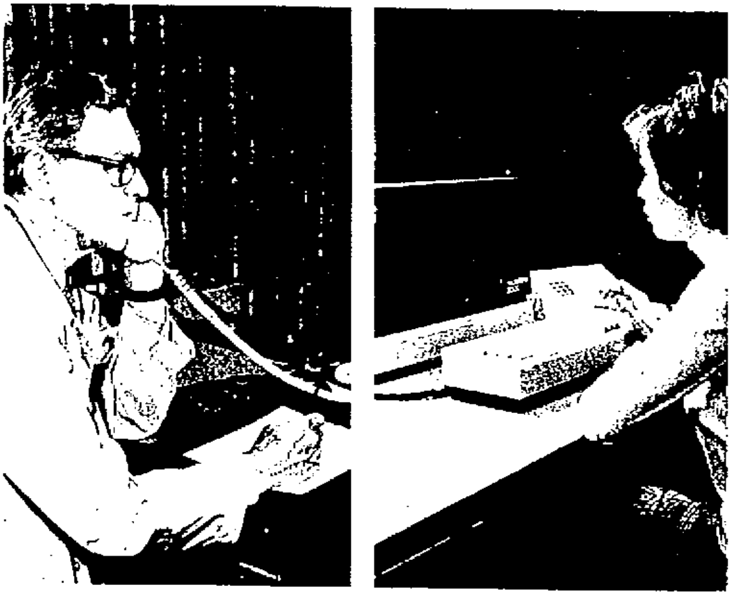
No matter where in the U.S. you live, you can now walk into your doctor's office and get something you couldn't get before: the odds on your life—your specific odds.

After checking you over, your physician can dial a toll-free telephone number to which he is privy and reach a special computer operator in Summit, N.J. Quickly, he can tick off such vital facts about you as age, sex, blood pressure and blood cholesterol level. Within seconds, he'll have a report of just how much you risk a stroke or heart attack within the next eight years.

Say, for example, you're a 40-year-old man, in apparent good health, free of symptoms, yet with a systolic blood pressure of 165 (somewhat high) and a blood cholesterol of 285 (also high).

Back from the computer will come this evaluation: You have 2.1 times the average risk of other men of your age of having a stroke or heart attack. In the next 8 years, your chances of facing such an episode are 9 out of 100, compared with 4 out of 100 for the average American man of 40.

And if the computer is asked, it can also instantly calculate how the odds would change if you lower your cholesterol or your blood pressure or do both. By lowering your blood pressure, you could reduce your risk almost in half—to 5 chances out of 100. By lowering your cholesterol, you could do the same. By doing both, you could cut your risk to 3 chances out of 100—less than average.



Thanks to a new program, a doctor (l) can call a computer operator who uses blood pressure, cholesterol level and other factors to calculate his patient's chances of suffering a stroke or heart attack, thus underlining the need for medical treatment.

Our No. 1 problem

The system, called "CARDIO-DIAL," developed and made available by the CIBA Pharmaceutical Co. in cooperation with the National Heart and Lung Institute, is expected to be of major importance in cutting the death and invalidism toll of our No. 1 health problem: cardiovascular disease.

Each year, more than a million heart attacks and over 600,000 coronary heart disease deaths are recorded in the U.S. Not only is coronary disease the most important cause of death; it's also the most important cause of disability in the prime of life.

Stroke, too, is both killer and crippler. It causes 200,000 deaths a year and many of its 1.75 million living victims have been left partly paralyzed or otherwise handicapped.

What's needed is an attack on the risk factors — the influences clearly shown to promote heart disease and stroke.

The basis for the CARDIO-DIAL system is the government's famed Framingham Study. Ever since the late 1940's, scientists have been following more than 5000 residents of this Massachusetts community. Healthy to begin with, some have experienced heart attacks or strokes.

The study has determined just what factors influenced the development of the serious, often deadly incidents.

The risk analyses supplied by CARDIO-DIAL are based on the masses of data from the Framingham Study. Using those data, the computer system can generate almost 9 million individual risk combinations.

But can risk really be predicted?

Yes. Heart attacks build over many years. The family physician, authorities say, should be able to pick out a high-risk heart attack population from his practice five to 10 years ahead.

How valid are the analyses offered by CARDIO-DIAL?

Testing the system

Before being made available nationally, the system was tested for several months by doctors in six states—Florida, Georgia, North and South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia. More than 2500 individual patient analyses were made.

Many doctors, rightfully skeptical at first, checked on the system by calling in facts about patients who had actually had heart attacks. A North Carolina physician, for example, called in the data on a 39-year-old man with very high blood pressure and an extremely elevated cholesterol level. To the satisfaction of the physician, the system indicated a risk 20 times greater than average, with great likelihood of an attack; the man had, indeed, died of an attack the week before.

In Virginia, when one physician was introduced to the system, he decided to put similar data about himself through, and the analysis indicated very high risk. Two weeks later, the doctor experienced a coronary.

The value of the CARDIO-DIAL system is expected to extend beyond prediction alone.

Because the factors that influence development of heart disease and stroke commonly operate silently, producing no symptoms, they very often get little or no attention and care.

Among the risk factors, high blood pressure has been shown by the Framingham Study and other studies to be especially important—the most common and most potent contributor to death. It affects at least 23 million Americans of all ages. But repeated studies have shown that half of those affected don't know they are, half of those who do know aren't getting treatment, and half of those getting treatment aren't getting adequate treatment, often for failure to continue treatment.

As things stand now, a recent analysis indicates, there will be almost 2 million excess deaths in the next 10 years in people aged 35 to 64 with untreated high blood pressure.

Yet CARDIO-DIAL, with its direct, individualized calculations of risk, could well help where booklets, pamphlets, lectures and other general educational efforts have failed.

Surprises specialists

Even knowledgeable physicians have been surprised by what the computer analyses show. During the early testing stages of the system, one of the country's most noted heart specialists, well aware of the effects of various risk factors, confessed that he was astonished when he got back CARDIO-DIAL analyses for some of his patients with two or more risk factors. Even when blood pressure elevation was only mild and blood cholesterol only slightly high, the total risk when the factors were combined was far greater than the specialist had realized.

Not only can a computer analysis, to begin with, bring home to a patient the importance of controlling whatever risk factors he may have. Repeated analyses can show how his chances of developing cardiovascular complications are being lowered as he works on the risk factors.

As one physician puts it: "The computer analyses back me up. Patients are impressed and motivated by the figures in black and white. And they're impressed and further motivated as the figures begin to change for the better with treatment."

The change in the odds when even a single risk factor is controlled can be striking.

Consider, for example, a 39-year-old woman, otherwise normal but with a systolic blood pressure of 170, giving her twice the average risk of a heart attack or stroke. Within a few weeks, as treatment brings the pressure down to 140, her risk is halved, reduced to normal average risk.

Time for a checkup

If you haven't had a physical checkup recently, you might well get one now and have your physician, while you're there, dial in for a computer analysis. Or if you know that your blood pressure or cholesterol is elevated or another risk factor is at work and you haven't done anything about it, you might well have your physician get such an analysis for you.

You'll have something more specific than ever before to go by—and, with repeated analyses as you take your medicine or do whatever else may be necessary, you're likely to be highly motivated to keep on because of your continuing sense of achievement.

Skier Lyndall Heyer, 1975 U.S. Junior National Slalom Champion, mixes a batch of granola.

skiER'S CRUNCHY CEREAL

by beth MERRIMAN

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Lyndall Heyer, 19, of Stowe, Vt., has been a member of the U.S. Ski Team since 1973. Among her triumphs was the coveted U.S. Junior National Slalom Championship at Whitefish, Mont., in 1975.

Health-conscious Lyndall has toured extensively with the women's slalom team and always travels with a supply of homemade bread and granola. "Proper nutrition is essential for the competitive skier," she says.

"It's important not to feel weighted down when racing," says Lyndall, "so I eat small amounts of dried and fresh fruit between runs." But off the slopes, Lyndall's favorite health food is her own crunchy granola, and here's her recipe:

lyndall heyer's granola

½ cup vegetable oil, butter or margarine
½ cup honey or maple syrup
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups rolled oats (quick or old-fashioned), uncooked
2 cups ready-to-serve whole wheat cereal flakes
1 cup sunflower seeds
¾ cup sesame seeds
1 cup raisins
½ cup chopped walnuts
½ cup flaked coconut

Heat oil, honey and vanilla in large saucepan or Dutch oven. Remove from heat. Add remaining ingredients; mix well. Spread in greased 13" x 9" baking pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 15 to 20 minutes or until golden. Cool and remove from pan. Makes about eight cups of granola-type cereal.

Chicken to be roasted will brown without fat, but the skin will be crisper if it is brushed with fat or oil before putting it in the oven. Some cooks prefer to use unsalted fat, claiming the skin will be more tender.

Helps Shrink Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues Due To Inflammation. Relieves Pain & Itch...

Gives prompt temporary relief in many cases from hemorrhoidal pain and burning itch in such tissues.

There's an exclusive formulation which actually helps shrink the painful swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by infection. In many cases the first applications give prompt, temporary relief from itching and pain in hemorrhoidal tissues.

The sufferer first notices relief from such painful discomfort. Then this medication helps to gently reduce swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues. Tests conducted by doctors on hundreds of patients in New York City, Washington, D.C., and at a Midwest Medical Center showed this to be true in many cases.

The medication used by doctors in these tests was Preparation H®—the same exclusive formula you can buy at any drug counter without a prescription. Preparation H also lubricates the affected area to protect the inflamed, irritated surface and so helps make regularity more comfortable.

There is no other formula like Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

MY FAVORITE JOKES

by ELAYNE BOOSLER

EDITOR'S NOTE: Elayne Boosler recalls some of the landmarks in her life. "I started talking really late, 2 years old. I walked even later. When I finally spoke, though, it was a full sentence. I said: 'Somebody teach me how to walk.' I suffered my first disappointment at the age of 4 when someone told me that a moth wasn't a butterfly."

Elayne has entertained at New York's Improvisation, Catch A Rising Star, and Pip's in Brooklyn, and she's appeared on the Griffin, Douglas and Cosell shows. About the Cosell show she says, "It was really exciting doing a live TV show. As a gift they gave me an album of Howard singing. I play it when I'm vacuuming." Despite the glamour of the show business world, Elayne says: "Tell them my goal is to own land."

Here is some more of Elayne Boosler's comic world:

There's a park across the street and I jog around it. Bums live in the park and they don't know what jogging is. The other day I was on my third lap and this drunk stood up and yelled: "Come over here, we'll hide ya!"

I've never had luck with pets. I once bought a discount cat, it was 10 percent off because it only came with five lives.

●

We took my dog to a dog psychiatrist because he was very depressed. All week the only thing he would do was play dead. The psychiatrist said the dog was insecure because he didn't know who his parents were. I said: "No dog knows who his parents are." He said: "I know, I make a fortune."

●

In New York, now that the phone company is charging for information, they give you more information. I called the operator for a phone number and after she gave it to me she told me she's going out with my boyfriend.

As I mature my idols change. I used to be in love with Fred Flintstone, but the magic is gone. I found out he uses a stunt man.

Sometimes it's hard living up to your parents' expectations. My parents wanted twins. I didn't want to let them down so I dressed alike. I went everywhere together.

My uncle was the ultimate loser. He committed suicide, got reincarnated and came back as himself.

●

I never know how to break up with people. I broke up with someone at a Halloween party. He was dressed as a turtle—I didn't know how to tell him—so I turned him on his back and left.

I think I went out with a married man once. He told me he was going to take me out for this big candlelight dinner and dancing—said he'd pick me up at noon.

●

I get insecure when I go to the beach with a guy and he takes off his shirt and he has 95 names tattooed inside a heart. He showed me the space he was saving for my name. It was outside the heart with a little asterisk.

●

Sometimes you meet crazy people on the beach. This guy came up and offered to spread suntan lotion on my back with a floor polisher.

I once read an article, "How to Fool Him and Look 10 Pounds Thinner Through Optical Illusion." No. 1: Wear clothes that blend into your environment. If you have a red velvet couch, wear a red velvet dress so he won't know where you start and the couch ends. I almost killed myself, I have wicker furniture! No. 2: If you're size 20, buy a size 7 bikini and hang it up where he can see it. My date looked at it and said: "Where's your sister?"

●

Taxes for single people are unbelievable. Last year was the first time I came out ahead. I kept what I would have paid in taxes and sent them my salary.

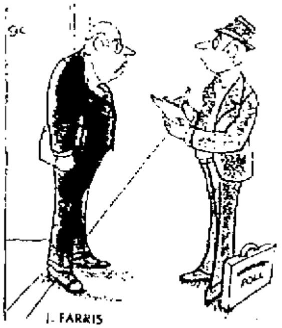
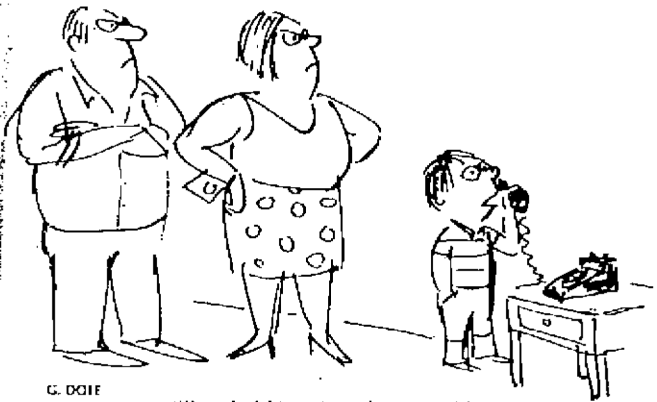
My doorman's 85 years old. He protects the whole building. I tested him once. I snuck up behind him and said in a low voice: "Stick 'em up." He said: "Don't shoot, I'll tell you where the rich ones live."

IT'S TO LAUGH

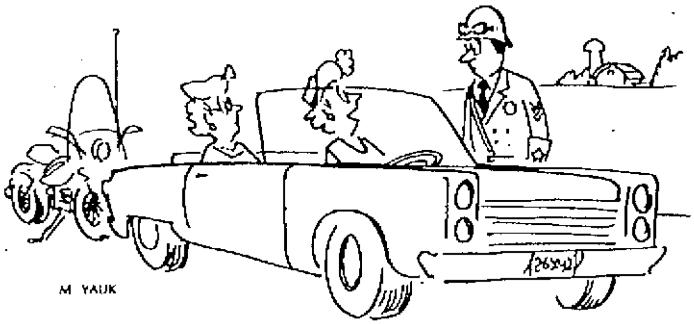


"Let me answer your question with a question. Why don't you mind your own business?"



"I'm afraid I can't make it, Freddie—I'm having a session with my encounter group."

"If you don't get struck by lightning, bring home a loaf of bread."



"I'll show you my driving license if you promise not to look at the year of my birth."

Filters Fall Short.

Researchers create 'Enriched Flavor'™ for taste of new low tar MERIT after disappointing results with special filters.

After countless efforts at designing special "low tar, good taste" filters, Philip Morris—like most others—had achieved only marginal results.

Filters are good for filtering, not for giving taste to a cigarette.

Tobacco gives taste to a cigarette. And the more tobacco taste that's filtered out in the form of tar, the less taste a cigarette will deliver.

That's the conclusion that led us to the business end of smoking. The tobacco end. And a remarkable new flavor discovery called 'Enriched Flavor.'

The new cigarette with 'Enriched Flavor' is MERIT.

It delivers only 9 mg. of tar—less than 98% of all cigarettes being sold today.

Yet 'Enriched Flavor' MERIT delivers the taste of cigarettes having more tar. Up to 60% more tar.

If you smoke, you'll be interested.

Smokers Report MERIT Delivers More Taste

9 mg. tar MERIT was taste-tested against five current leading low tar cigarette brands ranging from 11 mg. to 15 mg. tar.

Thousands of filter smokers were involved, smokers like yourself, all tested at home.*

Even if the cigarette tested had 60% more tar, a significant majority of all smokers tested reported new 'Enriched Flavor' MERIT delivered more taste.

Repeat: delivered more taste.

In similar tests against 11 mg. to 15 mg. menthol brands, 9 mg. tar MERIT MENTHOL performed strongly too, delivering as much—or more—taste than the higher tar brands tested.

You've been smoking "low tar, good taste" claims long enough. Now you've got the cigarette.

MERIT. Unprecedented flavor at 9 mg. tar.

The Soviet supersonic transport, designed by Aleksei Tupolev, is much like the Anglo-French Concorde that was granted limited landing rights in the U.S., unleashing vocal opposition from environmentalists. So far the Russians fly the plane only domestically but hope to fly it here. It is 213 feet long with a 91-foot wingspan.

Airplane Designer Aleksei Tupolev
Russia's Supersonic Man

by George Michaelson

Tupolev and stewardess: He says the supersonic transports will find greater acceptance in time but will never replace all other commercial airplanes.

DOMODEDOVO AIRPORT, USSR.

Aleksei Tupolev would like to travel to America—in 3½ hours.

The stout, buoyant Russian is chief designer of the new Soviet supersonic jet, the TU-144 (TU for Tupolev). And now that the Franco-British Concorde has been granted limited landing rights in the U.S., he is hopeful that his own creation, nicknamed the "Konkordski," will be allowed to make the 3½-hour trip from Moscow to New York.

"The world is getting smaller and our two countries are getting friendlier," said Tupolev as we sat in the cabin of a TU-144 drinking vodka. "So who knows? Maybe someday I'll have the pleasure of making a trip to your country!" With that, he drank a toast to his future visit.

Just how long it will take for the "Konkordski" to get landing rights in the U.S. remains to be seen. But what has now become likely is that a new era of jet travel may be upon us. And for all his camaraderie, Comrade Tupolev is well aware that his TU-144 is in hot competition with the capitalist-made Concorde. (The Soviets are also aware that in the U.S., Boeing has never fully stopped its program to develop a supersonic aircraft, despite Congress' 1971 decision to cut off federal support.)

At present, it is a point of pride for the Russians that while work on the TU-144 began a year or two later than work on the Concorde, they undertook the first regular commercial flights—a weekly freight route that began this past December between Moscow and Alma-Ata, a city near the Chinese border. Thus, they nosed out the Concorde, which began regular passenger flights in January.

His father's footsteps

For the 50-year-old Tupolev—whose father, Andrei, designed the first Soviet jet, the TU-104—competition between the two supersonics has its beneficial aspects, apart from propaganda value. "It keeps us both on our toes," he said. "We need to learn from each other. You see, this era of the supersonics is just beginning. You might say that both of us are in the position of new parents, each with our supersonic babes; and they are very pesky, excitable new babes. So it is important that we watch each other, even openly exchange notes, as we now do. This way, we make sure that we each raise our young ones properly; maybe a little different, but both quite proper, we hope."

At this point, both of the "new babes" do look and behave rather alike. They are both sleek, pointy-beaked and fan-winged; they cruise at about the same speed (1400 mph) and altitude (10-12 miles); the Concorde's range is 3500 miles, the Konkordski's 4000; the Concorde carries 100 passengers, the Konkordski 140, and both can be flown economically for long distances only (at least 1500 miles).

There are, though, some important design differences: For example, the TU-144 has small forewings or "moustaches" not present on the Concorde, and its engines are mounted centrally, not on the wings. "Such features," said Tupolev, "make the TU-144 behave slightly different from its cousin."

Parent and child

Which behaves better? we asked. "A tough question, very tough . . .," answered Tupolev, pausing as he stared out of the cabin window at a TU-104 which was just taking off on the adjacent runway. "Well, my friend, let me put it this way. There is a Russian expression which, freely translated, says: 'Every parent is bound to favor his own child.' But, in this case, as the parent, I want to add that I am also very fond of our Concorde nephew."

One group, however, that has no particular affection for the Konkordski, or for the Concorde either, is the Soviet "environmentalist" critics (generally, scientists). And while far less vocal than their counterparts in the West, they nonetheless have raised similar fears about noise pollution and about the TU-144's effect on the ozone layer that screens the earth from an excess of the sun's ultraviolet rays.

Pilot Ivan Vedernikov (l) and test pilot Eduard Elyan in the cockpit of Soviet SST: Crew is two pilots, a flight engineer and an auxiliary pilot.

SUPERSONIC CONTINUED

Asked about such criticism, Tupolev responded: "Frankly, there is some truth to our critics' arguments. The supersonic requires a more powerful engine, which makes it somewhat noisier than subsonic jets; and there is an effect on the ozone layer, though this also, to some degree, is true of the subsonics.

"So what do we do about it? In our desire not to harm the environment do we, as some critics suggest, abandon the supersonic? I don't think so. Look, in order to preserve nature, we do not need to stop technological progress. We do not need to give up our machines and go back to being cavemen, or climb trees to pluck bananas; or better yet, in order not to disturb the trees, wait until the bananas fall.

Needed: time and patience

"No, the way we have to cope with this," he continued, "is to improve our machines. And in the case of the supersonic, the answer lies in improving the engine design. I am sure we can do it. But to work out all the so-called 'bugs,' it will take time and a little patience—hopefully, on the part of our critics, too—because in this field, there is simply no way of coming up with a finished product overnight."

Evidently not. For it has now been about a dozen years since work on the Konkordski began. And as with the Concorde, the Soviets have test-flown their supersonic literally thousands of hours in preparation for their commercial flights.

According to Tupolev, the real heroes in the development of the supersonic are the test pilots who have had the hazardous job of figuring out the aircraft's "bugs"—in the air. Several of these men, who began testing the plane back in 1968, are no longer alive. And Tupolev, himself, was present at the 1973 Paris Air Show, when a TU-144 crashed and cost the lives of all the crew members.

A few brave men

"Today we finally have an airworthy plane," said Tupolev. "And we have it largely as a result of these brave men, men like Eduard Elyan . . ." Pausing, Tupolev called down the aisle to a squat, middle-aged test pilot who wears on his lapel the red-star, "Hero-of-the-Soviet-Union" medallion — an honor which, in this case, is given to pilots who have survived three or more crashes or near-misses. "This man was the first to take the TU-144 up," announced Tupolev, lifting a glass of vodka in the pilot's direction. "And he is still at it today, still helping us improve our aircraft."

Elyan smiled broadly and then went on to explain to his "guest from America" that the TU-144 was truly a safe aircraft. "I tell you this not simply because I am in love with this plane, which I am," said Elyan, "but because it is now a demonstrated fact that this is one of the easiest-to-handle, safest aircrafts around. And how does it fly? Smooth as butter, with very few bumps and turbulence. So, actually, the passenger is not even aware that he is in such a swift, powerful plane. . . ."

"Except during take-off," interrupted Tupolev. "Then you feel that you are in something a little different." The pilot nodded, and Tupolev continued, winking at us as if he were about to tell a joke: "This take-off with such sudden acceleration is the kind of experience that, well, I should think women will probably love it: it sort of pushes you tightly back in the seat, and you feel the power of the plane and its terrific strength. But then you are off, and it is like being in any other plane, though smoother, more relaxing, and a hell of a lot quicker and more convenient."

Passenger flights planned

As things now stand, the Russians expect to open their first passenger routes later this year—an occasion that evidently is eagerly awaited by some. As Ivan Vedernikov, the Soviet pilot who currently flies the 1930-mile freight route between Moscow and Alma-Ata, told us: "People in Alma-Ata come up to me in the street and ask, 'How much longer is it going to be before we get to try this one out?' They can't quite believe how fast the supersonic flies, and really when you think of it, it is an amazing thing: after all, we leave Alma-Ata at 4 p.m. local time and arrive in Moscow at 3 p.m. local time—in other words, an hour before we left!"

Besides the Alma-Ata run, Tupolev said the Soviets are planning to begin a number of other domestic routes. And given the vastness of the Soviet Union (6000 miles across), the TU-144 is expected to be used primarily as a domestic aircraft; for the time being, some 10 Konkordskis will do the job.

And what about the future? "Very hard to predict . . .," said Tupolev. "In life, it seldom happens that the new completely takes the place of the old. Look, it is now 20 years since my father's TU-104 first began our jet service, and still we find ourselves using propeller planes; it's the same in your country, too. So, even if we develop a supersonic jet that can be flown economically on short as well as long routes, I do not expect them to replace subsonic jets—never.

What the future holds

"Still, I think our new supersonic babes have a good and interesting future. Maybe they'll be a little slow to grow in the beginning, but they should have a lusty adolescence and even fuller adulthood: the same for our TU-144, the Concorde, and — who knows? — perhaps even an American supersonic before long, also."

Then, smiling broadly and putting on his heavy Russian coat so that we could go outside and take a photo of him in front of his TU-144, he concluded: "Yes, someday perhaps we'll all be in this business together. And then, I hope, I'll finally get to come to your country . . . yes, of course, in $3\frac{1}{2}$ hours."

PAINFUL ELIMINATION?

Many people have experienced painful elimination. And many have come to accept this as if it were natural. But there's nothing natural about it.

No matter what your age, you should have comfortable elimination.

And SERUTAN makes this possible.
